'Courageous' Wow $22,000 May Set Pittsburgh Record;

Pittsburgh, June 22.

Give downtown Pittsburgh one smash attraction and others will benefit, too. That's been proven in the past and is so again this week. Lure is 'Captains Courageous,' at the Penn, heading that house for its biggest week since 'San Francisco.' Cinch to stick around for another week, moving over to the Warner to top off the fortnight. Similar move with 'Day at the Races' is giving the Warner a sock stanza, but presenting a booking jam.

Penn (Loew's-UA) (3,300; 25-35-50)—'Captains Courageous' (MG). Cricks are still tossing their hats in the air and the paying public is backing 'em up. Looks like $22,000 or slightly better and moves to the Warner Friday (25) for another week. Last week, 'Day at Races' (MG) another sock, winding up just short of $21,000.

Warner (WB) (2,000; 25-35-50)—'Day at Races' (MG). Marx Bros. comedy brought here for second downtown week and has plenty of stuff left. Heading for a mark midway between $7,000 and $8,000, real money.

EDUCATIONAL

NOT THE FIRST but the most grandiose gesture of the motion picture industry toward the institution of education is announced in the news pages of this issue of Motion Picture Herald.

This time it brings in the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., the impressive name of Rockefeller, and a whole galaxy of educational personages.

The story of the day has been in the making, and teetering on the edge of release these many months, with back of it debates, doubtings, questionings about policy and policies. These have been the natural and inevitable concerns, so long held, by the amusement industry which has been the while in substantially exclusive possession of the tools and technology of the motion picture.

There has been a fear, not too frankly expressed, that if the camera and screen were permitted to escape to other interests, destructive competition would result.

THE organized motion picture industry has worried a lot about advertising pictures, has tried them,—and an advertising and commercial picture industry has grown-up, anyway, outside. Just incidentally more than five thousand theatres are now showing commercial pictures, ranging from real program units to flashes.

"Non-theatrical" has been another not so very frankly discussed bugaboo, sometimes a source of petty revenues, more often a source of bad bookkeeping and controversy of a minor order.

At the moment it would seem, if announcements are to be taken at par, that there is a movement to go "non-theatrical" in a big, big way, but ever with a canny eye to the preservation of the theatrical, the amusement business.

It chances, from our slightly prejudiced position, that we favor the amusement business.

It would possibly be a sort of justice, if we are to compete with the sports amusements institution and stadia of the universities and colleges, that we should go into the screen text book business.

If Yale, Harvard, Princeton and Notre Dame are to sell seats for gridiron star performances, maybe we ought to get out textbooks in film on analytical geometry, history, and how a Greek root grows.

MEANWHILE it would seem that, with what one hears from the theatres, the pleas of the showmen, perhaps the motion picture industry has enough to do to be really entertaining.

The question of how rapidly the motion picture is made a general instrument of expression and communication in art, education, religion, and general business is not at all involved with what the amusement industry does. That all pertains to the makers of machinery and the merchandisers of methods.

Ever the theatre is being confused with the tools it uses.

The motion picture is a method of saying things. If pictures are entertainment they may belong to the show business.

That the motion picture amusement industry, with its many and tremendously complicated, social, economic, artistic and international political problems, should add the problems of the tradition laden and complicated world of education seems in the broad general nature of unnecessary. ....

Education is a very big business—and another business.

CENSORSHIP IS OUTSIDE

EXTENSIVE misuse of the word censorship and a great deal of muddy thinking about censorship is to be observed in the public press of late, especially in discussions of the non-circulation of pictures of the Windsor-Warfield wedding in Britain, and of the Chicago steel strike riot in the United States.

"In neither case is official censorship involved," remarks the New York World-Telegram, under a heading of "Unofficial Censors." It continues, "British film companies acted voluntarily in keeping the Duke's wedding off British screens, as did an American film company in holding that the attack by Chicago police on pickets at a Republic steel plant might cause trouble if shown in this country . . . unofficial censorship can be as effective as the official variety . . . the unofficial censors, including not only the managers of film companies but also the directors of radio stations and the editors of newspapers ought to feel a terrible sense of responsibility. . . ."

Yes. And they should not be calling it censorship when they edit.

PERHAPS a psychologist is entitled to use the term censorship for inhibiting decisions within the mind, but for what the word means in general acceptance it can have no proper application to processes of self-regulation.

No editor, deciding to print this and not print that considers himself engaged in acts of censorship. Nor is he a censor when he lays a heavy pencil over the exuberations of some untrammeled writer of copy or headline. His operations are commonly considered as pertaining to policy.

The motion picture maker, when he decides to issue or not to issue a picture, or any part of a picture, is in the same status as the editor. The picture maker also has considerations of policy.

Also when the newspapers hold a meeting and decide what they are going to do about this and that, as for instance the publication of racing returns and the like, they are not charged with adoption of that hated process called censorship.

IT is also to be observed that when the makers of motion pictures assemble and agree on such a device in their common interest as the controls of the Production Code Administration that is also not censorship—although the newspaper and periodical press is practically unanimous in calling it "Hays office censorship." The press has been encouraged in that most considerably by the pratings of Hollywood writers, themselves in the service of the motion picture, irked at the necessity of substituting skill for smut in their quest of laughs and punches.

The difference, in the press and on the screen, between editing and censorship, is quite as distinct as between housekeeping and a raid by the Board of Health.

It is when the business of expression is not permitted to, or cannot, attend to its own business that we have censorship.

This Week

RAPPROACHEMENT between education, progressive and otherwise, and the motion picture industry, long an object of great desire by a minority in both fields, appeared close to actuality when a plan by which films will be supplied to schools as supplementary textbooks was announced. Columbia brought a convention cycle to a close with publication of a program of 62 features. Allied States Association, prompted by lack of response to its invitation for a conference on trade practices, proclaimed its intention of continuing to seek legislative redress and the Ohio unit of the organization sponsored a meeting in Washington to protest actions of a particular distributor. Film and radio officialdom was startled by publication of a confidential report on television, prepared solely for high executives' ears, which recommended purchase by motion picture interests of an existing broadcasting network or the creation of a new one in order to be prepared to profit from the new field. Shirley Temple celebrated the close of school with a premiere and her first radio broadcast.

Carriers' Rates

Guy K. Stewart of the National Film Carriers Association and Edward G. Levy, general counsel for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, appeared before a special committee of the Interstate Commerce Commission to oppose any changes in regulations concerning payment for services rendered by motor carriers. The proposed regulation would require motor carriers to submit bills within five days after rendering service and would require payment within eight days after receipt of bills.

Details of the objections to the proposal are published on page 15.

Richey Resigns

H. M. Richey, for years a leader in Allied States Association and general manager of Allied Theatres of Michigan, resigned his post in the Michigan unit on Wednesday to become director of theatre operations and public relations of Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, a booking and buying combination of 90 theatres. President Fred De Lodder of Michigan Allied was among 55 theatre members who also resigned. The allied unit will continue, however.

Fight to a Finish

British independents—exhibitors, distributors and producers are ready for a finish fight against the government's new quota proposals, claiming that small companies will become extinct as a result of the draft's so-called "cost clause."

Bruce Allan describes the situation in England on page 31.

Education

Departing from the entertainment field which has been its sole consideration, the industry through the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., announced that official attention will be paid to the supplying of educational films for schools, to be used as supplementary textbooks. A $75,000 grant from the Rockefeller Foundation and $50,000 appropriated by the MPPDA are prominent features of the preliminary plans.

Ramifications of the project are outlined and detailed on page 12.

Shirley at Eight

Shirley Temple, eight years old last April, gave the final touch of showmanship to what would otherwise have been another Hollywood premiere when she was lifted to a microphone in the lobby of the Carthay Circle theatre just before the first showing of her latest picture, "Wee Willie Winkie," last Friday.

The opening is duly reported on page 30, a picture is on page 10 and the film is reviewed on page 44.

Recommended

Because it is better equipped in personnel and experience than any other agency including radio to produce television programs and because its facilities are important to the development of that field the motion picture industry should acquire control of a radio broadcasting network so as to be prepared to profit as it should from television if and when. Such was the chief recommendation of a confidential report and survey of television prepared by A. Mortimer Prall for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Mr. Prall's views, as published in an unofficial release of the report, are quoted at length on page 17.

Plan Abandoned

Paramount stockholders, in an adjourned session of their annual meeting, abandoned a proposed plan to increase the company's authorized common stock to 6,000,000 shares from 4,500,000 shares. The proxy committee, for the second time, failed to muster two-thirds of the voting stock. Paramount directors also met and they reelected all officers and executives in addition to accepting the resignation of H. A. Fortington, a director and former chairman of the executive committee.

Details of both sessions are on page 16.

'Unethical'

A call for a strike among exhibitors against Paramount featured a meeting held in Washington Tuesday as a protest against the distributing company's alleged unfair selling plan for 1937-38. P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, issued the plea and charged the company was guilty of "unfair, indecent and unethical business practices." He said his charges were based on the distributor's withdrawal of six pictures which were promised for the 1936-37 program. The features now have been placed on the 1937-38 program, he asserted.

A report of the protest session is on page 29.

No Answer

Failure of all but one distributing company to accept an invitation sent out by Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors to a round table conference on trade practices prompted W. A. Steffes, chairman of the organization's national defense committee, to proclaim that Allied would "rededicate itself with purposeful single-mindedness to its program of authorship and championing of trade reform legislation."

Mr. Steffes is quoted in full on page 29.

Triple Weapon

Triple features have been adopted in Chicago by exhibitors opposed to the double bill policy of the Balaban & Katz circuit as a weapon more powerful, presumably, than a two-edged sword. Public reaction, they hope, will bring a return to the single picture with shorts.

The Chicago development and reports of sporadic tests of singles elsewhere are on page 28.

$50,000 Bank Night

Following the charges hurled last week at Loew's, Inc., for returning chance games to its neighborhood theatres, the Independent Theatre Owners Association in New York this week was reported ready to inaugurate a huge $50,000 Bank Night of its own in retaliation. All the member theatres of the association would take part in the drawing.

Details of this, and of the national chance game situation, are found in the story on page 26.

Denouncement

Previews of feature pictures over national radio networks before their release are "ruinous to the industry," Edward Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, told the Southeastern Theatre Owners' Association in Birmingham. A committee of Mr. Kuykendall's organization has been studying the problem of screen radio relations.

An account of the meeting and further quotations from the MPTOA leader are on page 30.

Answering Attacks

The opposition to the proposed plan of reorganization of RKO, drawn up by the Atlas Corporation, was attacked this week before Special Master George W. Alger in New York by H. C. Rickaby, attorney for the Atlas Corporation, as coming from an "insignificant minority." Mr. Rickaby said the plan was fair, equitable and feasible.

Columbia

Columbia, holding its first convention in Los Angeles since 1929, announced a program of 62 feature length productions, 126 short subjects and four serials this week. More than 250 home offiice executives and sales representatives from the field gathered in the Ambassador Hotel for the sessions.

The product is detailed on page 52.

"Just a Mistake"

Japan has not entered into any alliance with Germany to fight Hollywood product, Nagamasa Kawakita, Japanese distributor, said, adding that a report of an Italo-German-Japan film bloc was "just a mistake." Mr. Kawakita also said he hopes some day to produce pictures jointly with American producers. He is negotiating for distribution of "New Earth," which was made in Japan with a German director.

Additional details about the "mistake" are on page 32.

Loew Partners

Loew's, Inc., this week, was reported renewing two partnership deals, in St. Louis and Providence, R. I., under which the circuit would acquire a 50 per cent interest in the houses involved and thus enable it to have additional playing time on its socalled "big" pictures. At the same time, the circuit bought the land rights to the Capitol on Broadway for $1,500,000 and will remodel the house.

Tax Extended

The extension of the present admission tax, for two years, was voted as expected by the Senate in Washington when it rejected a proposed amendment by the Finance Committee, which wanted to limit the socalled nuisance taxes for only half that period. At the same time, in Connecticut, St. Louis, Georgia and Philadelphia legislative matters of interest to exhibitors were in the limelight.

See story on page 26.

Deficiency

The Federal Government assiduously and in public studying income tax returns let it be known that persons in the motion picture industry are being dunned for tax deficiencies which, it was claimed, aggregate $1,000,000. Bing Crosby, Ltd., the estate of Will Rogers, and others were prominently named.

The Treasury Department's claims are ilsted on page 15.

Bargaining

Distributors and exchange union representatives continued amicable discussions of wage and hour agreements and labor leaders, encouraged by success in that field, turned their attention to theatre employee organizations which was expected to offer greater difficulty, chiefly because of its magnitude.

Collective bargaining reports and further news of the ubiquitous unions and guilds are found on page 14.

Franco-German

A motion picture trade agreement between France and Germany, in effect for one year, has been renewed for an equal period with each country retaining the privilege of withdrawing after six months. Under its terms the German Government promises to assist in the importattion of French films to the Reich and their sale and distribution.

An account of the renewal is on page 13. and a further report that the French Quota provisions have been renewed is on page 15.

Damage Suit

Already seeking injunctions against seven distributing companies and two executives of Saenger Theatres Corporation on charges of conspiracy, George Fuller, exhibitor of Pensacola, Fla., instituted a $100,000 damage suit Tuesday against the same defendants, under the triple damage clause of the Sherman-Clayton acts. Mr. Fuller contends the alleged conspiracy by the defendants prevented him from getting films, forced him to close two houses and prevented him from opening another.

This Week in Pictures

DARRYL F. ZANUCK, production chief of Twentieth Century-Fox, escorted his wife to the opening of Shirley Temple's latest, "Wee Willie Winkie," at the Carthay Circle, Hollywood. The premiere had more than the usual complement of crowds, lights, stars and noise but its chief claim to distinction was Miss Temple's first introduction to a radio microphone. The eight-year-old star is shown (left) as she was introduced to the broadcast audience by Eddie Cantor. Shirley told the world it was a big day for her not only because of the premiere but because "School's out!"

Delegates to the Columbia convention in Los Angeles this week were met at the station by Harry Cohn, president and production executive, and Jack Cohn, vice-president, who flew from New York (front and center). Other executives recognizable in the first row are Irving Briskin, Al Seligman, Louis Rosenfeld, Tim O'Toole, Joe Seidelman, Joe Friedman, Abe Montague, Carl Shalit, Rube Jackter, Joe McConville, Sam Galanty, Lou Astor, Jerry Safron and Harry Weiner.

MPPDA, EDUCATORS OFFER PLAN FOR SCHOOL FILMS

Rockefeller Grant and Industry Appropriation Is Paying For Exploration of Educational Film Field As a New Market

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The motion picture industry, after 35 years of concentrating on product for entertainment alone, officially announced on Thursday its entrance into the educational films field, to supply films on the wholesale to classrooms, in the manner that the textbook publishers now furnish the present media for teaching and learning.

The project contemplates that films will be made available by the majors and evaluated by educators.

A $75,000 Rockefeller grant and a $50,000 Hays organization appropriation is paying for an exploration of the field.

The plan, in work since last November, was created by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and some educators, and was disclosed at the convention in Detroit of the National Educational Association, by Dr. Mark A. May, director, Institute of Human Relations of Yale University, who is working with the Hays organization on the project.

Preliminary studies—more frequently known as tablecloth arithmetic—place the potential annual gross film rentals from schools at $108,000,000, and net profits at $80,000,000, and an additional $70,000,000 in total projection equipment sales for manufacturers—if and when an anticipated 200,000 schools are equipped.

The Hays organization has set up headquarters at 1600 Broadway, New York, for a group of educators who have started reviewing all non-current short product of MGM, Paramount, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox and Educational, United Artists, Universal and Warner Brothers—Columbia is not, at this time, participating. Selected films are being classified as to subject matter.

In addition, a board of educators, which Dr. May says is acting voluntarily, proposes to advise the producer-distributors on new production of films for schools. This board is composed of Isaiah Bowman, president, Johns Hopkins University; Edmund E. Day, president-elect, Cornell University; Frederick H. Baer, superintendent, Bronxville Public Schools; Karl T. Compton, president, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Royal B. Farnum, executive vice-president, Rhode Island School of Design; Jay B. Nash, professor of education, New York University; Mrs. Bess B. Lane, New York Ethical Culture School; Dr. Paul B. Mann, New York City Public Schools; Professor Karl W. Bigelow, Teachers' College, Columbia University; Dr. Alice Keliher, Commission on Human Relations, Progressive Education Association; Dr. James Mursell, Teachers' College, Columbia; Dr. Dana Jackson, head of the Department of Chemical Engineering, Columbia University; and, Dr. May.

It is intended that the source of supply shall be the non-current shorts dating back to the beginning of sound in 1926, which the distributors have promised to make available; short subjects cut from non-current features; the pedagogic films now available through Eastman Kodak, Electrical Research Products and such other companies, which for years have had an eye on developing the field for their own products; and, it is hoped, some new production undertaken by the producer-distributors for the specific use of the classroom.

UNIVERSITY SAYS 8,806 SCHOOLS USING PICTURES

Education throughout the United States is going "movie" so steadily that at the present time audio-visual education is employed in 8,806 school systems in the 48 states, officials of the University of California report. California, with a school population of 1,551,510, possesses and uses 849 motion picture projectors. It ranks as the third highest in the union in this respect. New York is first, with a school population of 1,885,207, and 1,298 projectors. Pennsylvania is the second ranking state with 958 projectors for a school population of 1,498,606.

As for educational films in the new system, Pennsylvania leads with 8,864, and New York comes next with 5,846 films. California ranks third with more than 5,000 films, while the University of California itself has a library of more than 5,000 pictures that are available to schools in the state.

The board of educators will return the films after their evaluation, and a contemplated centralized joint distribution system will undertake the selling and servicing. The MPPDA and member companies have not determined the nature of the physical construction of the distribution system. They predict, however, that several hundred small offices will be required, and that profits and expenses will be shared proportionately according to the demands for an individual distributor's product. The more optimistic sponsors see a nationwide exchange system of 500 branches, with all collections going to headquarters in New York to avoid the expenses of local bookkeeping.

Finances for the exploratory work came from a $75,000 grant made by the Rockefeller Foundation and a $50,000 appropriation from the MPPDA. Several hundreds of thousands of dollars are said to be still needed to complete the reviewing and cataloguing of films, and in this connection the Rockefeller Foundation and the Andrew Carnegie Foundation have been mentioned optimistically.

New production by the companies is, of course, optional, but, a Hays organization committee composed of Harry M. Warner, president, Warner Brothers; Stanton Griffis, executive committee chairman, Paramount Pictures, and E. W. Hammons, president, Educational Pictures, has been appointed to study the field.

An MPPDA representative in the plan brought in the tale that one of the majors might eventually develop the extraordinary sum of $20,000,000 for an educational films business of its own.

Warners are said to be already planning production of seven school subjects, and are said to have decided a year ago that they would one day have an educational films library of 1,000 subjects.

Mr. Hammons now is studying the future of the business for his company—named "Educational" so long ago.

Paramount is said to have received encouraging results in a test with a short, "Spirit of the Plains," which it produced last year with excerpts from "Covered Wagon," "Thundering Herd" and its "Plainsman."

That the trend toward films in the classroom is recognized by the press has been advanced in support of the new project by its sponsors, who cite the Hearst editorial: "Talking pictures in schools means a complete revolution that is a tremendous advance on anything that has gone before," and the opinion of the magazine "Today": "Films have entered the classrooms to stay."

Dr. May, in announcing the project at the NEA convention, and others in the MPPDA working on the development, have cited various reasons for the lack of progress heretofore in educational films. They claim they have all the answers and solutions, too, including an economically purchaseable and readily operated 16 mm. projector—16 mm. has been decided as the official school film width—and proper systems for wholesale reduction of 35 mm. film to 16 mm.

Manufacturers to Participate

Some of those in the plan have even gone so far as to estimate that the projector sale price of $350 would give the manufacturer a $100 net profit, which, on the optimistically anticipated sale of 200,000 machines among America's 278,547 schools, would bring a gross of $70,000,000 and a net of $20,000,000.

Principal equipment manufacturers who are likely to participate in any new school business are Electrical Research Products, RCA Photophone, International Projector, De Vry, Victor Animatograph, Pacent Engineering, Holmes and Pacent Engineering. They have 16 mm. machines suitable for the purpose, and Erpi, six years ago, reputedly spent $2,000,000 making school films to create a market.

Those directly connected with the present project feel confident that the manufacturers will be generous in supporting the development, perhaps financially, and at least in credit to the schools on their equipments.

More Figuring on Income

Estimates have been made that on the basis of the nominal rental price of $1.50 per reel, each school would take 10 reels per week, for 36 weeks—the average school year—and pay the distributors $540 yearly. Distribution costs reputedly would run to $11,300,000; production costs for 360 new reels, at $10,000 per reel, to $3,600,000, and the cost of prints—$6 per print for 4,000 copies—at $8,640,000. On the basis of this figuring, and on the sponsors' premise that 200,000 schools would pay $108,000,000 a year in rentals—if and when—the distributors would stand to profit $84,460,000, or about 400 per cent on the investment.

In any event, MPPDA spokesmen hope that the first exchanges will be operating in time to furnish films for the schools opening in September.

The plan commits the seven majors to participate, but does not prevent any company from additionally engaging in selling effort direct.

Financial support of the United States Government was requested, but evidently denied. President Roosevelt was approached by MPPDA representatives last October. Some $173,000,000 was the figure set for government financing, to be appropriated to the schools, on credit terms, to buy equipment, pay for film rentals in the first two years and instruct 5,000 teachers in visual education. Only $5,000,000 was to have been used by the MPPDA-educator organization, and that for surveying all existing films, reviewing and classifying.

Now the teachers' schools, normal schools and teachers' institutes are depended on by the sponsors to establish extension courses for instruction in school film and projector usages.

Problem of Competition

Anticipating a resurrection of the complaint of exhibitors against "unfair" non-theatrical competition, the MPPDA and the educators have inserted in the program so-called "assurances" for theatre owners, in the nature of contractual agreements with the schools that all films are to be screened only in school hours—from nine in the morning to three in the afternoon; films can only be used in classrooms for educational purposes; no admissions may be charged, and all monies for equipment and rental of films must come out of regular school operating funds. Also, theatrical films used will be non-current.

Evidence of the fertility of the field is presented by the sponsors in the recent survey conducted by the United States Government's Office of Education and the American Council on Education, which gathered the following conclusions from 9,000 reports from school superintendents in charge of 17,000,000 pupils in 95 per cent of all cities with a population of 5,000 or more:

VISUAL EQUIPMENT IN USE:

Lantern slide projectors	17,040
Stillfilm attachments	3,007
Filmstrip projectors (stillfilm)	2,733
Micro-slide projectors	2,073
Opaque projectors	2,720
16 mm. silent projectors	6,074
16 mm. sound projectors	458
35 mm. silent projectors	3,230
35 mm. sound projectors	335

In addition much equipment was reported as rented or borrowed.

The survey also revealed that more films are used in teaching science than any other subject. Next in use are films on travel and geography, then history, social science, health, English, nature study, commerce and industry.

Both the MPPDA and its board of educators hope to gain a foothold in America's schools by convincing the boards preparing the curricula that "motion pictures are a necessity to the curriculum because they give material not otherwise obtainable." Once motion pictures are written into the curriculum, in the same manner as certain text books are specified, the sponsors feel that a definite demand for the service will follow.

First attention is to be given to the junior and senior high schools, three-fourths of the 538 short subjects already reviewed being adaptable to that class.

Picking the 538 from a larger number "after certain selection," the educator-reviewers voted 320 as acceptable for education, 61 as being not appropriate, and the rest having possibilities, if the distributors make suggested changes—such as the elimination of the 19th hole drinking scene in a Bobby Jones golf reel which was picked as having physical training value.

Dr. May, interviewed in the headquarters of the MPPDA, in New York, declared that "Education needs motion pictures produced by theatrical producers because they can give the vitalized, dramatic interpretation which educational systems are now lacking.

"Films," he said, "make pupils experience life. Text books don't. The film is its vitalization that teaching has been needing."

Dr. May on Thursday told the NEA convention that, "Today brings occasion to announce a coordinate effort of several influential agencies and the motion picture industry itself toward bringing the screen to the service of education in terms of exceptional promise.

"The concept of 'living pictures' to communicate facts and convey emotions from one mind to another without the clumsy interposition of the difficulties of language and limitations of words, has been in the mind of men for centuries," he asserted.

Dr. May explained to the educators at the convention that Edison's concept of his Kinetoscope, empowered by George Eastman's film, "was useful work," and that the inventor set to make the motion picture to "do for the eye" what his phonograph had "done for the ear." And this did not contemplate the field of entertainment alone.

Less than 10,000 instructional films have been produced to date, he continued, compared to 50,000 feature theatrical films, indicating the lack of progress of motion pictures in education.

Reasons for the delay were attributed by Dr. May to the fact that theatres are run for profit while schools are not, that schools are conservative and are slow to buy new and expensive equipment, and the fact that education lacks teachers who are trained to use films effectively.

He reported that "numerous experiments have demonstrated the superior merits and teaching values of motion pictures."

Numerous efforts are being made by the American Council on Education and other agencies to promote better training of teachers in the educational uses of films.

Some 500 widely scattered and disorganized sources now supply educational films, Dr. May reported, and "very few of the 10,000 films available have been adequately appraised or evaluated."

Dr. May traced the MPPDA's interest in educational films from its series of "character study" shorts from non-current features, as developed by the Committee on Social Values in Motion Pictures, four years ago, to the more recent adaptation of non-current theatrical films to educational uses by the Progressive Education Association.

Now, he said, the MPPDA member companies "have opened their vaults of short subjects to an advisory committee of educators who are invited to come and see what is there of educational value." He estimated that some 15,000 short subjects are in the vaults, all since the beginning of sound, in 1926. Some 2,000, he said, "can probably be used as is, and perhaps another 2,000 or more could be used provided certain changes were made in them."

Travelogues, he continued—"of which there are not less than 1,000 good ones—will undoubtedly be useful in teaching of geography, history and civics in the lower grades, and the social studies in the upper grades."

"We know, also, that other shorts contain a great amount of material which is useful in connection with biological sciences, nature study, physical education, art and music."

He insisted that the board of educators now serving the project "in an advisory capacity" receives no compensation for its counsel.

France, Germany Sign Pact With Withdrawal Option

France and Germany have renewed their film agreement for one year with each side having the privilege of withdrawing from the agreement on December 31st, 1937. Originally the pact was signed May 12, 1936 and went into effect the following June 1st.

The text of the new Franco-German agreement was published in the French Journal Officiel and the terms were contained in letters exchanged on June 15th between Yvon Delbos, French affairs foreign secretary, and Comte de Wekczeck, German ambassador in Paris.

Because the French industry has had poor results with its activities in Germany during the 1936-37 season, the agreement contains a provision that the German government promises to assist in the importation of French films to the Reich, and the sale and distribution of them. The German government also will favor all contacts between the French and German film trade organizations, especially the Reichfilmkammer.

NEW THEATRE, EXCHANGE UNIONS CONDUCTING WAGE NEGOTIATIONS

Organization of Exhib'n Groups Viewed as Greater Task Than in Exchanges; Lessing Nominated for Office by Painters

With organization of film exchange unions well under way and collective bargaining negotiations between their representatives and distributing company officials proceeding amicably the drive for unionization of theatres occupied the attention of labor leaders.

The last obstacle to amicable settlement of the disputes which have continued since the Hollywood strike ended was removed Tuesday when the scenic artists' local apologized to the IATSE for attacks made by the defunct Federated Motion Picture Crafts and announced the withdrawal of Charles Lessing, FMPC leader, from sole nomination as president of the local.

On the coast also, other employee organizations, including the Screen Actors' Guild, the Junior Directors' Guild, studio machinists and a new group which comprises studio publicity writers, were active.

Actors' Equity continued its discussion of plans for the organization of radio talent under its banner.

Mr. Lessing's nomination and his apparently assured election were held by Pat Casey, for the producers, and George Browne, IATSE president, as a breach of the verbal agreement reached when the men returned to work. The decision on Mr. Lessing's retirement from the Hollywood labor scene followed a conference attended by Mr. Casey, William Bioff of the IATSE, and Charles Elrod and Pridgeon Smith of the scenic artists' local.

The International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and other affiliates of the American Federation of Labor who have been active in the film exchange and exhibition fields have found organization of theatre employees a task of greater magnitude than bringing exchange employees under their jurisdiction. Contracts have been signed between distributors and exchange union representatives in 14 cities, leaving only 17 to be negotiated. Comparable strength in the theatre field, however, is not expected by union leaders before the end of this year.

The Committee for Industrial Organization has played only a small part in the drives in either field. In Cincinnati this week N. Clyde Butler, assistant to the CIO regional director, issued a charter to employees of two theatres in Clarksburg, West Virginia.

New theatre unions in Kansas City, New Haven, Portland, Me., and San Francisco this week were drawing up wage scale proposals for submission to owners and operators and organization was continuing in other large cities.

Kansas City Pact Rejected

The only break in the negotiations with exchange unions occurred when Felix Snow, IATSE representative, and a committee of six from the Film Exchange Employees' Union presented a list of counter demands to local exchange managers who airmailed them to their home offices for action. The counter demands followed refusal of the union to accept the schedule worked out by IATSE representatives and distributors in New York last week. An average increase of four dollars over the agreement reached was asked and the union insisted that the agreement be made retroactive to June 1st instead of June 21st.

HOSTLERS GIVEN STATUS IN UNION

One of the many byways followed by negotiators in efforts to draw strict lines for union classifications led to the hostlers, members of a nearly forgotten estate who have found a niche in the Hollywood studios. Following lengthy conferences between Aubrey Blair of the Screen Actors' Guild and Joseph P. Touhey of the Studio Drivers Transportation Local, it was decided that the men who handle horses will come under the jurisdiction of the Teamsters International.

The IATSE, which had claimed the stable workers as prop men, relinquished its stand and the Guild gained its point that they do not rate the same classification as extras who are employed to ride the horses and who must be Guild members.

Local 1185 of the International Association of Machinists, 175 of whose members work in studios, received a closed shop and a 10 per cent salary increase under the terms of an agreement worked out by Pat Casey, negotiator for the producers, and D. T. Wayne, business representative of the local which was one of the groups which joined the FMPC strike last month.

The first round of the Screen Playwrights' battle with the Screen Writers' Guild over recognition by producers resulted in a draw when the Playwrights objected to calling a consent election which would have determined without official intervention of the Regional Labor Board whether the Playwrights or the Guild should be the official bargaining agency for the film writers.

The Los Angeles Newspaper Guild this week invited film publicity men to join the Guild as fullfledged members with all voting privileges after a meeting at which reports of the American Newspaper Guild convention were read. The Screen Publicists' Guild, newly formed organization of publicity men, were to meet later this week to decide on affiliation.

The Junior Screen Directors' Guild, a group of assistant directors under the Screen Directors' Guild, elected Harry Scott, president; Horace Hough, vice-president; Syd Fogel, treasurer, and Clem Jones, secretary.

LaGuardia Offers Aid

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York this week offered his personal or official assistance in efforts to end the Fleischer Studio strike. Louis Nizer, attorney for the studio, employees of which have been on strike for four weeks, confirmed reports of the Mayor's offer and said he had met with William Collins of the AFL to discuss terms of negotiation.

Striking employees of the studio staged a demonstration in the Paramount theatre, booing a "Popeye" cartoon which was being shown there. Shouts and hisses continued while the picture was being shown but no other disorder resulted.

U.S. Establishes Unit to Promote Sale of Pictures

The Department of Commerce this week reverted to the ideas of Herbert Hoover with establishment of a separate division, under the direction of Nathan D. Golden, heretofore head of the motion picture section of the electrical division, to promote the sale abroad of American films and film equipment as a means of expanding the export demand for other products.

The major idea, introduced by Mr. Hoover, former secretary of commerce, will be to promote the popularity of American pictures in foreign countries so as to popularize the household articles, automobiles, machinery, clothing and other products which are the normal "props" of the usual feature picture.

The Department of Commerce a few years ago figured the American motion picture business brought at least $100,000,000 a year in foreign sales to manufacturers of household articles, furniture, automobiles, clothing and other products in the United States.

Exports of motion pictures and equipment are already in the neighborhood of $100,000,000 a year, of which $21,000,000 last year represented the value of photographic and projection goods shipped abroad.

"While the direct returns to the United States from foreign sales of motion pictures and motion picture equipment are of great importance," Secretary Roper pointed out in announcing the establishment of the new division, "the indirect benefits accruing to the United States from the exhibition of American films in foreign countries is of still greater importance to the general export trade of the country."

Under the Hoover administration the motion picture section was an independent unit. It was merged with several others under the electrical division in the "economy clean-up" five years ago.

Steele Quits Monogram

Home Office Holds Outing

Members of the Boston home office of Mullin & Pinanski, New England theatre circuit, held their annual outing at the Fox and Hounds Club in Marblehead. Martin J. Mullin and Samuel Pinanski had charge of arrangements.

EXHIBITORS AND CARRIERS PROTEST FEDERAL CHANGE IN PAYMENT RULE

Proposals Before ICC Would Require All Bills Be Submitted in Five Days and Paid Within Eight Days

Proposed changes in the methods of paying for transportation of films by motor carrier met opposition this week when representatives of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and the National Film Carriers Association appeared before a special committee of the Interstate Commerce Commission in Washington.

Guy K. Stewart, of the carriers' organization, and Edward G. Levy, general counsel for MPTOA, both informed the committee that the present system of paying for service is suitable for films and any changes would impose hardships.

The proposed new regulations, now before the Commission for approval, would require motor carriers to submit their bills for service within five days after rendition of the service and would require payment within eight days after receipt of the bills.

The service rendered the theatres is different from that for any other type of customer, Mr. Stewart told the committee. Both the nature of the service and the method of handling bills have been worked out over a long period to meet the particular needs of the exhibitors, he said.

Bills, as a rule, are submitted weekly. The service rendered is based upon a weekly charge for the number of program changes required by the exhibitor, with additional charges for other service as required.

Calls Accounts All Good

The service, Mr. Stewart continued, is essentially a personal one.

"So far as the credit problem is concerned," he continued, "the film carrier does not have the problem of the local hauler. We have found that the problem of collection is not a problem. The accounts are all good."

Before the present 15-day rule was put into effect some of the accounts were carried on a six months or yearly basis, Mr. Stewart pointed out and then asserted:

"It would be impossible to operate on anything less than the present 15 days."

Mr. Levy amplified this by explaining that when the present regulation went into effect carriers had difficulty in complying with it.

"However," he said, "they succeeded in obtaining the cooperation of distributors, exchanges and theatre circuits."

Mr. Levy also emphasized the point that exhibitors with theatres located in the same states as exchanges serving them would not be governed by the proposed restriction and therefore would continue the present method of business.

Exhibitors with houses in other states would be forced to comply with the interstate ruling, he continued, and this difference would result in needless confusion.

The proposed change, Mr. Levy said, would make necessary the reorganization of bookkeeping practices in the theatre industry and would disrupt service and financial arrangements which have existed for years and found to be satisfactory to both exhibitors and carriers.

Says Exhibitor Pays Regularly

The average independent exhibitor, Mr. Levy said, is his own bookkeeper and pays his bills at regular intervals. But, he continued, due to the multitude of duties the exhibitor has, the intervals frequently are greater than the eight day provision in the proposed regulation.

Mr. Levy also explained that in the case of circuits, bills, after approval by the exhibitors, are sent to a central office for audit, approval and payment. This routine, according to Mr. Levy, cannot be carried out within eight days.

Probably half of the houses in the country use motor carrier service, Mr. Levy concluded, and the proposed change would result in confusion on the part of exhibitors operating on the broken week system.

Representatives of carriers other than film carriers also voiced opposition to the proposal on the ground it would merely result in increasing their bookkeeping costs materially without accomplishing anything.

French Quota Regulations Extended for Another Year

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

The French Contingentement (quota) regulations, which have been in effect since 1935, have been extended for one year from July 1, 1937, to June 30, 1938, in accordance with a Government decree issued in Paris this week.

The main provisions of the quota are as follows:

Only 94 dubbed foreign films may be released in France for each six-month period, referring to films of more than three reels in length. The dubbing of the films must be done in studios situated on French territory, within four months from the date the request is filed, certified by payment of the required tax.

Foreign films in original speaking versions may be shown in only five theatres in Paris and ten in the provinces. However, exceptions may be made by the Minister of National Education. Cartoons are excluded from these stipulations.

All contracts "concerning public projection of a film will not be available until three full days after the official trade show or the first public showing." This clause was inserted for the purpose of halting blind booking.

Control of Proxies By A. T. & T. Attacked

The board of directors of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company has become a "self-perpetuating body," investigators of the Federal Communications Commission said in Washington this week when the commission resumed its inquiry into the utility's capital structure. A. T. and T. is the parent company of Western Electric and Electrical Research Products, Inc.

New members of the board, the report asserted, are "the agreed choice of the president and other members of the board."

Government Seeks Taxes from Stars

Demands for the payment of alleged tax deficiencies aggregating almost $1,000,000 are being made to motion picture persons by the United States government.

Among those against whom deficiency assessments have been lodged are Wallace Beery, Marlene Dietrich, Ted Healy, Bing Crosby, Ltd., Charlie Chaplin, Charles Chaplin Film Corporation, Charles Laughton, Mary Boland, Adolphe Menjou, Ed Wynn, Elissa Landi, Victor McLaglen, Ruth Chatterton, Leatrice Joy, estate of Will Rogers, George Brent, Claudette Colbert, Zasu Pitts, Joseph Von Sternberg, and Robert Riskin.

Cecil DeMille, brought into the income tax limelight by Guy T. Helvering of the Internal Revenue Bureau, issued a statement in reply to Mr. Helvering's statement that Mr. DeMille had made "a purposeful attempt to evade surtaxes" through creation of a holding company. Mr. DeMille pointed out the United States board of tax appeals decided DeMille Productions, Inc., was not formed to evade taxes. The opinion was unanimously upheld in the United States district Court of Appeals, the statement announced. Mr. DeMille concluded his statement by declaring:

"I am thankful to the American spirit which thus far has preserved the integrity of our courts."

Newsreel Theatres, Inc., which operates the newsreel theatre at Broadway between 46th and 47th streets, has taken a long lease on the Concourse theatre in the Bronx, which it will remodel as a newsreel unit.

PARAMOUNT REELECTS OFFICERS, DIRECTORS

Renaming of All but H. A. Fortington Follows Abandonment of Common Stock Plan

Operation of Paramount Pictures, Inc., will continue for another year under the same leadership and with the same number of common stock shares as it has had in the past year, it became known after the annual stockholders and the board of directors meetings.

At the stockholders session, the proxy committee was unable to obtain the approval of the necessary two-thirds of the voting stock and it was decided to abandon the proposed plan to increase the company's authorized common stock from 4,500,000 shares to 6,000,000 shares.

The directors meeting, held Monday, brought the reelection of all officers and executives and also the resignation of H. A. Fortington, former chairman of the executive committee. The vacancy created by Mr. Fortington's resignation was not filled.

The board also voted a two months extension of Paramount's option to repurchase the 50 per cent interest held by A. H. Blank in the Tri-States circuit of theatres. The option was to have expired July 6th.

Griffis Heads Committee

Mr. Fortington, a former representative of the Royal British insurance companies, was a leading force in Paramount's activities two years ago when the company emerged from reorganization. At that time he was elected to the board of directors for a three year term and to the chairmanship of the executive committee. By the end of his first year in office, Mr. Fortington was the storm center around which the internal turmoil raged until the election of Barney Balaban to the company's presidency.

In addition to Mr. Balaban the officers reelected are Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board; Neil F. Agnew, Y. F. Freeman, Henry Herzbrun, John W. Hicks, Jr., and Austin C. Keough, vice-presidents; Walter B. Cokell, treasurer; George L. Bagnall, assistant treasurer; Mr. Keough, secretary; Norman Collyer, Jacob H. Karp and Frank Meyer, assistant secretaries, and Fred Mohrhardt, comptroller.

On the executive committee are Stanton Griffis, chairman; Mr. Agnew, Mr. Balaban, Stephen Callaghan, Harvey D. Gibson, Duncan G. Harris, John D. Hertz, Maurice Newton and Mr. Zukor.

The stockholders' decision to abandon the plan for increasing the company's stock came after two attempts to have more than two-thirds of the voting stock represented at a meeting. At the final session there was a 65 per cent representation with 64 per cent of the votes in favor of the increase.

Balaban Explains

After the meeting, Mr. Balaban announced: "Although the management is of the opinion that such increase is in the interest of the corporation and is confident that the necessary vote can be shortly obtained, it deems it wiser to defer to the opinions of many of the stockholders who, while voting in favor of the proposal, have urged that the plan be postponed until more specific purposes for any additional shares could be determined."

Mr. Balaban also said the plan would not be re-submitted to the stockholders before the next annual meeting, if at all. The proposed new shares were to have been held in the company's treasury for future corporate expansion and a program of debt reduction, Mr. Balaban explained.

A repetition, on a minor scale, of the excitement of the June 15th meeting of the stockholders occurred when Dr. Irving Chestman, a minority stockholder, offered a motion that the company institute action against Mr. Griffis and Mr. Stanton, directors, and the brokerage firm with which they are associated—Hemphill, Noyes and Company, and Hallgarten and Company—to recover any profits which may have resulted from alleged manipulations. The motion was defeated 1,100 to 550, with the proxy committee, representing more than 3,700,000 shares, not voting.

Dr. Chestman made the motion on the basis of recent Securities and Exchange Commission reports and in reply Mr. Balaban declared the information and action Dr. Chestman sought was within the province of the SEC.

Mr. Keough then reminded Dr. Chestman that Mr. Griffis had stated at the June 15th session that neither he nor his firm had profited by the transactions.

In reply to another query by Dr. Chestman, Mr. Balaban said it was he who had first proposed the stock increase.

About three weeks additional time to file an answer to an action instituted to enjoin Paramount from putting Adolph Zukor's new employment contract into effect will be sought in New York supreme court by the company. The reply to the action, started by A. Ella Heyan, a stockholder, is due July 7th. The extension of time will be requested through Paramount's attorneys, Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett.

Charles Cochrane Discusses Expansion

In an expansion policy under which motion pictures will be made in London and Hollywood, Walter Wanger and Charles Cochrane, British producer, started a series of conferences in Hollywood this week, according to a dispatch to the New York Times. While plans have not been disclosed, it is understood that all major problems have been solved and that the Cochrane product will be included in the Wanger schedule which is made for United Artists release, it was said.

"Body Beautiful" Approved in Iowa

Iowa's first board of censors, appointed by the Mayor of Iowa City for the sole purpose of reviewing "Body Beautiful," has approved the film, ruling it is "educational" and not "sexy." The board, however, voted its sanction with the stipulation that two scenes be eliminated and that no children be permitted to see the picture. Robert Griffith, manager of the theatre at which the picture was shown, agreed to the provisions.

Bert C. Leafmans has been named president of Precision Laboratories succeeding Roscoe Hubbard, who has sold out his interest in the company in New York and resigned. Nick Tronolone, sales and plant manager, left Precision last week to join Pathe.

Unions May Call Federal Theatre Project Strike

Authority to call a strike in protest against dismissal of 30 per cent of the workers employed in the Federal Theatre Project has been voted to the executive committees of five American Federation of Labor theatrical unions in New York City.

The committees, representatives of Actors' Equity Association, the American Federation of Actors, Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians, Theatrical Protective Union 1, and the Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers Union, were instructed to hold a joint conference to draft a concrete program of action.

Delay in calling the strike was voted when the union leaders met at Equity headquarters Tuesday. It was agreed to petition for an immediate hearing in Washington.

The dismissals, part of a national Works Progress Administration curtailment move, are supposed to take effect July 15th.

Should a strike be called it will be the first time A. F. of L. theatrical unions have resorted to these tactics in a work relief controversy.

Two sit-down strikes already have been staged as a result of the dismissal order affecting writers, artists, musicians and actors. Four hundred actors and other theatre workers remained in the federal theatre project headquarters in the Chanin Building, 122 East 42nd Street, New York, for 24 hours. They evacuated the building after John Rimassa, the leader of their delegation to Washington, telephoned to report Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator, had agreed to an appeals board to consider reinstatements.

Mr. Williams later announced, though, that he had merely agreed to enlarge, if necessary, the WPA's present board which handles charges of discrimination and to provide the board with social workers to study the cases if it needed them.

The second sit-down protest introduced a new technique in strikes. Six hundred employees on the federal art, music writers and historical records projects imprisoned Harold Stein, business administrator, in his office at 235 East 42nd Street, and liberated him only after he had agreed to recommend to Washington WPA officials that a neutral review board be established to order all needy workers exempted from the cut.

Ontario Board Cuts British Films Most

Regret that British pictures require more censoring than those made in the United States was expressed officially by O. J. Silverthorne, chairman of the Board of Censors for Ontario, in an annual report for the year ending March 31st. Cuts were made in 31 of 127 or 24 per cent of British films submitted. Only 17 per cent of films from other sources required deletions. Mr. Silverthorne also said the best films of British history and tradition were of American origin. The board viewed a total of 2,107 films. Three were rejected, 369 altered and 1,735 passed.

PRALL'S "CONFIDENTIAL" REPORT URGES FILMS TO BUY TELEVISION

Son of FCC Chairman Surveys Television "Secretly" for Will Hays, but His Report Appears in a Radio Paper

Purchase by the motion picture industry of an active interest in radio and television broadcasting through the acquisition of one of the present national networks or through the formation of an association in which television broadcasting rights would be pooled was the chief recommendation of a confidential survey and report submitted to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America by A. Mortimer Prall, son of the chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, who was engaged last year for the task by Will H. Hays, MPPDA president. A copy of the report was obtained and published by Broadcasting, a trade journal of the radio industry.

"The motion picture industry has its greatest opportunity for expansion knocking at its doors today," the report concluded. "It must prepare now for this new industry which is certain to become an important part of our American life." The MPPDA has not taken any action on the recommendations and refused to release the report to the motion picture press even after its publication in the radio paper.

Entrance by the motion picture industry into the radio-television field was urged in the report for the future self-protection of the industry and because "television cannot be denied—the people demand it, and sponsors want it.". .

Prall Offers Two Plans

Two plans for effecting this entrance are proposed, according to the report as published in Broadcasting. The first was the formation of "an association for profit in the nature of an open pool of television broadcasting rights by those now engaged in the industry sufficiently interested to contribute financial support. Such association should have broad powers to engage in the business of radio and television in all its branches." It was suggested that this association might first consider the purchase of stations not now included in the four major networks and forming them into a fifth national group.

Network Purchase Suggested

The second plan was for the outright purchase of one of the existing networks. "The NBC Network, the Columbia Broadcasting System or the Mutual Broadcasting System are suggested as being properties which might be acquired. Each has a complete and efficient staff of executives and operating personnel with many years of experience. Each is made up of stations long established in desirable locations with modern equipment, satisfactory power, frequencies and broadcasting time. Each has a competent engineering staff fully conversant with television as it has developed here and abroad, and able to carry on as television approaches a commercial fact. Each enjoys an excellent reputation and representative audiences which make their facilities desirable outlets for sponsors."

Mr. Prall based his argument for acquisition of television control by the motion picture industry on the claim that it is better equipped in personnel and experience to plan and produce television programs than is the radio industry. He urged it also to forestall any attempt on the part of television interests "to purchase motion picture producing facilities to produce programs in their interest." The radio industry, he added, recognizes "the great importance of motion pictures to the success of the new art."

NBC EXHIBIT TO COST $30,000

The National Broadcasting Company's contract for a site at the New York World's Fair on which buildings will be erected to house radio and television exhibits and studios, calls for NBC to pay nearly $30,000 to the World's Fair Corporation. The contract signing was broadcast over the company's radio station network and televised from the experimental station in the Empire State Building, New York. David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America; Grover Whalen, World's Fair president, and Lenox R. Lohr, president of NBC, took part in the broadcast.

The report began with a general review of the television situation in this country and abroad with particular reference to technical problems and then listed in full the activities of experimenters and the results they have achieved. The claim that the Radio Corporation of America has spent more than $1,000,000 in television research was reported as was a rumor that William Randolph Hearst is one of the principal backers of Philco Radio and Television Corporation, "having recently invested a million dollars in its activities."

With respect to motion pictures and television the report said:

"All experimenters and observers frankly admit that the best television results have been produced from motion picture film presentations. A progressive and alert motion picture industry, with its great studios and great organizations, is equipped to do the kind of program production job which would insure perfect television material and gain at once the public acceptance and interest in this new art. By a campaign carefully planned and executed the motion picture industry has its greatest opportunity in years for expansion. It is the natural source of material for programs and should be indispensable to the television art. . . .

"In the 25 years of producing entertainment, the industry has developed a consciousness of the public reaction to pictures of all types. This knowledge would be invaluable to the television broadcaster in his production work. With all of the experience it has had in production problems, it is clear that the motion picture industry is the only source of supply for television programs. Highly trained personnel with long years of experience in producing entertainment of the motion picture type will assure programs of high fidelity, interest and entertainment value.

Production Would Increase

"The U. S. Department of Commerce, through the Motion Picture Section of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, estimate that if every foot of film produced in America, plus every foot imported, were used for television broadcasting, we would have enough material to supply us with a maximum of three hours entertainment each day, provided, of course, that each picture was transmitted but once. Great Britain's total domestic production, plus imports, would provide them with but ten minutes of material daily. It is, therefore, evident that the production schedule of our American studios would have to be greatly increased if they undertook the production of television programs in addition to their regular work. . . .

"After observing several experimental television broadcasts designed and produced by the several corporations interested in television to impress the representatives of trade papers, financial institutions and the American press, the writer recognized the total failure of the television industry to approach the subject of program production from the proper viewpoint."

After citing the statements of radio and banking executives to the effect that television's eventual emergence is inevitable the report pointed out that the delay in development in the United States was a result of the problem of inter-connection of cities for television broadcasting as is done with radio.

Showmanship Needed

Before advancing the recommendation for purchase of broadcasting interests by the motion picture industry the arguments for active participation in television were summed up as follows:

"So far experimental broadcasts designed especially to stimulate interest in this new art have demonstrated that showmanship has been sadly missing.

"The shows are poorly staged, which reveals the truth in what the technicians say, that the programming problems are as great as the scientific riddles.

"The artistic side of this new art needs showmen and needs them badly. It is most apparent that the scenic designers, make up experts, directors and all those artisans who make the motion pictures what they are have not found their way into television yet. When they do it will be a boon to the productions.

"Live talent in studio television presentations must consist of actors and actresses who are famous for their work on the stage and in motion pictures, if public interest is to be aroused. . . .

"Much speculation exists regarding the alleged threat of television to the future security of the motion picture industry. Belief that the motion picture will suffer when television becomes a commercial fact appears to be without foundation. After observing the experimental broadcasts of this new art, one is aware at once that the motion picture industry, which alone possesses all the elements of successful television program production must become a part of this new art. The radio industry, due to its limited facilities is not equipped to produce an acceptable visual production.

Gradual Expansion Needed

"Because of the terrific cost of inter-connecting cities by coaxial cable (the only means now known), the motion picture industry has a great opportunity to produce programs on film and ship prints to television stations for local broadcasting. The four national chains now broadcast approximately 200 programs each day. It should be the aim of the motion picture industry to secure the production of at least 30 minutes of material for each chain daily. If this can be accomplished, it will increase the production of finished motion picture film in the U. S. by over 66⅔%, according to figures supplied by the Motion Picture Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

"To increase production schedules to such an extent would be a titanic undertaking unless gradual expansion were planned. It is, therefore, evident that the motion picture industry must begin to consider the matter now if it is to accept in whole or in part the great opportunity which this aspect of television presents. Through the facilities of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, a cooperative effort should be planned and executed which would assure the industry its proper place in the development of this new art.

Present Holdings Listed

"There are at the present three companies, members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, who are financially interested in radio stations:

"1. Warner Brothers own and operate Station KFWB in Hollywood, and it is said that during the past year formed a new subsidiary, Transamerican Broadcasting and Television Corp., with headquarters at 521 Fifth Ave., New York City. Transamerican is actively engaged in radio station representation and programs production. Additional station purchases are contemplated by this group and as recently as March 22, Transamerican announced that it would hereafter represent the Loew-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer radio interests.

"2. Loew's Inc., a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization, owns and operates station WHN in New York.

"3. RKO motion picture interests are, of course, closely allied with the National Broadcasting Company through the Radio Corporation of America, the parent company of the National Broadcasting Company.

"Undoubtedly these interests have recognized the importance of motion pictures in television program production. Each of these interests or all of them may be preparing to organize a program-producing unit which would be attractive to television broadcasters. It would be a simple proposition for the radio and television industries to pool their interests.

No Lottery Contracts

"Any contract arrangement individual producers might make with the radio and television interests to produce television program material could have no guarantee of permanence. But in the interest of the motion picture industry as a whole, a plan of production effort which will freely permit all producers to participate, rather than limit production to a small group, might be explored through or by the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America Inc. The radio and television interests, recognizing the great importance of motion pictures to the success of the new art, might cooperate to purchase motion picture producing facilities to produce programs in their interest. However, a production effort as suggested above would forestall such action by the radio and television interests.

"Some in the motion picture industry may feel that it is too early to formulate plans as to what position it should take in regard to television. It must be remembered that while there are problems which must be dealt with before television is commercially practical, no one can predict with any certainty that a solution may not be reached at an early date. Television may be upon us before we realize it and preparations should be made now by the industry for its part in this new art.

Benefits Claimed

After outlining the alternative plans for acquisition of television control, the report listed the benefits which it claimed would accrue to the motion picture industry as follows:

"The acquisition of any one of these networks would establish the motion picture industry in a well-organized and profitable enterprise. The control of an existing network will permit the industry to inject into its radio and television programs such material as it considers in the best interests of the motion picture industry and the public. Trailers of feature pictures could be made a part of its television program in such an appealing manner that the public would be induced to attend the complete showing of the pictures in the theatres. The stars of Hollywood are recognized as the most desirable material for radio and television productions by advertising sponsors.

"It has been definitely established that radio programs with Hollywood Stars create the greatest audiences and pay the highest prices.

"Due to engineering limitations in the geographic distribution of television stations, there will be keen competition for government licenses. The Federal Communications Commission, charged by Congress with the administration of the Communications Act, will undoubtedly give its favorable consideration to those applicants who can establish beyond question their ability to produce the best programs in the public's interest, convenience and necessity.

"An organization such as any one of these existing chains, combined with the great resources of the motion picture industry, could present to the Commission the most valid reasons for requesting and receiving television licenses. The acquisition of any of these national chains would provide profits which could be used to purchase television transmitting equipment when available. Due to its limitations and extremely high cost, television will not replace radio broadcasting for many years. Sponsors will continue to carry on their advertising campaigns by radio, because it will permit them to reach the greatest number of people for their advertising dollar. Television cannot be denied—the people demand it, and sponsors want it.

"The motion picture industry has its greatest opportunity for expansion knocking at its door today. It must prepare now for this new industry which is certain to become an important part of our American life.

"Inasmuch as the developments of the West Coast and Europe as recorded in this report were obtained without first hand investigation, it is recommended that they be investigated forthwith and that the findings be added to this report.

"It is recommended that some provision be made to keep appraised of developments both here and abroad as they may occur. A continuing survey should be made and results published at regular intervals."

TELEVISION VIEWERS SEE QUEEN MOTHER

Dowager Queen Mary of England was the subject of a television broadcast when she attended the all-England tennis tournament at Wimbledon. The matches were part of a British Broadcasting Corporation program and views of Queen Mary in the royal box were included, for the first time.

The range of the BBC television cameras has been increased by the instalation of additional "balanced cable" links connecting the broadcasting station at Alexandra Palace in London with Picadilly Circus, Charing Cross Road, Trafalgar Square, Covent Garden, Temple Bar, Whitehal and Westminster Abbey.

Skouras Receivership Proceedings Ended

Receivership proceedings for Skouras Enterprises in St. Louis have been completed with the approval by the referee of a $303,451 dividend, about 90 per cent of which will go to the Bondholders' Protective Committee.

The organization was formed in 1928 by Spyros, Charles and George Skouras. For many years it owned 50 per cent of the St. Louis Amusement Company and the West End Lyric Theatre.

Journal Publishes Three Film Columns

The New York Evening Journal, a Hearst newspaper, now has three motion picture departments as a result of transfers from the New York American, which ceased publishing last week. The two features which previously appeared in the American are Regina Crewe's New York film column and Louella O. Parsons' Hollywood gossip. Rose Pelswick is continuing her regular column on films.

Protests Five-Reel Cases

Allied Theatres of Connecticut in New Haven has notified all exchanges there, except Universal and United Artists, that after 30 days, all films shipped in cases of over three double reels will be refused. The five-reel cases have been found dangerous, with sprained backs and other accidents reported sustained in carrying them to the booths. The two exchanges excepted are already adhering to the request for smaller cases, it was said.

National Ticket Tax Extension Voted by Senate

A two-year extension of the present federal admission tax was voted last Thursday in Washington by the Senate when it rejected an amendment proposed by the Finance Committee which would limit continuance of the so-called nuisance levies to one year. A two-year extension was provided for in the legislation as passed by the House of Representatives. The admission levy is one of the few nuisance taxes which returns an appreciable revenue, is easy of collection and is comparatively inexpensive to the Government. For the fiscal year which ends with this month, it is anticipated receipts will exceed $19,000,000 and run about $2,750,000 above the previous year.

Meanwhile, in New Haven, Edward G. Levy, executive secretary of the Connecticut Motion Picture Theatre Owners, pointed out, in a summary of the state's recent legislative session, that one measure changed the phraseology of the general statutes with reference to assessment and collection of the existing amusement tax based on seating. While formerly the exhibitor made out a return indicating the number of days he operated and the number of seats in his theatre, mailing the return to the tax commissioner who sent the exhibitor a bill based on the return, the exhibitor now assesses himself the amount he owes and sends his check with the return.

Mr. Levy called attention to the fact that until the closing of the legislature there was danger of the passage of the 10 per cent amusement tax, since the Governor recommended enactment to supply the deficit in the budget. Variously phrased two-men-in-a-booth bills were passed by the Senate but rejected by the House. Sunday vaudeville and theatrical bills with local option also were passed.

County authorities in Georgia have no right to levy license or occupation taxes on theatres, the Georgia state court of appeals at Atlanta ruled this week in the case of Brooks County versus the Ilex Theatre, Inc., holding that their powers are purely regulatory. Brooks County authorities had sought to levy a $25 license tax on theatres in addition to the license tax of $25 imposed by the City of Quitman. The theatre owners won their case in the lower court and the state court of appeals upheld the decision.

A four per cent amusement tax based on the same terms as the state tax was passed this week by the Philadelphia City Council. The levy is expected to yield $5,000,000 to the city. It is effective July 23, when the state tax expires. Another measure calling for a 10 per cent tax on the gross receipts from transactions involving billboard and outdoor advertising, was held over for a third reading. The proposed tax of $25 on marquees was abandoned.

Several tax measures, including the graduated ticket tax, have been pushed through by the Board of Aldermen in St. Louis. This tax begins at one cent on admissions of 75 cents and up to $1, five cents on $1.01 to $2; six cents between $2.01 and $3, seven cents between $3.01 and $4 and 10 cents above $4. The proposed five per cent tax on advertising has been cut to two per cent and passed also.

SMPE Nominations At Meeting on July 9

Nominations for new officers of the Society of Motion Pictures Engineers will be made at a meeting of its board of directors on July 9th in New York at the Hotel Pennsylvania. Voting will be handled through the mails and results announced at the fall convention October 11-14.

Vacancies to be filled are as follows: Secretary, now held by James Frank; Treasurer, L. W. Davee; executive vice-president, G. F. Rackett; engineering vice-president, L. A. Jones; financial vice-president, O. M. Blunt. President S. K. Wolf's term has one more year to run.

Independents Now Plan Bank Night In Retaliation

As Loew theatre executives were being credited with the statements in New York that the recent return of chance games to their theatres were meeting with "gratifying results," the Independent Theatre Owners Association was also reported with preparing retaliation against the major circuits in the form of a $50,000 "Bank Night" which would involve houses operated by its members in the Metropolitan area. Some of the independent theatres are also said to be conferring with Harry Brandt, president of the association, over the idea of putting in vaudeville acts as further retaliation.

Meanwhile, giveaways again attracted attention in Denver with the Fox houses and the Denham and Alpine entering into competition. Fox, with 11 theatres, called the "Lucky 11," is offering a car each week, in addition to $1,000 in four prizes. Using the same ticket plan formerly used by the Huffman houses, the Fox group is also allowing courtesy matinee registrations. The Denham, first run, and the Alpine, neighborhood, have two cash nights each week, their offerings running to $500 or more.

The Nebraska supreme court this week called a halt to Bank Night in that state by granting a temporary injunction against the operation of the game. State's Attorney General Richard C. Hunter has asked the injunction until the court reviews the lottery decision handed down in a Beatrice, Neb., test case which probably will be reviewed in the fall term.

Theatre managers in Moline and Rock Island, Ill., have decided to discard Bank Nights in both cities until after a decision has been given in the Bank Night test case brought against Isadore Brotman, manager of the Paradise in Moline, by Illinois State Attorney F. C. King. The information was filed on a charge of unlawfully maintaining a lottery. The Illinois Legislature passed a law against Bank Night at the last session.

George S. Ryan, attorney, has filed two additional suits in Boston in an effort to collect royalties on Bank Night. One is against Norman Glassman of the Rialto, Lowell, operated by the Merrimac Amusement Company. The other is against William Warr, Warr theatre, Wareham, in Plymouth district court.

Loew's Extending Two Deals With Former Partners

Loew's, Inc., this week was said to be extending its partnership arrangements in two cities, St. Louis, and Providence, R. I., with a possibility of others in prospect. In both towns the major circuit is buying a half interest in the theatres, which in no way gives the seller, however, an interest in other Loew units in the same cities. The main reason for the moves is said to provide additional outlets for holdover pictures. So-called "big" films will be switched to the new theatres after they complete their runs at the Loew houses.

Deals of this nature, it was said, will prove beneficial to both Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and independent theatres affected, the reasoning advanced being that "big" pictures, after they finish at Loew theatres, are good for several additional weeks showing at other first class houses in the town.

One of the two deals is with Fanchon and Marco for the Missouri, St. Louis, which, starting next season, will play top pictures first booked by the State there. This partnership arrangement is virtually set, with attorneys for both sides now understood to be drafting contracts.

The second will affect one of Ed Fay's units in Providence. Joseph Vogel, general manager for Loew's out-of-town theatres, has been in Rhode Island several times recently to discuss the deal and it is reported that Mr. Fay will come to New York next week to sign the papers.

Negotiations have been under way by Loew's and M. B. Shanberg and Herbert Wolff for a renewal of the 10-year lease on the Midland, Kansas City. The lease expires at the end of the season, but during the life of the contract no reduction in rent has ever been made. Loew's is reported to have lost heavily on the theatre during the past 10 years and indications are that when a new agreement is drawn up there will be a substantial reduction in the rental figure.

Early last week, directors of Moredall Realty Company in New York approved the purchase of the land property of the Capitol on Broadway, for $1,500,000. Loew's has a 50 per cent interest in Moredall with Messmore Kendall and associates holding the other half. Moredall's 21-year lease on the land expires this fall, but with the outright buy of the land from the Wendell estate, this gives the holding company full ownership of the theatre and ground.

Loew's acquired the 50 per cent interest in the Capitol when the company absorbed Goldwyn Film Company. Extensive alterations will be made this summer, including a complete re-seating of the theatre, a new front and other repairs. Approximately $200,000 will be spent on the reconditioning. No change in the straight film policy is planned.

Helen Lowell, veteran character actress who went to Hollywood to play in pictures after appearing in 29 Broadway shows, was found dead in her hotel room in Hollywood Tuesday.

Miss Lowell, who made her first stage appearance at the age of 18, was born in New York City. She was 71 years old.

CHICAGO USES TRIPLES IN WAR ON LONG SHOWS

Essaness Circuit and Independents Adopt Three Features to Force Reaction by Public

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

Chicago, storm center of the double feature controversy, has turned to triple programs as a weapon to precipitate public reaction to the Balaban & Katz double bills and to force a return to programs of one picture and shorts.

The problem remains static in other cities. Sporadic tests of single feature policies by small circuits or individual theatres continue but with little indication that there will be any major change during the summer.

Ten Chicago theatres have introduced three features on their regular programs and a number of others are reported planning to do so within the next few weeks. In some of the larger houses where the triple bills are used, including the North Sheridan and Center, both Essaness theatres, business has increased and the policy has proven strong competition for the surrounding theatres. Advertisements for the Essaness houses read "Take your choice. See one or three pictures."

Adoption of the policy by the Essaness circuit is regarded as a move to force the return of single features. The circuit has been opposed to double bills since Balaban & Katz adopted the policy last fall.

One independent theatre in the city, the Rosewood, plays triple bills, a cartoon, comedy, travelogue and newsreel. The last show ends at 3 A. M. or later. Other exhibitors have said they will go to four or five features if necessary to compete with the B & K circuit's announced commitment to double bills.

Kansas City Starts Test

Mutual Theatres, W. D. Fulton's and Stanley Schwartz's independent circuit of seven Kansas houses in Kansas City, is experimenting with single bills.

"It has come to our attention," the circuit announced in an advertisement, "through repeated requests and suggestions of many discriminating patrons that there is a very considerable demand for carefully selected single feature programs. The nervous strain and reaction from sitting four and even five hours at a time is displeasing a large number of show-goers. Therefore, Mutual Theatres are happy to be the first to systematically test the public's opinion as expressed at the box office. Please watch Mutual ads for meritorious single feature programs and be assured of a pleasing, well-balanced show."

The Brookside, new southside unit of the group, last month began a similar experiment which lasted only a week because the management found an 18-day combination in "Times Square Lady" and "Jungle Princess." Others of the circuit in Kansas City are the Southtown, Rivoli, Colonial, Strand, Mokan and LaSalle.

Other Kansas theatres, including first runs, use double features more than 90 per cent of the time and a few independent houses in the suburbs occasionally advertise triple bills. Only the Fox Plaza shows single features exclusively.

A test of single features at the suburban Roosevelt in Des Moines, conducted in connection with a double bill policy at the downtown Des Moines theatres is still in the experimental stage, according to officials of Tri-States Theatre Corporation. Reaction has been mixed, executives say.

Admission at the Roosevelt is 41 cents, the same as when the theatre showed double features, and 51 cents is charged at the Des Moines, which shows the same feature as the Roosevelt and a second film.

NVA Secretary 21 Years Resigns

Believing election of new officers will revive interest in the National Variety Artists' clubrooms, Henry Chesterfield, executive secretary of the organization for 21 years, has submitted his resignation.

Mr. Chesterfield became an official of the organization when it was known as National Vaudeville Artists and his decision to resign resulted from the members' determination to reorganize and to move into new quarters. The clubrooms at present are at 247 West 46th Street, New York City. Louis Handin, theatrical attorney, is chairman of the reorganization committee.

NVA was organized by E. F. Albee, vaudeville producer, during the White Rats actors' strike in 1916. Mr. Chesterfield became secretary and in this capacity ruled vaudeville. However, resources dwindled and in 1934 the members were forced to abandon their luxurious clubrooms at 229 West 46th Street.

Another blow to the prestige of the organization was a legal battle between the NVA Inc., and the NVA Fund, which operated a sanatorium at Saranac, N. Y. It is now known as the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital. After the clubhouse had been forced to close, Mr. Chesterfield demanded an accounting of the fund's resources and Pat Casey, then treasurer, retaliated with a charge that Mr. Chesterfield had been extravagant. The case was settled out of court.

Also in 1934, NVA was converted into purely a social organization because of the formation of the American Federation of Actors, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor.

Mr. Chesterfield, in announcing his plan to resign, said he had no plans for the future. He recently operated a combination ballroom and vaudeville and motion picture house in Newark, N. J.

20 of 22 Film Boards Dropped

Continuation of local film boards in two or three cities was still undetermined Wednesday when the national headquarters of the Film Boards of Trade in New York City closed, in accordance with a decision reached earlier in the month by distribution companies.

In Chicago, however, a movement has been started to continue its film board of trade with Miss Emma Abplanalp as secretary. The board would carry on its activities purely as a local organization.

Closing of the national headquarters and the majority of the local film board offices in exchange centers ends 22 years of service to the distribution end of the motion picture industry. Among the cities where secretaries may be maintained are Boston, Los Angeles, Seattle, Detroit and Kansas City.

Wood Proposes Exhibitors' Strike On Paramount

P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, climaxed an attack on Paramount in Washington Tuesday by calling for an exhibitors' strike against the distributing company.

Speaking before approximately 20 independent exhibitor leaders from various parts of the country, Mr. Wood charged Paramount was guilty of "unfair, indecent and unethical business practices." He asserted the company had removed from the 1936-37 program six features, four for higher prices next season, two for roadshowing.

The planned strike would close the independents' screens to the company's pictures during August and would involve a refusal to sign contracts for 1938 until the company liberalized terms and agreed to deliver the six films.

Mr. Wood's address was the highlight of a protest meeting which he called and which was held at the Carlton Hotel.

Such a sit-down strike among Paramount's 4,000 exhibitors would cost the organization between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000 next year, Mr. Wood estimated. He also contended a strike would deprive Paramount of its anticipated profits this year.

The pictures which Mr. Wood accused Paramount of listing on the 1936-37 worksheet but not delivering are "High, Wide and Handsome," "Souls at Sea," "Artists and Models," "one with Marlene Dietrich with Ernst Lubitsch directing," "Spawn of the North" and "The Count of Luxembourg."

The exhibitors also discussed the feasibility of instituting suits.

Abram F. Myers, general counsel and chairman of Allied States Association, urged the exhibitors to demand action on the Hobb resolution for a congressional investigation of the industry.

In addition to Mr. Wood, those who attended the meeting were Abram F. Myers and Charles H. Olive, Washington; Herman A. Blum, Baltimore; Fred Herrington and M. A. Rosenberg, Pittsburgh; Dave Barrist, Charles Segal and Lewen Pizor, Philadelphia; Edward Levy, New Haven; Sidney E. Samuelson and Lee Newbury, New Jersey; Nathan Yamins, Fall River; R. M. Richey, Detroit; Aaron Saperstein, Chicago; Leo F. Walcott, Iowa; Fred Wehrenberg, St. Louis; Martin G. Smith, Toledo; George Erdmann, Cleveland; Dave Gilman, Minneapolis.

In addition, the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Philadelphia has appropriated a $4,000 "war chest" to carry on the fight against the company's alleged unfair selling plan. August has been designated as "Anti-Paramount month," and exhibitors have been urged not to play the distributor's pictures or enter its exchanges.

Mr. Wood's stand won the support of Arthur K. Howard, business manager of Independent Exhibitors, Inc., who dispatched a wire from Boston saying:

"You can count on the enthusiastic support of the independent exhibitors of New England on any plan devised."

Fanchon and Marco to Pool Four in St. Louis

Franchon and Marco, on July 7th, will pool four south side theatres with five South St. Louis houses operated by Bess Schulter and Alex Papand. Harry C. Arthur, now in New York, will arrive July 6th to complete the deal which has been on and off for several months. Fanchon and Marco's units which are involved are the Granada, Maplewood, Kingsland and Shaw. The Schulter-Papand group includes the Avalon, Roxy, Whiteway, Columbian and Powhattan.

In addition, Mr. Arthur's company will handle all the film buying for Harry Greenman's two neighborhood houses. Mr. Greenman, however, will otherwise continue to operate for himself.

National Chamber Reports On American Negative Export

Gains in exports of motion picture films for the first quarter of 1937 reported this week by the United States Chamber of Commerce in Washington were described as "impressive" when compared to the similar 1936 period. Detailed figures show sensitized less than one inch positive film exported during the first quarter of this year amounted to 5,037,887 linear feet values at $98,558,887, while negative film exported amounted to 4,180,942 linear feet valued at $60,803. For positive film one inch or more figures show exports of 14,171,540 linear feet valued at $403,949, while negative film in the same class totaled 20,980,615 linear feet valued at $505,491.

According to the chamber report there were exported during the first quarter of 1937, 54,411,799 linear feet of exposed motion picture film at a total value of $1,252,092. The last group includes negatives exposed, exposed and developed and newsreels.

Capra Is Silent on His Future Activities

Frank Capra arrived in New York this week from a European trip and when asked what his future plans were, if any, he refused to comment. He immediately left New York for the Thousand Islands upstate and may not return to Manhattan before he reports back to the Columbia studios to resume production.

William German, general manager for Jules Brulatour, Inc., returned on the same boat with Mr. Capra after a vacation trip to England, Austria, France and Italy.

Governor Names Showmen

J. Louis Rome, president of Associated Theatres in Baltimore, has been appointed for life by Governor Harry Nice of Maryland to the board of managers of the Rosewood State Training School. At the same time, Bernard Seamon, manager of the Hippodrome in Baltimore, was made a Justice of the Peace.

U. A. Honors Exploiteers

Richard Harrity of Loew's, Rochester; Charles Baron of Shea's, Buffalo, and the Bellevue, Niagara Falls, and Art Catlin, of the Chicago district, are the three winners of the United Artists exploitation prizes for their work on "A Star Is Born." The judges were A. W. Smith, Jr., Monroe Greenthal, Charles Leonard and Lowell Calvert.

Allied Abandons Plan to Discuss Trade Practices

Abandonment of the plan put forward by Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors to discuss trade practices with distributing companies at a round table conference was followed this week by a statement from W. A. Steffes, chairman of the group's national defense committee, that Allied is "once again rededicating itself with purposeful single-mindedness to its program of authorship and championing of trade reform legislation."

Mr. Steffes said that the proposed meeting with company heads could not be realized because responses to his invitations did not represent all of the companies, whereas the problems which "Allied wanted to discuss were industry problems and not individual." He said that of those who were asked to meet with Allied representatives, only Al Lichtman, vice-president of Loew's, conferred with him and agreed to meet and discuss the Allied grievances "or to set up possibly permanent machinery for the continuation of any necessary adjustment."

The conference was held last week in Chicago.

Others besides Mr. Lichtman to whom Allied's bids were addressed were Adolph Zukor and Barney Balaban of Paramount; Leo Spitz, RKO; S. R. Kent, Twentieth Century-Fox; George J. Schaefer, United Artists; Charles R. Rogers, Universal; Harry Cohn, Columbia; H. M. Warner, Warner Brothers, and Nicholas M. Schenck, Loew's.

Mr. Steffes said that he had received "some replies" from these, "some of them rather evasive, some of them willing to have their attorneys meet, others willing to designate someone else to meet, and some of the companies ignoring the letter entirely."

The Allied leader said that since the time set for acceptance of his bid—June 22—had expired, and that all of the companies had not agreed to meet with the Allied representatives, "there is no need of any further meetings with those who are willing to meet us," as Allied has industry, not company, grievances to discuss.

"There is only one thing for Allied States," Mr. Steffes said, "and that is to more aggressively sponsor state and national legislation as, in my opinion, producer-distributor representatives are not ready as yet for round-table conferences"

Allied's legislative program calls for renewed support of the Neely-Pettengill anti-block booking bill and the introduction in state legislatures of theatre "divorce" and chain tax measures. The organization's decision to seek a meeting with company heads to endeavor to obtain trade practice concessions and voluntary abandonment of affiliated theatres was made at Allied's national convention in Milwaukee in May.

Goodman Is Returning

Morris Goodman, vice-president of Republic Pictures, is due back in New York July 2 from a trip through England, France, Italy, Denmark, Sweden and other European countries.

SCHOOL'S OUT, SHIRLEY GOES TO A PREMIERE

Hollywood Crowds Strain the Barriers at First Showing of Fox's "Wee Willie Winkie"

Crowds, lights, cameras, microphones and celebrities, indispensable acoutrements of a motion picture world premiere were present in more than customary measure but it was the presence of an eight-year-old girl which gave the final touch of showmanship to the opening of "Wee Willie Winkie," Twentieth Century-Fox' latest Shirley Temple picture at the Carthay Circle, Hollywood, last Friday night. It was her first air appearance, numerous generous offers by air advertisers having previously been rejected by her parents.

The Hollywood crowds which strained the barriers erected along Wilshire Boulevard and at the entrance to the theatre and the radio audience which listened to the ceremonies over 50 stations of the Mutual Broadcasting System heard the climax of an unusually heavy exploitation campaign when Shirley, lifted to the microphone by Eddie Cantor, said, "It's a big day for me because it's my first premiere, and I was promoted to the high fourth grade, and got my report card. School's out today."

Eddie Cantor introduced the celebrities as they appeared on the rostrum constructed in front of the theatre and alternated with George Fischer, columnist and radio commentator, as master of ceremonies during the broadcast. David Broekman led a 30-piece band which played Shirley Temple's songs from previous pictures.

The groundwork for a continuing exploitation angle was laid by the company in the presence of a camera crew under the direction of David Butler to shoot crowd scenes for Eddie Cantor's first Twentieth Century-Fox picture, "Ali Baba Goes to Town."

Among those who spoke during the radio broadcast were Darryl F. Zanuck, in charge of Twentieth Century-Fox production; Victor McLaglen, the three Ritz brothers, Cesar Romero, Sophie Tucker, Gus Edwards, Constance Bennett, June Lang, Michael Whalen, Gregory Ratoff, David Butler, Don Ameche, Jack Haley, Jean Hersholt, Peter Lorre, Tony Martin, Alice Faye, Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Ann Sothern, G. Aubrey Smith, May Robson, Jane Darwell, Phyllis Brooks, Joan Davis, Virginia Field, Gloria Stuart, Claire Trevor and Nancy Carroll.

Those who spoke over the public address system to the crowd before or after the radio broadcast were Douglas Fairbanks, Arthur Treacher, Dixie Dunbar, Gilbert Roland, June Lang, Douglas Scott, Constance Collier, Sidney Lanfield, Monty Banks, J. Edward Bromberg, John Carradine, Earl Carroll, Mady Christians, Alan Dinehart, Brian Donlevy, Henry King, Warner Oland, Pauline Moore, Lew Pollock, Sig Rumann, Leopold Stokowski, George Sanders and Dolores Del Rio.

Following the showing of the three reel featurette of the coronation in Technicolor and the picture of the evening, Tyrone Power introduced Shirley and other members of the cast from the stage.

Fox West Coast theatre managers in California cities cooperated in the campaign on the picture by erecting loudspeakers in the lobbies of their houses for the Mutual System broadcast of the premiere. Stations in Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego, Santa Barbara, Bakersfield, San Bernardino, Stockton, El Centro and Santa Ana, Cal., used local break-ins giving the approximate dates for showings of "Wee Willie Winkie" at the local Fox West Coast houses. Other stations which participated in the hookup were located in Chicago, Newark, Cincinnati, Detroit, Boston; Ada and Ardmore, Okla.; Augusta, Me.; Baltimore, Bridgeport, Cleveland, Dallas. Denver, Elk City, Fall River, Fort Worth, Hartford, Des Moines, Cedar Rapids, Kansas City, Lincoln, Manchester, Nashville, Omaha, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Providence, Richmond, Springfield, St. Louis and Washington.

Odlum Explains Growth of Atlas

The story of how a partnership investment of $40,000 in 1923 expanded into the Atlas Corporation of today was related to the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington this week when it continued its investigation into investment trusts.

The narrator was Floyd B. Odlum, president of the corporation, which owns 50 per cent of RKO Radio and holds an option to purchase the remaining 50 per cent, which is owned by the Radio Corporation of America. The corporation also has variously owned large blocks of Paramount and other motion picture securities.

Mr. Odlum, in explaining the growth of the corporation, pointed out that funds had been added through contributions of stockholders. The original company, the U. S. Company, was superseded in 1928, when the Atlas Utilities and Investors, Ltd., of Canada, was organized. For its stock in the U. S. company, the Odlum group received 41,000 shares of Atlas and 47,000 perpetual option warrants. Then in 1929 the Atlas Utility Corporation of Delaware was formed.

In answer to questions about the purchase and resale of a block of stock in Allied Atlas by Atlas of Canada, Mr. Odlum declared:

"If there is a suggestion that Atlas of Canada was fattened up for the holders of the option warrants against the Atlas Corporation of Delaware, just the oposite is true."

Fadman Buys Product

Edwin Miles Fadman of Red Star Films will leave New York this week for Europe after a visit of several weeks during which he bought 25 features and 20 short subjects. I. E. Lopert, president of Red Star, will also leave New York in two weeks to preside at a meeting of directors of the company in Paris.

Kuykendall Decries Air Previews at Southern Session

The practice of holding previews of pictures over national radio networks before the films are released was bitterly denounced as a "ruinous practice to the industry" by Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, speaking to more than 200 theatre officials from seven states at the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association in Birmingham, Ala., Monday. Mr. Kuykendall also lashed out against the present policies of producers and distributors in requiring a theatre owner to run all of their pictures and not permitting him sufficiently wide cancellation privileges.

The registration of delegates at the Thomas Jefferson Hotel took place last Sunday. Sight seeing and a buffet supper on hotel terrace, at which President M. C. Moore of Jacksonville, Fla., pleaded for "more action and less talk at the convention" followed. Mr. Kuykendall also made a brief address at this supper. City Commissioner President James M. Jones and Postmaster W. Cooper Green welcomed the delegates. J. H. Thompson, Hawkinsville, Ga., vice-president, made the response.

Government regulation of the motion picture industry was advocated by the SETOA. The organization also voted to refrain from buying pictures before October 1st from companies refusing to eliminate the score charge.

Officers Re-elected

Officers of the association were reelected. They are: Milton C. Moore, president; Bill Griffin, Tom Brandon, J. H. Thompson, and Hugh Manning, vice-presidents; Mrs. H. T. Wood, secretary, and R. B. Wilby, treasurer.

Stanley A. Kane, executive secretary of the Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, returned to Minneapolis this week from a trip and tendered his resignation to the association.

The Mississippi Motion Picture Theatre Owners will hold their annual convention at the Hotel Buena Vista, Biloxi, July 18-19.

Paramount Extends Wilby-Kincey Pact

Arrangements for the renewal of the Wilby-Kincey circuit operating agreement with Paramount to June 26, 1938, were completed in New York last Friday following the return of Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount theatre head, from Miami. The current operating contract for the circuit expired last Saturday.

The new contract will be signed by Robert B. Wilby following his arrival in New York on Monday. The extension is understood to continue for another year the same terms which were in force under the old agreement, which provided a profit participation for Mr. Wilby and H. F. Kincey, the operating partners. The pact covers one of the largest Paramount theatre units, a circuit of more than 80 theatres throughout Alabama, Tennessee, North and South Carolina.

INDEPENDENTS ORGANIZING AGAINST NEW QUOTA PROPOSALS IN ENGLAND

Extinction of Small Companies Is Seen as a Sequel to the Cost Clause; All Branches May Protest to Government

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Opposition to the British Government's proposed new Films Act, on the part of independent interests in all sections of the British trade, hardened opposition when independent producers, distributors, laboratory companies and others were summoned on June 21st to consider a resolution deploring the Cost Clause suggested by the Board of Trade and recommending:

1. That all pictures costing £12,500 ($62,500), exclusive of payments to non-British subjects, should rank for Quota.

2. That any other picture, whatever its cost, should be eligible if it booked to over 150 theatres, was shown in the full programme and was not withdrawn owing to public disapproval.

Suggestions proposed by the independents for submission to the Board of Trade included a request for a quota based on actual bookings of British films at home and abroad in proportion to bookings of foreign films. If in any year the statutory percentage was not reached the deficit would be carried forward and any excess would be credited. Alternatively they asked a classification for the smaller renter handling 20 or less foreign films with a preferential 10 per cent quota and liberty to use British shorts to cover foreign features.

Opponents Rally at CEA

Last week, at the annual convention of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, at Harrowgate, there was a clear indication that all the various interests opposing the cost clause in the proposed new quota law will present a united front in opposition.

The cost clause would place quota films on a basis of cost of production to determine fulfillment of quota terms, a method emphatically opposed by the majority of the CEA, which is sponsoring a quality basis on quota. A willingness on the part of those opposing the cost clause to fight vigorously all stages of the proposed new Films Act, of which the quota provisions are a part, was indicated, if the Government refuses concessions.

The new Moyne committee of the CEA, named at the convention, met for the first time to consider its reply to the quota plan outlined recently by the Board of Trade for the Government. The group also considered the invitation to C. P. Metcalfe, CEA president, from the independent distributors to nominate four exhibitors to accompany the distributor deputation to Capt. Evan Wallace, Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade.

It was learned here that the Film Group of the F.B.I. is not unanimous on a quota policy, and that a minority faction of smaller producers is holding private meetings to oppose the cost cause. They claim the Film Group majority is largely a duplicate representation of the major studios and associated companies.

Although the summer conference of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association ended last Friday, the quota committee remained at Harrogate to complete all the details of its case.

ARLISS SUGGESTS WAY TO WIN MARKET

George Arliss, in an address before the Royal Society of Arts in London, proposed a method by which British producers might get an American market for their products. They should make films with only British audience in mind, Mr. Arliss said. They would be more likely to produce something appealing to America by this practice, he continued, than by imitating Hollywood.

Pictures relying on story and acting are within the scope of British companies which cannot afford to compete with Hollywood and Britain should plan accordingly, he declared.

C. P. Metcalf, C. E. A. president, wired the organization's sympathetic support to the deputation of independent distributors and producers which is opposing the cost clause in the proposed quota before the board. The opposition contention is that the cost clause threatens a product shortage and unemployment as the result of the closing of small theatres.

They suggested that a quota qualification should follow the minimum number of bookings of any British picture or that the percentage should follow the value of imports.

In a letter to the British trade press dated June 17th, Ken A. Nyman, vice-president of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, made the following comments on the situation created by the Board of Trade's "skeleton" pronouncement on Quota legislation—this in addition to the quota developments at the CEA's convention last week. The letter follows:

"The bare outlines have caused consternation to the independent sections of the trade, i.e., those sections of the trade most in contact with and serving all the time the public interest. . . .

"Out of the welter of meetings, conversations and statements in the press, a very revealing situation is unfolded. The (British) trade press (which at first attacked the CEA for its consistency in opposing the cost clause) and producers, who favored such a clause at first, are now appreciating the danger to the maintenance, perhaps even the continuance, of a British production industry which is implicit in the cost clause, coupled (as it is proposed) with the 'double quota' privilege attaching thereto.

"Suddenly, as the appreciation of this menace is becoming understood, there has arisen a terrific urge for a line-up of all independent interests—producer, renter and exhibitor—to state a case to the Board of Trade before it is too late. An urge animated by a fateful certainty that the new Films Act, if proceeded with on the lines of the present suggestions, sounds the death knell of the independents in all three spheres, the possible end to "British" British production, to British entrepreneurs and to that British film entertainment service which so directly contacts with the British cinemagoer. . . .

"That it will spell the ruin of individual British business men is not a point which we can necessarily expect the Government as such seriously to be concerned with, but if, in the process of applying the new Act, we find the fundamental object of a British Films Act, namely the encouragement of more British films on British screens, is being defeated and evaded, then indeed we have a strong case.

"I don't know personally the individuals (renters and producers) who have suddenly become vocal since the publication of the terms of the proposed new Act . . . but I feel, like all independent exhibitors, that their case and our case is not only the same but a good one, to which the Government will at least be prepared to listen . . . for their own sakes, for the sake of the British public, for the sake of the future of British production, the possible line-up of British producer, renter and the exhibitor at this stage should take place and take steps to make its points heard."

Press Now Takes Up the Fight

Criticism of the cost clause is being vigorously expressed in the British trade press by the independent interests in all sections of the trade. Small distributors, supplying American program pictures, stress the impossibility of paying £15,000 each for British pictures to "cover" American pictures costing less than that to produce in Hollywood and point out the serious effect on many exhibitors if these cheap American pictures are forced off the market. Laboratory companies also foresee the withdrawal of American "B" pictures and a shortage of printing orders. Such technicians as make-up men point out that they are as much needed in a £5,000 picture as in one costing £15,000 and that a reduction of product will mean serious unemployment.

In a letter sent by the Associated Independent Producers of Great Britain (a trading company) to Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, the suggested new legislation is described as "extremely dangerous," and the assertion is made that it would mean "the disappearance from the industry of at least 1,000 exhibitors who depend for their livelihood upon product available to them at an economical price."

The statement also asserts that, whereas no producer "worth his salt" would object to a viewing test for quality, "the introduction of a cost clause is either a vulgar suggestion that money spent is a guarantee of good entertainment (which is artistically as well as commercially untrue) or is, alternatively, a surrender to big financial groups in the industry, who wish to stifle the last vestige of independence and free competition."

Evasion Possibility

Commenting on the possibility of evasion of the cost clause, the letter says: "A £15,000 production can be as bad as the worst of the recent 'quota quickies' if the author of the story gets £14,000 and only £1,000 is spent on the actual production. Other evasions of a similar nature readily suggest themselves." The letter concludes by citing a number of very successful British films which have cost less than £15,000.

It is anticipated that the very vigorous criticism of the Government's proposals which is now shaping, and the obvious probability of exhibitors and independent trade interests uniting to stimulate opposition in Parliament to the new Act, will be seriously considered by the Board of Trade. It is generally believed that the Government is anxious for a non-controversial measure and is prepared to make concessions.

Probabilities of an expose of some of the most glaring instance of extravagant British production finance are seen in fuller details which became available this week of the investigations being conducted by W. R. Crocker, lawyer, at the instance of a group of Lloyds insurance underwriters.

COST CLAUSE ATTACKED

Mr. Crocker is a noted criminal lawyer. His name is known throughout England, and indeed the world, through his activities in tracking down the London "fire-raising" gang. It was originally understood that his mission in connection with films was a general exploration of the basis on which insurance loans were granted to producers, with the object of establishing a safe procedure in the future.

It now appears that he is investigating the procedure of specific production companies and that he was appointed as the sequel of a refusal on the part of certain reinsurance interests to pay on policies, placed by underwriters, which covered advances to film companies, secured on specific films.

The re-insurers allege that these policies were obtained by false pretenses. The money, they claim, was spent on wasteful general expenditure at studios, instead of in production. Also asserted it that certain intermediaries were aware of these facts but concealed them.

The general case of the re-insurers is that, while they were prepared to face the risk of loss on a specific film, they were not prepared to finance general production.

Mr. Crocker's probe is expected to cover the cases of several of the "£100 companies" which, with that capital, obtained finance for their activities by means of a bank overdraft guaranteed by insurance interests, which issued a policy to the producer for the amount of the overdraft. The chief security was frequently a distribution contract. If the film failed to make a profit the insurance company paid the overdraft. If it succeeded it drew interest on the policy. The producer paid a fairly high premium on the policy and he also paid the bank interest on the overdraft. This type of finance involved many insurance concerns in bad losses, in some cases because further finance was called for to finish the picture. It was discredited some time ago, and the banks began to be ultra-cautious about the security offered for the overdrafts.

Mr. Crocker was understood, this week, to be looking into the accounts of at least four production companies involved in "insurance finance."

Although there is apparently little likelihood of serious repercussions resulting, the intensive study of production financing which has been undertaken by Mr. Crocker is expected to halt the flood of small producers who have made pictures with little capital and then gone out of business.

Insurance companies are said to have lost approximately £3,000,000 on British productions last year.

In general it is viewed in the industry as a good thing that these small producers have failed, since their mistakes caused production costs to rocket. It is possible that legal proceedings may follow Mr. Crocker's inquiry, but there is little indication of any serious reaction.

Odeon Companies Merge

Eighty-six companies owning the theatres included in the Oscar Deutsch Odeon circuit have held formal meetings to approve the merging of all companies into one. The move is preparatory to a public issue by Odeon, on a preference or debenture basis, probably of £4,000,000 of a total authorized capital of at least £8,000,000. United Artists has an interest in Odeon.

Philip Hill and Partners, Ltd., disclosed today that they are sponsoring a £1,800,000 debenture issue of Odeon Theatres, in which United Artists has an interest.

English Unions in Deal

An interunion agreement was signed between the National Association of Theatrical Employes and the Association of Cine Technicians for joint action and mutual support covering film production and television.

Rose Rosenberg to Metro

Rose Rosenberg, private secretary for 15 years to J. Ramsay Macdonald, ex-Prime Minister of Great Britain, is to become an executive of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer British Studios, Ltd., starting in August.

ATP Films to Grand National

Grand National has concluded a deal here for the distribution in the United States of five pictures produced by Associated Talking Pictures.

The arrangement is on a share basis, with a minimum guarantee of $100,000 for the five pictures. R. P. Baker of A.T.P. is expected in New York at the end of July.

ASCAP's Fight in Washington Opens

The case of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers seeking to set aside a new Washington law regulating music copyrights was to be heard in Tacoma late this week. Federal Judge John C. Bowen of Seattle, E. E. Cushman of Tacoma and Bert Emory Haney of San Francisco were to preside.

The Ascap suit names the State of Washington and all county prosecutors as defendants. It has been decided that the defendants will be represented by Prosecutor B. Gray Warner and his assistant, Edwin C. Ewing of Seattle, King County; Prosecutor A. W. Swanson of Snohomish County and his assistant, J. P. Donnelly, deputy in the state attorney general's office.

Ascap is seeking to set aside the act passed by the 1937 legislature that requires the owner of a copyright to file a list of his copyrighted songs with the state, giving the price at which they are available for public presentation. A further section of the act provides that the copyright owner must be incorporated in Washington in order to collect royalties.

E. C. Mills, chairman of the Ascap executive committee; Louis D. Frohlich and Herman Finkelstein of Schwartz and Frohlich, Ascap counsel, left New York for Seattle early this week for the court fight.

Four N. J. Theatres

Four new theatres, with seating capacities ranging from 600 to 1,000, are now under construction in New Jersey. All will be ready for opening by late September. The theatres are located in Teaneck, Clifton, Denville and Keansburg.

Kawakita Claims Nazi Film Bloc 'Just a Mistake'

Japan's role in a reported Italo-German-Japan pact for the exchange of films and for cultural cooperation "was just a mistake" emanating from a recently organized Japanese distributing company's agreement to handle "five or six" German productions, according to Nagamasa Kawakita, head of Towa Shoji-Kaisha, distributor of European made films in Japan.

As further proof Japan has taken no part in the impending international motion picture trade "war," Mr. Kawakita explained the purpose of his visit to the United States is to determine the possibility of American producers cooperating in the making of Japanese films for the foreign market.

Before coming here, Mr. Kawakita said he toured Europe and discovered producers there were interested in joint production ventures.

"Of course," he continued, "I realize it will be more difficult to work out such a plan with producers in the United States, principally because of the high salaries paid to stars."

In comparison, he continued, pictures are produced in France and Germany on about the same scale of expenditures as in Japan.

Reverting to the reputed alliance, said to be aimed chiefly at Hollywood, Mr. Kawikita said the company that had agreed to handle "five or six" German films was a new organization formed by persons new to the motion picture business. He added that a small trade journal carried the story of the agreement and from that it was picked up and given widespread publicity as a film bloc made up of the Nazis' "ideological" allies.

The New York Times, though, after saying that "for the first time photoplay relations entered the official realm of international diplomacy" told of the agreement reached between Italy and Germany and then added:

"At the same time a less formal film alliance with Japan was announced. The government-controlled film company Tobis, reached an agreement with the Japanese Tobis—Cocco Tobis Nippon—by which a considerable number of German films are guaranteed distribution in the Japanese film market annually."

Mr. Kawakita's main purpose in coming to the United States, however, is to arrange for distribution of his film, "Daughter of the Samurai," which also is known as "New Earth." He is negotiating with Modern Films.

The picture, Mr. Kawakita explained, was made in Japan with a German director. The star, Setsuko Hara, and Mr. Kawakita's wife are accompanying the distributor on the trip. After a short stay in New York City they will leave for Hollywood and then will sail for Japan on July 14th.

Government control of films in Japan, Mr. Kawakita believes, is in the offing but its only effect will be the establishment of a quota system.

During last year 540 pictures were produced and about the same number will be made this year, he predicted.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Mystery surrounding the disappearance of Pola Negri's cameo brooch in May, 1926, was solved this week.

While workmen were tearing up a block of pavement back of Stage No. 6 in the Paramount studio, the bauble came to light. Oldtimers will recall the loss because of the uproar that resulted when the fiery Polish Pola discovered that the brooch was missing.

Miss Negri was a Paramount star 11 years ago when the pavement was put down and the actress lost the pin.

The place where it was uncovered is close to the spot where her dressing room then was situated. Paramount says that the brooch, in comparatively good condition, will be returned to Miss Negri. The address might be: Miss Appolonia (Pola Negri) Chalupez, c/o Herr Adolph Hitler, Berchlesgaden, Bavaria, Germany.

But, then, they had better send it in care of the General Post Office, Berlin, for didn't World Press Service report the other week that when Hitler heard about the widespread press reports linking his name with Pola, "he burst into tears, crying, 'The slanderers!' "

Broadway generally was aware, and the company definitely said as much, that Warner Brothers were not only negotiating for motion picture rights to the Broadway play, "Room Service," but also felt pretty certain about consummating the deal. Then, with great suddenness, RKO Radio stepped out of character, monetarily, and clinched the deal for $255,000.

In Hollywood, soon after Radio made the purchase, Warners' Mervyn LeRoy met RKO's Sam Briskin, and admonished him for "spending that kind of money for a play." "Sam, you're ruining the business," charged Le Roy.

"But, Mervyn," said Briskin, "what did Warners offer for the rights?"

"$250,000," whispered Le Roy.

We defy any motion picture press agent to top the ingenuity of Jean Belasco, of the Dan Rice Circus in the south.

Seems that Charles Hodel, publisher of the Post-Herald and Raleigh Register at Beckley, West Virginia, is a newspaper proprietor who frowns upon free publicity.

And Belasco is one of those persistent press agents who will scale any fence to gain his point.

In the throes of despair after three days of futile effort to crash the news columns, Belasco finally inserted the following obituary in Mr. Hodel's newspaper:

Odd McIntyre closed his column in the now deceased New York American with the touch paternal in Will Hays. Seems Mr. Hays was on his way to California several weeks ago and had his son Bill, who had just graduated from Wabash, meet him in Chicago for a dinner and theatre celebration together. Next morning, as they were walking Michigan Avenue, the elder Hays stopped interestedly before a good-looking new roadster drawn up at the curb. He noticed, and so remarked, that the initials on the door were the same as his son's—W.H.H., Jr. (William Harrison Hays). By that time the Great Light had broken over the boy. He realized it was a "plant," his father's way of surprising him with a graduation gift.

Which reminded Mr. McIntyre of the same Big Moment in his boyhood. He found a muckle-dun pony hitched to the rack in front of his father's mid-western hotel on a birthday morning. But, spurred beyond a slow walk, the pony suffered from what is known in the veterinarian vernacular as "the heaves"—a breathing malady suggesting sour notes from a tuba.

Whitney Bolton writes back to Broadway from Hollywood the description of Leopold Stokowski doing a "strip-tease" when he conducts for recordings and only musicians are around. He started out in full regalia, including cutaway coat the other afternoon at Universal's studio—and wound up with his shorts and baton. The rest of his clothes were in a huddle at his feet.

At the same studio, Bolton picked up the quip about Joe Pasternak, producer, and his house boy. Pasternak called home late the other afternoon and told the house boy he was working that night and would not be home for dinner. "Very well, sir," said the boy. Then Pasternak asked to speak to his wife. And the boy said: "Who's speaking, please?"

REVIEWS OF BOOKS

LAW OF THE SCREEN, STAGE AND RADIO, by Roger Marchetti. San Francisco: Suttonhouse, Ltd. 452 pp. and Index. Price $10.

Since 1918, when two of the late Nathan Burkan's associates, Louis D. Frohlich and Charles Schwartz, wrote an excellent treatise on the law of motion pictures, no text book dealing with the subject has been published.

Mr. Marchetti has attempted to present a new re-statement of the law in the volume under review. In addition to motion pictures, he has ambitiously extended the scope of his text to include the law of the stage and radio. His presentation of the law in all three fields consists either of the substance of opinions or actual quotations from cases coming under the scrutiny of the courts.

The text is divided into eight parts with subordinate chapters. Part I takes up definitions and distinctions between various forms of entertainment and includes an historical survey of the theatre.

Part II deals with copyright, and Part III with regulation and censorship of stage, screen and radio. In Part IV, the author devotes three pages to defamation, and the remainder of the section to the right of privacy.

Part V is concerned with performing artists and their contracts. In Part VI the author treats of distribution of films; and in Part VII, the largest section of the book, of theatre operation, including under this heading, theatre tickets, safety of patrons and Sunday Laws. The work concludes with a section entitled "Radio Entertainment."

In the preface, the author states that the book is designed as a ready reference volume for the lawyer or executive requiring knowledge of the law in some particular situation, and all other members of the screen, theatrical, and radio professions. His practice, says Mr. Marchetti, demonstrates the need for such a book for the use of laymen as well as lawyers, and to enable the former to understand the work he asserts he has used non-technical phraseology wherever possible.

As regards the layman, the need which the author attempted to meet still remains unsatisfied. The most serious fault in the work is precisely that which the author claims as a virtue—the presentation of the law by opinions of the courts. Not only is the language of many of the opinions selected unduly lengthy, but also, in order to make these opinions understandable, it is necessary to go at length into the facts of each case.

Accordingly, we find that a principle which can be simply stated in a few words must be looked for in the body of a long opinion.

The book gains additional, yet unnecessary bulk, from the author's habit of quoting case after case to establish single propositions. In one instance even the same quotation is repeated. In quoting the opinion of Mr. Justice Stone of the United States Supreme Court, in the famous Tyson theatre ticket case, Mr. Marchetti repeats a half-page of the opinion on page 282, after having already quoted it on page 279. It is also to be regretted that in the matter of quotations, Mr. Marchetti has almost entirely dispensed with the use of quotation marks, so that it is difficult at times to know whether we have the benefit of the author's language or that of the Court.

As if the book were not made unduly lengthy by these extended and repetitive quotations, the author has seen fit to add some unnecessary material regarding the employment of minors, an interesting but non-essential historical sketch, and the full text of the Federal Radio Act of 1934, the latter alone accounting for 58 pages.

The most valuable portion of the text is that entitled "The Theatre and Its Operation," in which Mr. Marchetti has collected a large number of cases dealing with varied instances of negligence in the operation of a theatre. Although the list of cases cited by the author does not appear to be exhaustive, he includes many of the cases which have been decided since Messrs. Frohlich and Schwartz published their work.

The value of the book to the attorney is somewhat reduced by the author's omission of a list of cases and the failure to give official citations for many cases.

On page 137, Mr. Marchetti falls into error in stating or adopting the opinion of a court to the effect that statutes have been recently enacted in many States protecting the right of privacy. As far as can be ascertained, only New York has seen fit to protect the right of privacy by statute; the other States, recognizing the right, have done so only by case law.

In summary, while a good legal text may be partly produced by a scissors-and-paste-pot method, it calls for a technique with which Mr. Marchetti does not seem overly familiar. Leon H. Amdur's recent "Copyright Law and Practice" is a good example of how this may be accomplished. Unless Messrs. Frohlich and Schwartz can be induced to bring their text down to date, we fear that the motion picture and theatrical industries still await an up-to-date treatment of the law in these fields.—M. MARVIN BERGER (member New York Bar).

Opposition to Plan for RKO Draws Attack

Opposition to the proposed plan of reorganization for RKO in New York was attacked Monday as coming from "an insignificant minority" by H. C. Rickaby, attorney for the Atlas Corporation, proponents of the plan, in his summation in the last hearing on the plan before Special Master George W. Alger.

Mr. Rickaby charged that less than 10 per cent of the outstanding common stock held by others than the Atlas Corporation and RCA had filed objections to the plan in contrast to the unanimous approval of creditors and a large portion of stockholders.

Joseph M. Cohn, associate counsel for the independent protective committee for common stockholders, countered with an assertion that the Atlas Corporation was not a "bona fide purchaser" of RKO securities and that RCA had agreed to reimburse Atlas if the proposed plan falls through. Mr. Rickaby heatedly denied this allegation and also denied Mr. Cohen's statement that RCA had financed a stockholders' committee which had accepted the plan. A request that the plan be amended to provide for issuance of new Class A stock was made by Harry J. Allen and William Saltiel, associate attorneys for John Stover, who representes Ernest W. Stirn, a holder of 1,234 shares of Class A. The plea was based on alleged illegal conversion of Class A stock to common in 1931. Mr. Allen said that the outstanding common is "junior" to the old Class A and that Class A holders were deprived of "preferential rights" when RCA allegedly exchanged 500,000 shares of Class B for common.

The exchange was denied by Mr. Rickaby, who contended that RCA received this stock for underwriting the 1931 issue of securities. He also charged that Mr. Stirn had delayed too long in bringing suit and that thousands of shares of common stock had been traded on the stock exchange with knowledge of Mr. Stirn's claim.

Mr. Rickaby defended the Rockefeller Center settlement of its $9,000,000 claim for 500,000 shares of new RKO common. He pointed out that all creditors accepted the settlement and that rejection of the settlement might require a new plan to be written. Mr. Rickaby said that few New York first run houses earned large profits but that the Music Hall's value to RKO was "a national advertisement." The plan was characterized as fair, equitable and feasible. Its feasibility is best shown by the earnings of the past two years and the reduction of the debt of subsidiaries by $4,000,000 to $5,000,000, according to Mr. Rickaby. He added that he regarded rejection of the plan and continuation of the trusteeship as "inconceivable."

The time for the Irving Trust Company, RKO trustee, to accept or disaffirm leases and other contracts made by the company before it entered receivership in June, 1934, was extended this week to January 1, 1938, by Federal Judge William Bondy in New York. The Irving Trust Company said in its petition that all leases and contracts which have been brought to its attention have been acted upon.

Dispute Sets Back Roxy Theatre Case

A dispute over the terms of the film franchise between Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and the Roxy theatre caused postponement last week for one week of the hearing before Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey on the approved plan of reorganization of the Roxy theatre in New York. A conference between attorneys and officers of Twentieth Century-Fox has been set for this week also to settle various differences which have arisen.

Milton H. Frankfurt of the law firm of Kadel, Van Kirk and Trencher, made an application to Judge Caffey to permit Roemer-Kenny Company and George Garrson to enter the reorganization proceedings in order to secure allowance for brokerage fees. Mr. Frankfurt said that his client had effected the sale of the Roxy to Twentieth Century-Fox. Judge Caffey refused to make a ruling in the absence of written motion papers.

Formal naming of the trustee under the new indenture was also postponed, but it was learned from attorneys that Judge Caffey's naming the Continental Bank and Trust Company earlier this week as the lowest bidder is taken to mean that Continental will be named the trustee.

Carle Laemmle, Jr., Is Now Officially with MGM

Carl Laemmle, Jr., has been signed to a long-term contract as producer by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, an announcement of the company said this week. His first picture under the new contract will be "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," which had a run recently on Broadway as a play.

Considered one of the more prominent executives in the industry, Mr. Laemmle entered the industry while still in his teens as a producer for his father's Universal Pictures. He first had charge of the Universal Jewel series, "The Collegians," and the H. C. Witwer "Leather Pushers." In 1929 he was appointed general manager in charge of all Universal production, where he remained until the company was sold, in April 1936. Among the pictures he produced are "All Quiet on the Western Front," "Showboat," "Frankenstein," "The Invisible Man" and "Journey's End."

THE CUTTING ROOM

The Prisoner of Zenda

(UA-Selznick)

Adventure, Romance

Fifteen years have elapsed since Anthony Hope's famous story of intrigue, drama, romance and adventure in the mythical kingdom of Ruritania was last directly used as screened material. In the meantime, the idea has been used scores of times. Consequently everybody must know that it is a glamorous story, told in an old world atmosphere, and, necessarily a costume play. What the present generation may not know or oldsters may have forgotten is that it is the essence of dramatic romantic entertainment. Thus the showmanship job required in connection with this forthcoming production is to notify modern minded audiences that "The Prisoner Of Zenda" is mythical kingdom romance adventure, supercharged with melodramatic intrigue through which run veins of comedy, mystery and suspense. As David O. Selznick is producing it, it promises to be rich in colorful spectacle of mythical kingdom pageantry and combatative action.

In plot, the King awaits coronation. His brother plans to seize the throne by a coup d'etat. Accepting his brother's invitation to visit a hunting lodge, the King is made prisoner. Meanwhile, fellow conspirators noting the remarkable resemblance and further knowing that the impostor has royal blood in his veins place him on the throne. Adventure follows adventure as the pseudo king meets and falls in love with a royal princess. Planning to return with her to England, the real King regains his power and the imposter is slain.

To bring this story to modern screen realism, Mr. Selznick has chosen a capable cast. The principal players are Ronald Coleman, Madeleine Carroll, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Mary Astor, C. Aubrey Smith, Raymond Massey and David Niven. The supporting roster which is very lengthy lists Montague Love, William Von Brucken, Phillips Sleeman, Elinore Wesselhoft, Florence Roberts, Torben Meyer, Lawrence Grant, Ian Maclaren, Al Shean, Pat Somerset and Lillian Harmer.

To direct the story and players, Mr. Selznick chose John Cromwell, who now is making "Marco Polo" for Samuel Goldwyn. Mr. Cromwell is not inexperienced in the arts and sciences of handling big production. Included among his credits and accomplishments which presage the class and quality of "The Prisoner of Zenda" are "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "Banjo On My Knee," "To Mary—With Love," "Of Human Bondage," "Double Harness" and "The Silver Cord."

Release date: Not determined, but after September 1.

Easy Living

(Paramount)

Comedy Romance

Scanning this forthcoming production for potential entertainment and showmanship values it appears that it will be one of surprises from both viewpoints. The principal surprise, particularly from a commercial standpoint, undoubtedly is found in the casting, as comedians, of Jean Arthur, who has been featured in melodramatic roles (except in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town"), and Edward Arnold. The theme is also surprising. Though it is a farce comedy dramatic treatment of the Cinderella premise, it is very different from the formula conception of that plot.

An expensive fur coat drops out of the skies into a girl's lap. Attempting to return the garment, she sets off a train of incidents that involve her in a domestic drama and make her the central figure in a bit of stock market hysteria that precipitates a crash. Further complicating matters, after she has been installed in an expensive hotel, where she is looked upon as more than a friend of the most important man in Wall Street, she falls in love with the man's son. Her attempts to adjust all that she has caused to happen promise to make interesting and exciting comedy amusement.

Adapted from a story by Vera Caspary, the screen play is by Preston Sturges. Directing is Mitchell Leisen, known as adept in handling both comedy and melodrama.

Name values supplementing the drawing power of Miss Arthur and Arnold include Ray Milland, recently in "The Jungle Princess" and "Three Smart Girls"; Luis Alberni, the skillful interpreter of comic Italian roles; Franklyn Pangborn, Marsh Narsh, Marsha Hunt, Lee Bowman and William Demarest. Many other wellknown players will be seen in less important roles.

Release date: July 16.

The Perfect Specimen

(Warner)

Comedy Romance

Checking off the personalities who will appear, it is evident that the producers have gone to great lengths to accommodate the varied and diverse demands for name values. Listed for important parts in this forthcoming feature, and all of them have quite a lot to do are: Errol Flynn, Joan Blondell, Dick Foran, Beverly Roberts, Edward Everett Horton, Hugh Herbert, May Robson, Marie Wilson, Warren Hymer, Donald Meek, Granville Bates, Andrew Tombes and Hugh O'Connell.

The story is comedy romance. It concerns a young man about whom the legend has grown up that he is a perfect specimen. He's that because he has been sheltered all his life and kept away from the world. But when he breaks out into the open, he's anything but what the hot house variety of "mamma's boy" is presumed to be. Able to take care of himself with his fists to the extent of trouncing a burly truck driver and knocking out a boxing champion, he also knows how to earn his own living as an auto mechanic and when it comes to affairs of the heart, he knows all the rules and regulations as well as the loopholes by which they may be circumvented. Women are not strangers to him and he knows how to handle them whether they be his very determined guardians or a young lady who is determined to get her man.

With Lawrence Riley and Norman Raine collaborating on the screen play the original is credited to the noted humorist, Samuel Hopkins Adams. Michael Curtiz is the director.

Combining both exciting action and lively dialogue in its comedy, light drama and romance, story seems to possess an unique and potential amusement character that will make possible much novel exploitation.

That's My Story

(Universal)

Comedy, Romance, Melodrama

Although the title may be only vaguely indicative thereof, the fact is that this is a newspaper story. The effort to inject novelty into newspaper yarns, difficult because everybody apparently knows all about the trials and tribulations of boy and girl reporters, is becoming intense. Associate producer Robert Presnell is attempting the novel approach in this instance by adapting the boy meets girl premise to the mechanics of making a newspaper reporter picture. The departure is effective by having the right boy meet the wrong girl. Assigned to interview the murderess, he interviews a rival sob sister and thereby several hoaxes that make his journal look foolish are perpetrated. Still the boy falls in love with the girl. He gets her out of trouble, helps recapture the escaped murderess and her minions, but in doing so another hoax ensues which causes them to decide they had better pursue their journalistic careers together in another locality where their escapades are not so well known. Vee Terrys Perlman wrote the original, Barry Trivers did the screen play and Sidney Salkow is directing.

William Lundigan and Claudia Morgan are the stars. The feature support includes Bernadine Hayes, Ralph Morgan, Hobart Cavanaugh, Herbert Mundin and Eddie Garr. Atmospheric and character roles are assumed by Charles Wilson, Harlan Briggs, Eddie Gargan, Charles Trowbridge, Jerry Mandy and Murray Alper.

Hot Water

(20th Century-Fox)

Domestic Comedy

Having continued through five pictures, the entertainment worth and commercial value of "The Jones Family" series, particularly as neighborhood and small town theatre attractions, is generally recognized. Clean, wholesome, comic and gayly exciting that manner in which they treat of domestic comedy, drama and romance is intimately familiar.

As the title readily indicates, this number will have the Joneses in hot water. What happens to amuse comes about when the head of the household goes into politics and runs for mayor. Intent on giving the underworld a battle, the political sharks strike back at the candidate. His favorite son becomes involved in a framed-up scandal and the efforts of the whole family, particularly the youngsters, are required to get Dad out an embarrassing political and domestic mix-up.

The regular Jones family is returned intact for the picture. Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Florence Roberts, George Ernest, Kenneth Howell, Shirley Deane, June Carlson and Billy Mahan again appear as the characters they created. Russell Gleason, who has been in other recent pictures of the series, will also be seen, while Joan Marsh and Marjorie Weaver are newcomers to the menage.

Based on the characters created by Katharine Kavanaugh, the original story used in this instance is credited to Ron Ferguson and Eleanor DeLamater and Robert Chapin and Karen De Wolf did the screen play. Frank Strayer, who is as much a fixture in the productions as the members of the family, is directing.

Action Drama

Sir Rider Haggard's famous novel, one of the favorites of many generations of schoolboys and one of those books which justify the cliché that it appeals to the young of all ages, is ready-made film material of the very highest order. It demands production on a large and expensive scale. It has certainly received it from Gaumont-British, which sent a unit to South Africa and employed thousands of natives in mass scenes of dancing, witchcraft and warfare. Pictorially and dramatically the result justifies the enterprise; "King Solomon's Mines" is real entertainment, splendid spectacle, Adventure with a capital "A" against authentic and striking backgrounds of African veldt and mountain. There is everything in it to appeal to lovers of action.

As a selling propostion the picture, with the initial advantage that accent in the dialogue is an insignificant factor in a production in which events speak more eloquently than words, has many outstanding points. There are war scenes with thousands of plumed black spearsmen sweeping in long lines from the horizon into breast-to-breast conflict; a grim portrayal of a ceremony of native sacrifice, with a gnarled witch smelling out victims from the circled tribe; a very striking reproduction of the famous episode of the book in which the travellers, in the grip of a sadistic black king, take advantage of an eclipse in order to pretend that they can darken the sun; a fine climax in which the diamond mine is destroyed by a volcanic eruption, with the whites imprisoned in the flaming crater.

Paul Robeson, well cast as a big native servant, later revealed to be a King in search of his lost country, is a star name, backed by a song or two which, even if slightly out of story, are likely to appeal to his fans.

The story, in which a love interest has been written into the original, centers upon a map, showing the location of the diamond mine supposed to have been operated by King Solomon in the heart of unexplored Africa. An Irish adventurer, O'Brien, and his daughter Kathy obtain the map. The father goes off on foot to discover the mine. His daughter persuades Umbora, a native servant, to steal the wagon and oxen of Allan Quartermaine, hunter, and go with her in search of her father. Quartermaine, with his employers, Sir Henry Curtis and Commander Good, overtake her but finally consent to join her search.

The party survives a march across waterless desert and, reaching the mountain range in which the mine is supposed to be located, falls into the hands of a warlike native tribe. They pose as "white gods," and are fearfully accepted at the valuation by the tribe. The King, however, plots to get rid of them with the aid of an aged woman witch doctor who is the guardian of the sacred mine. A savage "heresy hunt" is staged; the old woman circles the assembled tribe and smells out "evil spirits." The doomed individuals are instantly speared. When she is about to indicate Umbopa, the eclipse comes and the sun is darkened, at the supposed command of the white gods. Umbopa is revealed as the rightful king of the tribe. The usurper calls in the aid of neighboring tribes. There is a great battle and Umbopa is victorious. He gives his white friends the entree to the mines. They discover O'Brien imprisoned there. The witch-guardian shuts them in the mine, which is situated in the crater of a volcano. An eruption threatens them with death, but Umbopa rescues them from the lava and the falling rocks which extinguish the mine. O'Brien's store makes the whole party rich. Sir Henry and Kathy return as affianced lovers.

Romance and thrilling adventure, working to a climax genuinely of the breathless variety, and which incidentally is a real technical achievement, the picture definitely offers new entertainment values against a new background. The cast includes Roland Young, in a droll ultra-English role, and Sir Cedric Hardwicke as the taciturn hunter. Anna Lee, too well-groomed for her surroundings, and John Loder are the juveniles. There is an impressive study of the savage king by Robert Adams, and the natives are magnificent types seen and heard in seemingly authentic dances and chants.

At the trade show at the Phoenix Theatre the reception was understandably enthusiastic. General opinion rated it as an exceptional box-office possibility.

Wee Willie Winkie

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy, Romance, Melodrama

"Wee Willie Winkie" is a good audience and exhibitor picture for many reasons. The most important one, and there is no doubt the public will be quick to perceive it and upon which managers will be eager to lay their hands, is that in it a new and very different Shirley Temple is presented. No longer is she just a cute youngster, possessed of remarkable talents. Never once is the ranking box office personality called upon to fall back upon her familiar bag of tricks, her singing, dancing and mimicing that have been considered such standby assets in other films. Instead, she is cast in a dramatic role, which she handles in masterful fashion and from which she emerges a decidedly new and different character. The departure presages the plan that undoubtedly will be adopted to permit the little star to continue her already amazing career.

Still, for all of this new Miss Temple and its particular significance to theatre operators, the screen conception of Rudyard Kipling's robust adventure romance drama is a happy combination of those elements which patrons expect and showmen need in an important picture. The story, which combines appealing human interest sentimentality with vigorous action and compensates comedy with gripping suspense, is interesting. It's realistic, yet, wisely, it is not without dashes of hokum. While human drama is concentrated upon, there is a romantic counterplot which, engaging in itself, does not trespass on the basic motivation. There is good acting. Capable Victor McLaglen and C. Aubrey Smith see to that, and Cesar Romero, June Lang, Michael Whalen, Douglas Scott and Constance Collier are not lax in their support of the principal trio. Production detail, exterior and interior backgrounds, military pageantry and stirring martial conflict expertly staged and photographed in a sepia tint and the quality of musical accompaniment visibly and auricularly augment the power and appeal of the thematic content. In personalities, story and production facilities John Ford had a lot available. Placing due stress upon each, he has wrapped them all together into a piece of film merchandise in a convincing believable way which goes without saying the public and showmen will appreciate.

A strictly disciplined British cantonment guarding India's Khyber Pass doesn't promise to be a happy home for homeless widow "Joyce Williams" and her daughter "Priscilla." There's always the threat that the rigidly suppressed natives will erupt in cruel fury. Some happiness comes to "Joyce" in romance with "Lieutenant Brandes," a love which she fears but cannot deny. "Priscilla's" relations with "Sergeant MacDuff," who dubs her "Wee Willie Winkie" and who trains her in the rudiments of a soldier, which develop into an affection finer than any physical love are shrewdly handled to induce the most tender sentimental reactions. Her rebuffs at the hands of drummer boy "Mr. Mott" are laughable demonstrations of childish jealousy. But when "Wee Willie" gradually wins the love of her hard headed soldier grandfather, "Colonel Williams," honest sentimentality reaches its apex.

The humanness of the first part of the picture gives way to thrill action when "Wee Willie Winkie" is decoyed into being the medium through which native chieftain "Kohda Khan" escapes. A wild rush of savages into the outpost turns it into a cauldron of danger. At last the natives and soldiers are coming to grips for control of Khyber. But "Wee Willie," who has been treacherously led into "Khoda's" stronghold, forestalls carnage. Because of a kindness which the child had done him upon the occasion of his capture, he listens to her pleas. Hand in hand he leads her down the steps of Khyber to meet the ascending "Williams" and seal a bond of peace.

In every way the picture seems to be that fine kind of screen entertainment that should meet with general approval. Some may find inconsistencies and imperfections, but in relation to the whole, these are very meager. It is quite likely, as in the case here in Los Angeles, that the entertainment worth of "Wee Willie Winkie" will be in the air long before it is available for general presentation. That people here want to see it is proved by the fact that Carthay Circle Theatre, where the picture was given a world premiere Friday, June 25, and where a $5.50 top reigned, was sold out for days. Tickets were at a premium and the writer does not recall such a condition since the theatre was reopened as an extended run house.

Previewed to a few representatives of trade and daily press in a studio projection room in Hollywood, the reporters usually quite reticent in expressing opinions to each other, couldn't quite contain themselves. Those given to slang were heard to murmur "knockout;" the more erudite indulged in such expressions as "amazing" and "extraordinary."—GUS MCCARTHY.

Between Two Women

(MGM)

Romantic Melodrama

Although this title has definite showmanship value for the terse yet complete manner in which it describes the dramatic romantic plot of the story, it also obscures the fact that this is a hospital picture. Maybe the choice of label is wise. Maybe it is not. Either way, proof rests in the manner in which showmen elect to handle the production. Considering the picture from the viewpoint of its potentialities as entertainment and as a commercial venture, it is reasonable to presume that "Between Two Women" will attract attention. Because of the picture's character, however, one must expect that interest will be found in the more serious minded audience contingents. While it is not devoid of action and thrill, both qualities are presented in such a way that those who like to see their entertainment dashing across the screen may have little appetite for it.

The plot is simple and strong. It is also familiar, but it has been given several novel twists which set it apart from the routine hospital picture. The emotion stirring quality of the thematic romance and melodrama is accentuated and made more gripping by the way in which the atmosphere of a General Hospital in a big city has been made to serve as a background for the motivation.

Early parts of the picture which illustrate hospital operation and activities also inform audiences that "Doctor Meighan" has devoted his life to the easing of human suffering and, further, that he has a friendly personal interest in married nurse "Claire." Treating wealthy patient "Patricia Sloan," he falls in love with and marries her. His life with her, pleasant for a time, soon encounters difficulties. An open breach comes when "Meighan" prefers to do his duty as a doctor rather than attend social functions. With the death of "Claire's" husband, "Tom," brought about by "Dr. Woolcott's" bungling, for which he is later debarred, the story assumes its tense dramatic character.

Convinced that "Meighan" will never become a socialitie doctor, and that life with him would be a shallow future, "Patricia" plans to desert him. She chooses "Woolcott" as the man with whom she shall run away. The train on which they are fleeting is wrecked. But "Meighan," unaware of the circumstances, performs a miraculous operation on "Woolcott" which saves him from being a cripple. "Dr. Webster" operates on "Patricia." At the anti-climax, when "Meighan" learns that he has just cause for divorce that would open the way to new and happier life for him with "Claire," he wants to remain with "Patricia." But she, more through selfishness than desire to sacrifice a love that does not belong to her, is determined on divorce. Knowing that there can be no hope of happiness with her, "Meighan" returns to service in General Hospital and to "Claire."

Because of the quality of the story, it seems that it would be unwise to exploit the picture as a hospital story. Naturally, it will be impossible to avoid conveying some hints as to the character of the background, nevertheless, earnest efforts should be made to emphasize the emotion stirring qualities of the motivation. Cooperation from doctors and hospitals is logical, but not altogether necessary.

Previewed in the Fox Uptown Theatre, Los Angeles, where MGM usually shows its secondary films. The reaction of the audience, which at times gave evidence that it was irritated by the way in which sequences were either unduly stressed or long drawn out, nevertheless indicated that the producers may have a better attraction than they anticipated. Undoubtedly the picture will be returned for further editing, cutting and tightening up. When this is accomplished, exhibitors will have a picture that may develop into a surprisingly strong attraction.—G. M.

Forlorn River

(Paramount)

Western

The title has a melancholic ring, the running time isn't very impressive, the cast doesn't look like one that might start spectators rushing towards box offices. Yet "Forlorn River" is one of the most exciting action and all around pleasing western pictures that has come along in a long time.

Western stories have come and gone; there probably will be no dearth of them in the future. Generally there is not much variation in any of them. If they are well done that's about all anyone can expect. "Forlorn River" happens to be one of those pictures that follows the A-B-C fundamentals of action entertainment. It's produced with an eye to detail that makes believable all that is seen and with plenty of background atmosphere to provide the correct settings for a lot of heroic heroics and suave villainy. The backgrounds of rugged scenery, the thrill action and excitement lend a picturesque touch to the story which revolves around the trapping of a horse rustler.

The cast is entirely efficient. All contribute good performances, although many times their activities are tinged with hokum and theatricalism that makes the whole thing seem wild and woolly. Trouble is the lot of "Nevada" and "Weary" after they relieve "Setter's" gang of the proceeds of a bank robbery. "Setter" manages to have them caught by sheriff "Warner." They escape, however, and land on a ranch where old friend "Ide" is holding forth as foreman and romancing with "Ina." As a dash of comedy concerning "Cook" and pie-eating "Weary" is worked in, "Setter" appears, posing as an honest horse buyer. The ensuing developments are evident and not disappointing. "Nevada" anticipates "Setter's" plot, but the villian again stymies him, "Weary" and "Ben." Just as "Setter" is ready to ambush the herd, the trio come dashing into action to precipitate a stampede and tempo of much shooting and breakneck riding, "Setter" is trapped, the herd saved for "Ina" and "Ben" and sheriffs "Grundy" and "Warner" left to argue as to who shall have the pleasure of hanging "Setter."

The kind of screen merchandise that can be depended upon to enthuse the youngsters no end, there is also a distinct possibility that, under proper handling, "Forlorn River" will surprise and please lots of grownups. Logically the film cannot be exploited as any kind of an epic, but if people are made aware that it is soundly prepared, directed and acted thrill action entertainment, the chances are better than even that in that class of theatres where people prefer to see rather than hear their entertainment, it will prove a pleasing offering.

The Emperor's Candlesticks

(MGM-Considine)

Melodramatic Romance

This is a talking picture. William Powell and Luise Rainer are the stars. In order of the time in which they have anything to say or do on the screen, Frank Morgan, Robert Young, Maureen O'Sullivan, Henrv Stephenson, E. E. Clive and Paul Forcasi are the important support. The semi-mystery plot which develops romantic love interest is based on a game of hide-and-seek idea. The locales are Vienna, several European capitals presented via montage and St. Petersburg. The time evidently is some years before the World War, when wits and intrigue were the weapons with which suspicious countries faced each other.

The capture of "Grand Duke Peter" costumed as "Romeo," watched over by "Colonel Suroff" garbed as "Hamlet" who was lured into the hands of Polish Nationalists by "Juliet" attired "Maria" brings secret agents "Baron Stephen Wolensky" and "Countess Olga Mironova" into the picture. "Wolensky" is ordered to deliver a message to the Czar of Russia demanding an imprisoned Polish patriot's release, otherwise "Peter" will be killed. This adds much to "Suroff's" jittery bewilderment. "Olga" is instructed to deliver a message to the Czar which will mean "Wolensky's" liquidation.

"Prince Johan" wants to send a pair of candlesticks to Russia and asks "Wolensky" to carry them. He shows him they have trick secret compartments. A fine place for his message. Meanwhile "Olga" sees the candlesticks and what a fine place they would be for her message and much to her rival's chagrin, she is entrusted with the delivery of the message-bearing ornaments. While the two talk themselves into love, the candlesticks are stolen and following a walking search chase all over Europe, each buys one at an auction. "Wolensky" gets the one containing his death warrant, which doesn't surprise him, but he outwits "Olga" to regain possession of his own document. Heroically and to demonstrate his great love he delivers both messages to the Czar. The Polish prisoner is released, and back in Vienna so are "Peter" and "Suroff," without so much as a goodbye to "Maria." Unlike the popular conception of heartless Russian Czar. The Polish prisoner is released, and only does he spare the life of the agent who forced him to give up a prize prisoner, but he spares the life of the woman who failed him and paroles them into each other's custody.

There's very little action in the film. As it's nice to look at because it's lavishly produced and Powell and Miss Rainer are attractive to watch, it is, however, one that requires audiences to listen to.

Slim

(Warners)

Romance-Melodrama

During the past several years, Warner Brothers have used virtually all branches of the United States Army, Navy and Marine Corps, as well as commercial aviation, as backgrounds for motion pictures. Now, they take a line which has not been treated previously, to depict the life and common adventures of the men who string electrical power wires across the country.

The picture was taken from the novel of the same name by William Wister Haines and all the material which made the book a best-seller is included in the picture. Ingenious showmen should have little trouble selling this one, especially to the men. The romantic angle that appeals so much to women is there as well, in the love of Henry Fonda and Margaret Lindsay.

"Slim" Kincaid (Henry Fonda), farmer boy, is enthralled by the work of a gang of high-tension line tower builders putting up towers across his farm, and determines to become a lineman. With the aid of "Red" Blayd (Pat O'Brien), the outstanding lineman in the business, he succeeds and the two men become great pals as well.

O'Brien is discharged when he takes the blame for an accident to save his old foreman's job and Fonda quits with him. With their combined savings they head for Chicago where O'Brien takes his friend to a hospital and introduces him to Cally Richards (Margaret Lindsay), with whom he is in love, but whom he has never asked to be his wife because of his love for his work. The three then spend the men's savings, and O'Brien and Fonda head back to work on the towers.

Fonda and Miss Lindsay carry on a correspondence, each one having fallen in love with the other in Chicago but keeping the fact hidden because of loyalty to O'Brien.

On the new job, Fonda and another lineman, who is jealous of O'Brien, get into a fight when Fonda catches the man trying to foul his partner's equipment and in the battle Fonda is stabbed and rushed to a hospital. He writes Miss Lindsay that he is not seriously hurt, but she does not believe him and leaves her nursing job in Chicago to go west to nurse him. On the day that Fonda is released from the hospital, O'Brien finds the lovers in each other's arms and they confess they want to marry. O'Brien accepts the situation in good grace and tells Fonda he is leaving for the east for another job with their old foreman. Fonda is then torn between his love for Miss Lindsay, who wants him to give up the dangerous work, and his love for his job and a promise to his old foreman. His work wins out.

Miss Lindsay then follows them and finds that they are out on a repair job at a powerhouse where thousands of volts are being carried by the damaged wires. Just as she arrives where the men are working, a cable breaks, throwing O'Brien off his perch, from which he falls just as Fonda reaches for him.

The final scene shows Fonda climbing back to the tower to finish the job his now dead partner started with the promise that Miss Lindsay will be waiting for him.

There are many gripping scenes in the picture which can be well used to the advantage of showmen in their selling campaigns, but it might do well for them to see the film first to ascertain just what might apply to their own situations.

The Hoosier Schoolboy

(Monogram)

Human Interest Drama

A homey, human and emotion arousing picture of rural life in a small Indiana community that, maintaining continually the human interest element, makes a strong appeal for the family trade. A story built around a young son's love for his shell-shocked father, it is honest realism superbly acted by one of teh screen's finest young craftsmen, Mickey Rooney.

As a supporting player Mickey has turned in some memorable performances in the past and he can be counted upon to stimulate any production. In "The Hoosier Schoolboy" he has the leading role, a difficult task that might easily have become maudlin, which with the mature conviction of his acting is believable, realistic and highly entertaining. Edward Pawley, the shell-shocked veteran, is also on the very good side. Anne Nagel and Frank Shields, onetime tennis star and Wimbledon finalist, carry the romantic interludes with Miss Nagel having the better of it.

"Shockey" (Mickey Rooney), 14-year-old boy living with his father on the "wrong" side of the tracks, is about to be expelled from school. The father, Captain in the World War, hero, and shell-shocked, has taken to drink to forget and unknowingly is the cause of his son's trouble. "Shockey" resenting the slurs of his schoolmates is constantly fighting with them. "Mary" (Anne Nagel), the new schoolteacher, befriends "Shockey" and has him reinstated in school.

A milk strike is on and "Matthews, Sr." (William Gould) attempting to force the strikers to his terms buys milk from other towns. His son, "Matthews, Jr." (Frank Shields) joins with the farmers in their strike against his father. Previously the son had obtained a job for the Captain in his father's employ. The strikers barricade the roads and when the Captain is sent out with a truck he is killed trying to get through. Saddened and alone "Shocky" prepares to leave the town when "Matthews, Sr." arrives and takes the boy to his home to live.

La Grande Illusion

(The Great Illusion)

(Realizations d'Art Cinematographique)

War Melodrama

This outstanding French film which opened a week ago at the Marivaux, and which is drawing large crowds, in spite of the heat wave which persists, is getting no more praise than it honestly deserves. "La Grande Illusion" is, by far, the best French film of the year, up to date—in fact, it is one of the best French films ever made.

The original story is by Jean Renoir and Charles Spaak, and it concerns prisoners in Germany during the Great War. Jean Renoir is to be complimented on his excellent handling of the subject. This film, although a war picture, is treated in a different way from most films on the same subject. No actual fighting is to be seen, and the film deals rather with people taken from all walks of life, and of different nationalities, thrown together by the wheels of fate. The story is briefly this: Two French officers, Captain de Boeldieu of the General Staff and an old St. Cyrien, and Maréchal, a mechanic in the aviation (risen to the rank of Lieutenant), while out reconnoitering, are forced down into the German lines, where, although taken prisoners, they are chivalrously received by a Captain in the Air Force, Von Rauffenstein. They are sent to a concentration camp where their comrades are fellow prisoners of all nationalities—French, English Tommies, Russian, . . . They are put in a room with other French soldiers, who, like themselves, long to be able to return to the front and do their bit for the defense of their country. When at last, after months of patience and hard and often dangerous work, their plan to escape is completed, they are moved to another camp. De Boeldieu, Maréchal and a Jew called Rosenthal are sent to a well guarded fortress, where, as Governor of the prison, they find von Rauffenstein badly shot up and no longer on active service. A friendship, based on mutual respect, springs up between him and de Boeldieu, and an intensely moving part of the film is where von Rauffenstein is obliged, in order to carry out his duty, to shoot the French officer, de Boeldieu, for whom he has so much respect and admiration. De Boeldieu sacrifices himself in order to help Maréchal and Rosenthal escape.

At this point of the film, love interest is woven into the story, and although not indispensable to the picture it in no way mars it. And Dita Parlo plays the part of a German peasant war widow, who befriends the two escaped prisoners, to perfection. Maréchal and Rosenthal eventually reach Switzerland.

The scenes showing life in the concentration camp are amongst the best in the film, and one scene in particular is worthy of much praise. The prisoners are getting up a concert. News comes that Douaumont has been taken by the Germans. In spite of this the concert goes on, and the prisoners entertain the German officers. Suddenly a French officer dashes on to the stage. He is able to declare triumphantly that Douaumont has been retaken by the French. For a brief second there is silence, then, led by a British Tommy, disguised as a chorus girl, the entire company takes up La Marseillaise. It is a gripping moment and one of many in this excellent film. Special attention has been paid to detail, and action is fast, and one's interest taken from the beginning to the final scene.

The excellent idea, which strongly accentuates reality of atmosphere by introducing different languages, spoken by characters of different nationalities (with sub-titles), has also been brought into this film. With "La Grande Illusion," Jean Renoir has risen to take his place amongst the first ranks of film directors from all over the world. He has been greatly aided in his work by an excellent all round cast, in which Jean Gabin, already well known on the French screen, adds to his many successes, of which the most recent is "Pepe Le Moko." In "La Grande Illusion," he is outstanding in the role of Maréchal, and it can definitely be said of him, that he has reached the top—to stay. Erich von Stroheim enters completely into his role of the German officer, Von Rauffenstein, and Pierre Fresnay is excellent as the aristocrat French officer, de Boeldieu. Dialogue is very clever and technical work and photography, excellent. "La Grande Illusion" is surely a film with a very strong international appeal, for, apart from its other merits, rarely has a film been treated so impartially and so humanely.

Rhythm in the Clouds

(Republic)

Romance, Comedy

An unpretentious but pleasantly diverting light entertainment mixture of romance, comedy and music that falls short of attaining a higher rating because it lacks good story values. Centered in the realm of broadcasting, as so many stories now are, its chief fault is its lack of suspense and the implausibility of its situations. However, if the faults are not taken too seriously the picture will be found to have a melodious score, some good comedy and adequate production features.

The cast seemingly obtain the most from their roles. They are industrious and eager to please but, from an exploitation viewpoint, lack drawing power. Patricia Ellis and Warren Hull have the leading parts and are supported by William Newell, Richard Carle, Zeffie Tilbury, Charles Judels and David Carlyle and a number of others.

"Judy Walker" starving song writer, is about to be turned out of her rooming house for failure to pay the rent. She receives a letter from "Phil Hale," ace song writer, which says that he (Hale) is going out of town and will look into her song writing when he returns. "Judy" with ink eradicator erases the message and types a note above Hale's signature which lands her in his apartment. By a ruse "Judy" has her music accepted by a radio agency.

"Bob McKay" is hired by the agency to write lyrics for "Judy's" music. "Judy" and "Bob" become friends. "Judy" has been having a feud with her neighbor, the two of them banging away on the walls to see who could make the most noise. "Bob" is her neighbor, and when "Judy" finds out they become enemies but soon patch it up. Complications arise when jealous "Dorothy Day" points out to "Bob" that "Judy" occupies "Hale's" apartment. "Hale" returns and is all for exposing "Judy" but "Bob" saves the day and his romance with "Judy" by some quick thinking.

The Circus Comes to Town

(Paramount)

Very Good

What might be called a typical day in the life of a traveling circus is detailed here. It is a slant into the inner workings of the circus from detraining in the morning to the breakup in the evening and at the end what impresses most is that the workmen and the performers have done a hard day's work. For from the moment the circus detrains its people are continuously busy. In the morning the tents and other paraphernalia are made ready. The parade follows lunch, after which the customers gather on the midway to view the freaks. The performance in the big tent is climaxed with an exhibition by Clyde Beatty, after which the audience leaves and the tearing down begins prior to leaving for another town and another day. Running time, 10 minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction, No. 37

(Universal)

Novelty

Different and entertaining is the material presented in this issue. Cleverly shown and skillfully edited, the items of oddity include a New York restaurant that is strangely affected by strong magnetic currents coming from a neighboring power plant; a Limehouse lady who has the peculiar assignment of arousing residents in her district by shooting peas at their window panes; an eagle, a horned owl, a hawk and a couple of ravens, supposedly natural enemies, sitting down to a common meal with amusing results; an acrobatically inclined mailman and little Miss Hildegarde Spitz and her special dog cart. Running time, 8½ min.

A Car-Tune Portrait

(Paramount)

Excellent

A swiftly-paced animated cartoon effectively photographed in color. An all-around cencert orchestra attempts to prove that animals can meet on harmonious grounds. The leader, a lion dressed in "tails," opens the proceedings with an address that drips with honey and chiefly notable for the perfect and smooth flowing diction. Symphonic music follows and the animals all intent on the score are haloed in the serene atmosphere of perfect understanding. The animals can't stand it for long though and soon let down their hair and engage in a battle royal. A Max Fleischer color classic. Running time, 7 minutes.

The Impractical Joker

(Paramount)

Betty Boop

A cleverly contrived Betty Boop cartoon costarring Grampy, that genius of mechanical applicances. Irving, Betty's cousin and an inveterate practical joker, tries out his bag of tricks on Betty. The Boop girl calls on Grampy for help in handling Irving. The old boy goes to work laying out a series of pitfalls for Irving. When Irving, lured into Grampy's room, tries some more of his tricks, Grampy puts his machinery into action with disastrous results for Irving. Running time, 7 minutes.

Friml Favorites

(Paramount)

Tuneful

The young and good looking son of the well known composer, Rudolf Friml, gives to his famous father's music a carefully orchestrated and smoothly played treatment. Some of the Friml favorites that are rendered with tuneful results are the melodious "Chanson," "Only a Rose," and "Song of the Vagabonds." Mildred Windelle and the Showmen serve as a competent vocal background for the tune parade. The subject should prove especially enticing to the more musically inclined of the audience. Running time, 10 minutes.

The Singing Bandit

(Universal)

Mediocre

Localed in a Mexican cafe, a gay, musical and romantically natured badman disports himself in the customary way followed by his profession. That is to say the gentleman sings a love ballad or two to an adoring senorita and in alternate expressions looks forbidding or calculatingly dashing. The outcome of it all is standardized and mediocre entertainment. J. Harold Murray and Jean Travers are those more importantly concerned with the subject's business. Running time, 10 minutes.

Paramount Pictorial No. 12

(Paramount)

Interesting

Three widely diversified and interesting subjects are included in the latest "Pictorial." In the first is seen to what expense and effort wealthy Mexican ranch owners, known below the border as "Charros" go in outfitting themselves with costly costumes. Native craftsmen fashion leather and metal into elaborate designs, the complete outfit costing the rancher a pretty penny. Described by Ward Wilson. The next sequence is a camera study, by Robert C. Bruce, in color, of various moods of the sea. Described by David Ross. The third subject has to do with the Bureau of Standards in Washington. Besides being an interesting subject it is informative as well. Described by Alois Havrilla. Running time, 10 minutes.

Pan-American Champions

(Paramount)

Interesting Sportlight

The Latin American sport champions seen in this sport revue are Jai Alai players from Havana and some Argentine poloists. Action and slow motion shots reveal adequately the skill and perfection of the games' exponents. Particularly attuned to the masculine taste, the subject's excellent composition and photography should hold general interest. Running time, 10 minutes.

Moe Kohn of the Europa theatre, in Baltimore, with David Brill and Joseph Kruleck, of New York, have incorporated the Film Arts Theatre, Inc., and will take over the theatre property at 844 North Howard Street, Baltimore, to remodel it.

COLUMBIA ANNOUNCES 62 FEATURES 126 SHORTS, 4 SERIALS FOR 1938

Harry and Jack Cohn Preside at Company's First Sales Convention Since 1929, and Outline New Product Program

Columbia executives and sales delegates, meeting this week at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles, were told that the company's 1937-38 program would include 62 feature length productions, 126 short subject releases and four serials.

250 Present

More than 250 executives and members of the sales force were present at the convention. Jack Cohn, vice-president, opened the sessions on Monday and turned the chair over to Harry Cohn, president. Mr. Montague discussed the product currently being released, the new program and the company's sales policies. Joe McConville, sales supervisor, made the presentations of awards in the Montague Sweepstakes campaign and Rube Jackter, assistant sales manager, spoke on the importance of the company's man power. Plans for exploitation of the new product were outlined by Hy Daab, director of advertising, publicity and exploitation, and Bill Thomas, studio publicity director.

Other addresses included those made by J. H. Seidelman and Joseph Friedman on the foreign situation; Lou Rosenfield, on the Canadian offices; Lou Weinberg and Louis Astor, on circuits; Max Weisfeldt, on short subjects; Al Seligman, on accessories; Sam Liggett on non-theatricals, and Maurice Grad, on sales promotion.

Mr. Montague announced that 60 per cent of the country's possibilities had been sold before the convention met, an all time high for advance contracts. Circuit deals completed include RKO, Loew's and the Skouras theatres. The company will continue to hold divisional meetings several times a year, he said, so that the home office sales executives may maintain closer contact with the district managers and salesmen.

With the completion of a million and a half dollar expansion and improvement program the Columbia studios will enter the 1937-38 production season with its capacity nearly doubled. More than 90 per cent of the buildings on the lot have been replaced with modern structures and more than 50,000 square feet of additional stage space have been added. Among the 17 pictures in work at the studio are three of the important features for next year, "It's All Yours," with Francis Lederer and Madeleine Carroll; "I'll Take Romance," with Grace Moore, and "The Awful Truth," starring Irene Dunne with Cary Grant.

EXPLOITATION DECENTRALIZED

Decentralization of exploitation effort, begun last season, will be continued on a larger scale this year, it was announced at the Columbia sales convention. Immediately after the sales meeting the field exploitation force left for extended tours of key city territories. Each man will contact exhibitors, editors and radio stations in his district during the summer, paving the way for the new product and establishing closer and more continuous cooperation between the theatres and the distributing company.

The starting dates for all important productions will be six months in advance of release and the company will issue preliminary manual of publicity, exploitation and advertising on important features for use prior to publication of standard press book.

National Decency Legion Classifies 16 Productions

Of sixteen new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week, eight were approved for general patronage, six were found unobjectionable for adults, one was classed as objectionable in part and one was condemned. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Anything for a Thrill," "Bank Alarm," "Ever Since Eve," "Mountain Music," "North of the Rio Grande," "Rhythm in the Clouds," "Sing and Be Happy," "The Singing Marine." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Der Abenteurer von Paris," "Destinodi Donna," "Girls Can Play," "The Great Gambini," "Maternite," "They Won't Forget." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "When Thief Meets Thief." Class C, Condemned: "Damaged Lives."

Mayor Is Drafting New Theatre Code

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia in New York was reported this week to be completing a draft of a code of ethics under which theatres that formerly housed burlesque shows might reopen with variety presentations. A code submitted by the theatre operators was found unsatisfactory to the mayor, it was said. An advisory board of six will administer whatever code is approved. One member of the board is scheduled to be Sam A. Scribner, treasurer of the Actors' Fund of America, who has been hired by the theatre operators as their technical advisor.

Meanwhile, John S. Sumner, secretary of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, expressed skepticism at the "quick and complete conversion to decency" of burlesque producers in the six weeks since their shows were closed and said that if they do come back they should be "as clean as the music halls of the Weber and Fields era."

Action was also started to clean up theatres in London this week, the New York Times reported, with a secret conference at St. James Palace. The idea for the conference came from the Earl of Cromer, the stage censor, who organized the meeting jointly with the London County Council, the licensing authority in the metropolitan area. All agreed on the desirability of "eradicating undesirable elements" evident in certain forms of entertainment, largely the strip-tease, which have aroused hundreds of complaints.

MGM to Make 4 Films in London

Production of the first group of pictures to be made abroad by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will start at the organization's London studios in August with Michael Balcon, former production executive for British Gaumont, in charge.

The initial production will be "A Yank at Oxford," adapted from an original story by John Monk Saunders. It will star Robert Taylor. Also in the first group will be "Finishing School" by Tennyson Jesse; "And to Victoria," by Vaughan Wilkins, and "Good-Bye, Mr. Chips," by James Hilton.

Mr. Balcon, for the last six months, has been at the California studios of MGM where he has been making preparations for the British-made pictures.

Ben Goetz, now in charge of the company's activities in London, and Robert Ritchie are making preliminary production arrangements there.

Westwood Appointed U. A. Manager of China Territory

Norman Westwood, for the past 17 years manager for Universal in China, was appointed to a similar post by United Artists this week. Mr. Westwood left New York for China immediately after the appointment where he will open United Artists offices in the territory following the recent decision of Alexander Krisel to retire from the distributing agency field and reside in California.

J. R. Prater answers Section A, "In general a motor control cabinet is an electrical device consisting of resistors, condensers and sometimes vacuum tubes, transformers and other apparatus, the assemblage being so connected that the speed of the driving motor is automatically maintained at constant value. The Bluebook devotes thirteen pages to a most excellent explanation of such devices. Briefly, the most common type, using vacuum tubes, operates approximately as follows:

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 80

(A) Name and explain three principal speaker troubles.

(B) What precautions are needed in speaker transmission and supply lines?

(C) What is meant by "poling" speaker units?

To join the Bluebook School merely send in answers. Place name and question number upon first sheet. Address F. H. Richardson, No. 3 Tudor Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

"The driving element consists of two separate a.c. generators mounted on the same shaft. The driving field is a stationary stator winding supplied with 110 volt a.c. The rotor itself is one of the a.c. generators, its output connected to an induction coil, the impedance of which governs the motor speed. The other a.c. generator is electrically separate from the motor. When up to rated speed, it generates 720-cycle current. Its rotating element is a toothed iron wheel. Its armature coil is stationary. Its stationary field coil is excited with d.c. from a half-wave rectifier tube located in the control cabinet. The induction coil connected to the rotor circuit of the main motor has a second winding, called a control coil, mounted upon the same iron core.

"The output of the two-tube, full-wave, grid-controlled rectifier is connected to this control coil and keeps its core nearly saturated with magnetism. The output of the 720-cycle generator is passed through a circuit very similar to a Wheatstone Bridge and is connected to the grid of the fourth grid-controlled, half-wave rectifier tube. The output of this tube is connected to the grid circuit of the full-wave rectifier, and the output of this is connected to the control coil.

"Through this arrangement, when the motor is running below normal speed, the plate current of the rectified tubes is increased, which of course increases the saturation of the control coil core, and this reduces its impedance, which operates to reduce the voltage of the rotor and thus causes the motor to speed up. In case the motor speed increases above normal, the action is reversed and the speed reduced. The use of vacuum tubes, while they are all rectifiers, provides a very sensitive control that is similar in effect to an amplifier by reason of the fact that very slight changes in motor speed cause a relatively great change in the control current.

"Control cabinets not employing vacuum tubes are used with motors having a separate a.c. generator similar to that above described. However, the current from this generator acts directly upon the field coil control windings, through a simple circuit employing only one or two resistors, and one, or sometimes two, condensers. The inductor generator itself acts as a speed regulator, since it offers a minimum of mechanical resistance when running at normal speed."

Mr. Prater's answer was submitted to the judgment of a motor expert connected with one of the great sound organizations, who pronounced it essentially correct at all points, except that details might vary slightly in different makes of equipment. He pronounced as perfect his explanation of cabinets in which tubes are not used, and also his answer to Section B, which follows:

(B): "Centrifugal speed controls, as used with d.c. motors, consist of a resistor in the field coil circuit and a centrifugal device for making and breaking a short-circuit path across the resistor. In a shunt-wound motor, increasing field current causes the motor to slow down; decreasing it accelerates speed of the motor. When the speed drops below normal, the field resistor its cut into the circuit, with the result that motor speed is immediately increased. As soon as speed become sufficient to close the short-circuiting contact, through centrifugal force, a strong current passes around the resistor and strengthens the field, whereupon the motor thinks better of it and slows down. As soon as speed diminishes below normal the short opens again, whereupon the current must again pass through the resistor, the motor speeds up, and so on, indefinitely.

"Such speed controls make and break rapidly and continuously, and by such action maintain speed at a reasonably constant average. A contact adjustment provides a considerable range of normal speeds."

C. Oldham adds one point, thus: "in d.c. motors of the shunt-wound type speed is controlled by a three-position switch marked high, low and normal. Variation of speed is accomplished by alteration of the amount of resistance in the field circuit. Constant speed in such motors is accomplished by means of a centrifugal speed device consisting of a stationary contact, a governor-operated moving contact, a slip ring and brush for making contact between moving and stationary parts, and a set of circuit-closing contacts for cutting resistance in and out of the field circuit.

"In operation, as the motor speeds up above the designated normal speed, the governor-operated moving contact moves out from the shaft, thus decreasing the distance between it and the stationary contact, which it contacts and short-circuits. This cuts out a portion of the field circuit resistance, with the result that the motor slows down. As soon as speed drops to normal, or slightly below, the contact is broken and the resistance in the field circuit restored to its former value, which action repeats constantly, so that with very slight variation the motor operates at normal, constant speed."

I invite attention to these answers. Unquestionably thousands of men who possessed no more than a rather nebulous understanding of these devices will, upon reading and studying such replies, have a very much better understanding of equipment they must handle.

World Announces First New Films

World Pictures Corporation has announced the first group of the 26 films to be released by the company during the coming season. The pictures are:

"La Tendre Enemie," directed by Max Ophuls, starring Simone Berriau, Catherine Fonteney, of the Comedie Francaise, Georges Vitray and Marc Valbal.

"The Monks," now being completed with the cooperation of Catholic groups. It is a film of monastic life throughout the world, showing motion pictures of the lives and activities of the monks. Prologue of film to be narrated by Rev. Father Michael Ahearn, S. J., of Weston College, Boston.

"The Life and Loves of Beethoven," with Harry Baur, directed by Abel Gance. Also in the cast are Pauley, Jean-Louis Barreuit, Jany Holt and Andre Nox.

"The Ski Chase," filmed at St. Arborg, Austria, with Hannes Schneider.

"Annie Laurie," a modern version of the Scottish classic with Will Fyffe.

"Revolt in Morocco," directed by Jean Benoit-Levy and Marie Epstein, creators of "La Maternelle."

"The Secret of Stamboul," with Valerie Hobson and Frank Vosper.

"Ninety Degrees South," motion picture record of the Scott Antarctic expedition.

"My Song of Love," with Tito Schipa and Milly.

"Street Without a Name," with Pola Illery and Constant Rony, directed by Pierre Chenel, creator of "Crime et Chatiment."

Also on the program will be several films pre-released here such as "Masquerade in Vienna," with Anton Walbrook and Paula Wesseley and "Slalom," the ski film.

Short subjects announced include "Song of Ceylon," documentary film awarded first honors at the Brussels exposition for cinematographic art, and "What the Puppy Said" and "What the Parrot Saw."

The remainder of the program will be announced August 1st.

Tournament Prize Goes to Gluckman

A prize contributed by Quigley Publications for the Monday Knighters' second annual golf tournament on Tuesday at Elmsford Country Club, White Plains, N. Y., was awarded to Henry Gluckman, New York, and Philadelphia franchise holder for Republic.

Other recipients of prizes were Harry Schiffman, who won a set of golf clubs and a bag, Henry Brown, a traveling bag, and Leo Justin, a rug.

Each entrant received at least two gifts, presented by various film and equipment companies.

Frank A. Vanderlip Dies

Frank A. Vanderlip, who represented the banking interests on Paramount's board of directors during the company's reorganization two years ago, died Tuesday in New York Hospital. He was 72 years old.

Mr. Vanderlip was president of the National City Bank in New York from 1909 to 1919.

MORE about LIGHTING for the THEATRE

To offer practical suggestions and expert counsel on phases of modern theatre illumination not dealt with in the May 29th issue, wherein architectural lighting was emphasized, the July 24th issue of Better Theatres will be extensively devoted to modern fixtures for theatres, and to marquees and signs.

- Eugene Clute, contributing editor of the publication, Lighting and Lamps, will discuss types of fixtures adapted to the various divisions of the theatre today, in an article profusely illustrated with designs readily available.
- J. T. Knight, Jr., eminent theatre engineer and contributing consultant of Better Theatres, will discuss safe and efficient wiring layouts and mechanical provisions for animated and decorative effects, at the front and in the auditorium.
- Francis M. Falge, theatre lighting specialist of the Nela Park Engineering Department of the General Electric Company, will describe "downlighting" as effectively applied to illumination problems peculiar to the theatre.
- The new forms and illumination methods for marquees and signs will be comprehensively displayed in a pictorial section presenting selected examples of modern front treatments.

to appear in the July 24th issue of

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Chesterfield

BELOW THE DEADLINE: Cecilia Parker, Russell Hopton—Fair picture; O. K. for double billing. Somewhat lacking in comedy and thrills. Running time, 69 minutes. Played May 4-5.—Jno. S. Erickson Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Columbia

CATTLE THIEF, THE: Ken Maynard, Geneva Mitchell—Ken Maynard has never been as good as he was in "Strawberry Roan," but plays to above average business on weekends.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

COME CLOSER, FOLKS: James Dunn, Marian Marsh—Fairly good picture to poorest business in a long time.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

COWBOY STAR, THE: Charles Starrett, Iris Shunn—Very good. Average business.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

THEODORA GOES WILD: Irene Dunne, Melvyn Douglas—Here is a really swell picture that every one complimented us on. In fact, we had more pleasant remarks on this picture as our patrons passed out than has occurred for months. And the second night a lot of people came who admitted that they had been enticed by the fine word-of-mouth advertising which the Sunday night crowd gave the picture.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

WHEN YOU'RE IN LOVE: Grace Moore, Cary Grant—One of Miss Moore's best pictures but opera stars do not seem to draw in my town.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

First National

PENROD AND SAM: Billy Mauch, Frank Craven, Spring Byington—This one drew extra business and pleased. Especially good for the children.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

STOLEN HOLIDAY: Kay Frances, Ian Hunter, Claude Rains—Where are the Francis fans? This one hardly took in film rental. It was a good picture, too, but not a special by any means. Running time, 80 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Gaumont British

HEAD OVER HEELS IN LOVE: Jessie Matthews, Louis Borrell—Just fair.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MAN OF AFFAIRS: George Arliss, Rene Ray—Arliss plays a dual role to perfection. Picture entertaining, but Arliss no drawing card.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

WOMAN ALONE, THE: Sylvia Sydney, John Loder—Heavy drama.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Grand National

GIRL LOVES BOY: Eric Linden, Cecilia Parker—By all means play this one. This is a real family picture, and did it take! Many a person reached for their handkerchief and loved it. Running time, 70 minutes. Played June 4-5.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BORN TO DANCE: Eleanor Powell, James Stewart—This is a fine entertainment, a picture that will draw and please. The music is beautiful, dancing of the quality that made Eleanor Powell famous, comedy and spectacle worthy of one of Metro's best pictures.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

Rockefeller Center, New York

CAMILLE: Greta Garbo, Robert Taylor—A very fine picture—and acting beautifully done. Garbo does not draw in my town.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

DEVIL DOLL, THE: Lionel Barrymore, Maureen O'Sullivan—This picture proved to be a box office attraction, and was enjoyed by the horror lovers. Business satisfactory.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DEVIL IS A SISSY, THE: Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper, Mickey Rooney—Here is a fine picture to please young and old. The three boys are outstanding in this story. There is comedy interest, a fine moral, and suspense from beginning to end.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

ESPIONAGE: Edmund Lowe, Madge Evans—Above average, but not too much. We'd say it is hardly up to Metro standard. Running time, 65 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ESPIONAGE: Edmund Lowe, Madge Evans—Above average program picture with good comedy. Played to good houses, weekend business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FAMILY AFFAIR, A: Lionel Barrymore, Cecilia Parker—A nice program picture that pleased.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

GOOD OLD SOAK: Wallace Beery, Betty Furness—Fair only. You have Beery for the draw at the box office. Outside of that, it is just a program picture jazzed up into the higher allocation.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

KELLY THE SECOND: Patsy Kelly, Pert Kelton—This is an excellent picture for your Saturday night crowd when you are looking for a change from the customary western. Our crowd was convulsed half the time at Patsy's ludicrous attempts to look after her pet prize fighter. This is indeed a laugh getter that will please the average showgoer.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D.

LOVE ON THE RUN: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, Franchot Tone—Splendid show, better than some of the previous ones from these stars. Plenty of action and comedy supplied by Franchot Tone. Gable and Crawford provide the love scenes and more serious action. All three stars at their best so far. Thanks, kids, keep up the good work. Running time, 8 reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

LOVE ON THE RUN: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone—Just an average program picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MAD HOLIDAY: Edmund Lowe, Elissa Landi—I was a little afraid of this picture, because it had no great and wellknown stars, but it was really good and pleased the average crowd that attended. Zasu Pitts adds to the fun element of this mystery picture that has just enough, but not too much, comedy and a mystery that is comprehensible and explainable. Nuf said.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

MAMA STEPS OUT: Guy Kibbee, Alice Brady—Too silly for words.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

PERSONAL PROPERTY: Jean Harlow, Robert Taylor—Did above average business and pleased. Played June 11-12.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

ROMEO AND JULIET: Norma Shearer, Leslie Howard—I trust that in the future the producers will let the Bard of Avon and all his works slumber on in peace. This, after its road show, was to all intents to be a percentage picture, but, for some reason, it was dropped into the lower allocation where for us it proved to be a dog at the box office. If you have a top-hat-and-tails clientele, okay, but try to sell it to the boys that yell Gee and Haw—it can't be done. A finished production allright, but what does that get you? A headache.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Paramount

BULLDOG DRUMMOND ESCAPES: Ray Milland, Heather Angel—Good program picture. Milland very likeable.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

CLARENCE: Roscoe Karns, Charlotte Wynters—A grand surprise. Every now and then a small program picture turns out to be a humdinger for our particular locality. This one did just that. A quiet, unheralded young lady, never seen here before, Charlotte Wynters, just about stole this show. Let us have more of her. Running time, 64 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

DOCTOR'S DIARY, A: John Trent, Helen Burgess—Good movie. Patrons liked Trent.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

I MET HIM IN PARIS: Claudette Colbert, Melvyn Douglas—Very good light comedy.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

I MET HIM IN PARIS: Claudette Colbert, Melvyn Douglas—A smash hit in any spot. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

INTERNES CAN'T TAKE MONEY: Joel McCrea, Barbara Stanwyck—Good show. McCrea very fine actor. Stanwyck acts too much. Be more natural and we'll like you better, Miss Stanwyck.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

JOHN MEADE'S WOMAN: Edward Arnold, Francine Larrimore—Just fair.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

KING OF GAMBLERS: Claire Trevor, Lloyd Nolan, Akim Tamiroff—Pleased fairly well. No extra business. A little too talkie.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

OUTCAST: Lewis Stone, Karen Morley, Warren William—Good program picture. Why are we getting so many doctor's pictures? Most of them are almost alike.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

OUTCAST: Warren William, Karen Morley—Above average program picture although it had no drawing power. Running time, 79 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town business.

PLAINSMAN, THE: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—This was a natural for these Western small towns. It did fine business for us. Many thought it would have been a better picture if it had not recorded the death of Hickok. Running time, 113 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SWING HIGH, SWING LOW: Fred MacMurray, Carole Lombard—Some scenes very good, others terrible.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SWING HIGH, SWING LOW: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—Picture pleased but did not draw so well. It is a very entertaining picture.—W. H.

Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

TURN OFF THE MOON: Charles Ruggles, Eleanor Whitney—Very good comedy which pleased all.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Shirley Ross—The best drawing picture since "God's Country and the Woman." Never heard an adverse comment. It has entertainment. Played June 13-15.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

DANIEL BOONE: George O'Brien, Heather Angel—Good picture spoiled by very poor recording on our print. Some poor sap operator must have dragged it through a sanding machine and demolished the track, which made it terrible. We though our sound had gone haywire, but the next night's showing told us not with another showprint. Running time, 8 reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D.

HOLLYWOOD COWBOY: George O'Brien, Cecilia Parker—Nice programer, well liked. Running time, 70 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

OUTCASTS OF POKER FLAT, THE: Preston Foster, Jean Muir—Nice programer, well liked. Running time, 65 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

QUALITY STREET: Katharine Hepburn, Franchot Tone—Pleased the ladies but men stayed away. Hepburn not an actress. Tone splendid.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

RAINBOW ON THE RIVER: Bobby Breen, May Robson—A good picture. Brought extra business, and in midweek, and that is something these trying depression days. Good for Sunday and any night. Running time, 10 reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

RAINBOW ON THE RIVER: Bobby Breen, May Robson—Excellent picture to best midweek business in many moons.—J. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

SEA DEVILS: Victor McLaglen, Preston Foster—Very good action drama that is concerned mostly with the Coast Guard. The cash customers seemed to be satisfied and the picture did average at the box office.—J. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

SEA DEVILS: Victor McLaglen, Preston Foster—Fairly good picture, with some excellent news of heavy storms at sea. Seemed to please, though it is not an outstanding production. Played May 15.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

SHALL WE DANCE?: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—The first that we have had of this pair for some time, and from the reaction they have not been missed. Both might have been four years ago, but with the voices and the dancing talent that has come to the front in the last two years, we have had better voices and more dancing talent in the shorts that we have played. Public apathetic to the picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SHALL WE DANCE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers Pleased all. Good picture. Running time, 116 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SMARTEST GIRL IN TOWN: Ann Sothern, Gene Raymond—Good little short program. Good for a double feature program. Comedy all the way through. Some serious spots but most of them are followed by comedy situation. Running time, six reels. Played May 4-5—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

WHEN'S YOUR BIRTHDAY?: Joe E. Brown, Marian Marsh—A very poor Brown picture. His last pictures have not got the comedy of the old ones.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

WHEN'S YOUR BIRTHDAY?: Joe E. Brown, Marian Marsh—Good comedy feature that did average business. The general opinion seemed to be that it was not as good as the two preceding Joe E. Brown pictures.—J. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

WOMAN I LOVE, THE: Paul Muni, Miriam Hopkins—The jinx holds good on war pictures. With the world bordering on war and almost civil war in our own country, the public will not support them; hence a loss at the box office.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

WHEN'S YOUR BIRTHDAY?: Joe E. Brown—This guy never meant anything at our box office so we didn't expect anything and got what we expected. His pictures aren't funny; they are silly.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. General patronage.

WOMAN I LOVE, THE: Paul Muni, Miriam Hopkins—When are we going to get this war out of our system? This picture would have been okay 20 years ago, but today it was a flop. The story was nothing to brag about either, a woman falling in love with another man while her husband was fighting for his country. Very good for children, I don't think. Running time, 88 minutes.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. General patronage.

WOMAN I LOVE, THE: Paul Muni—Good program picture. Running time, 88 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

20th Century-Fox

BACK TO NATURE: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—A swell family picture. Should please the most critical as there is hardly a dull moment in it. Something doing all the time, and how! Good work by the entire cast. Running time, six reels. Played June 9.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

BANJO ON MY KNEE: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—Good business on a midweek date. Good picture.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

CAFE METROPOLE: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power—Pleased all. Good programer. Running time, 83 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

CAN THIS BE DIXIE?: Jane Withers, Slim Summerville—Jane Withers goes to town again in a comedy that is a howl. The cast is good, with some very good dancing and a horse race. Believe it or not, this is the kind of film fare the small town wants. Running time, 70 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

CAREER WOMAN: Claire Trevor, Michael Whalen—Just fair.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT THE OLYMPICS: Warner Oland, Katherine DeMille—Nice program picture liked by all. Running time, 70 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

DOCTOR BULL (RE-ISSUE): Will Rogers—This one did about average business. Will has many friends among the older people.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

FIFTY ROADS TO TOWN: Don Ameche, Ann Sothern—Fair program picture, story not any too strong. It just got by, and that was all. Not much to sell except that it was just another feature that they will be neither for nor against.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HOLY TERROR, THE: Jane Withers, Anthony Martin—Very good title for the picture. Jane pleased both young and old. Liked better than Shirley Temple by lots of my patrons.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LLOYDS OF LONDON: Tyrone Power, Madeleine Carroll, Freddie Bartholomew—One of the really good pictures. Give Power some good stories and he'll go far. Disappointed in not seeing more of little Freddie.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LLOYDS OF LONDON: Freddie Bartholomew, Tyrone Power, Madeleine Carroll—Too long for the average attendance at motion picture shows. The last few reels were very entertaining but the picture was too long drawn out. Not for small town theatres. Played May 22.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

LOVE IS NEWS: Tyrone Power, Loretta Young—There was a whole lot of things said and done in this one, but it was just about an average production with fair appeal. Played June 5, 1937.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

LOVE IS NEWS: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power—This picture did very good on the opening midnight, but fell off to a big box office disappointment. Many thought it silly. Personally, I enjoyed it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MIDNIGHT TAXI: Brian Donlevy, Frances Drake—Ordinary gangster type, with taxi driver G-Man. People seemed to think too much gang and killings. Played June 9-10.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

MIDNIGHT TAXI: Brian Donlevy, Frances Drake—Nice programer. Well liked. Running time, 73 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

NANCY STEELE IS MISSING: Victor McLaglen, Peter Lorre—Very good drama.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

OFF TO THE RACES: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane—Average program offering. Pleased those who came but it did a very poor business. Should be played on a double feature program.—J. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

ON THE AVENUE: Dick Powell, Madeleine Carroll, Alice Faye—Satisfactory light entertainment.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ON THE AVENUE: Dick Powell, Madeleine Carroll, Alice Faye, Ritz Brothers—Well received. No extra business but well liked. Played June 6-8.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

PIGSKIN PARADE: Stuart Erwin, Patsy Kelly—A very good musical football picture that did us a worthwhile midweek business.—Harland Ranklin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RAMONA: Loretta Young, Don Ameche—We played this late but our business was a little above the average for midweek shows.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SEVENTH HEAVEN: Simone Simon, James Stewart—Good story. Stewart steals the show. Consider him one of the best male stars in the business. Simone not suited to play opposite Stewart.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SEVENTH HEAVEN: Simone Simon, James Stewart—Did below average business. It is a good show and well acted, but did not draw.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

STOWAWAY: Shirley Temple, Robert Young, Alice Faye—Many considered this the best Shirley Temple picture, but our business dropped off about 25%.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

STOWAWAY: Shirley Temple, Alice Faye, Robert Young—Good Temple picture. Shirley has lost lots of her popularity.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

TIME OUT FOR ROMANCE: Claire Trevor, Michael Whalen—Just fair.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

WAKE UP AND LIVE: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie, Alice Faye—Good picture, moves right along with a little bit of everything that entertains.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

WHISPERING SMITH SPEAKS: George O'Brien—This is a railroad story of bravery and action, that makes a great appeal, and is different from the average action picture. George O'Brien pictures always do fine for us, and we are sorry he has left Fox for RKO, for that seems to mean that we will have to get along without his pictures.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D.

WINGS OF THE MORNING: Annabella, Henry Fonda—A beautiful Technicolor picture. Well acted, but a flop at the box office.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

WINGS OF THE MORNING: Annabella, Henry Fonda—Very good. Technicolor splendid. Stars pleased.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

United Artists

BELOVED ENEMY: Brian Aherne, Merle Oberon—A splendid picture, with very good cast.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GARDEN OF ALLAH, THE: Marlene Dietrich, Charles Boyer—Very good picture for the ladies. Beautiful scenes and Technicolor.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

STAR IS BORN, A: Janet Gaynor, Fredric March—Under Fox's banner, Janet was fading out, but her role in this picture would react the other way. It is an old theme of the Hollywood angle of stars coming up and fading away. The direction and acting put it into a class by itself, so that it stands out as a very good picture that hit with the audience.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

YOU ONLY LIVE ONCE: Henry Fonda, Sylvia Sydney—Even though it was very unpleasant in story, it was wonderfully produced and played. No particular complaints except so many expressed the opinion that it would have been grand entertainment if a little twist or two had been added to give it a pleasant ending. Running time, 86 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Universal

COWBOY AND THE KID, THE: Buck Jones, Dorothy Revier—A Western that is different, and Buck plays it to the T. The kid is also playing his part very good, but the idea of him getting on a train and swiping a porter's suit is bad for some of the youngsters to see. He should have asked the porter for it and that way it would build up the moral. Running time, 6 reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

COWBOY AND THE KID, THE: Buck Jones, Billy Burrud, Dorothy Revier—A sure hit for small town, needs some support for longer show. We played two comedies and "Custer's Last Stand," serial. Buck sure got away from the old style Western. No comparison. Plenty of laughs. Billy Burrud did some fine acting. Go after the rural trade on this one, they won't be disappointed. Running time, 60 minutes.—Ruff Bros., Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kansas. General patronage.

FLYING HOSTESS: Judith Barrett, William Hall—A far better picture than I expected. You will make no mistake in showing this one. Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 4-5.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

GIRL OVERBOARD: Gloria Stuart, Walter Pidgeon—A good picture for a double feature program. Running time, 60 minutes. Played June 11-12.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Warner Brothers

BLACK LEGION, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Erin O'Brien-Moore—Interesting from start to finish.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

BLACK LEGION, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Erin O'Brien-Moore—Did not draw. The trailer spoiled it. Made it look too brutal.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

CHINA CLIPPER: Pat O'Brien, Beverly Roberts—One of those take-it-for-better-or-worse pictures. Will do average business in town that has aviation interests. Curiosity will get them in, but they won't complain nor compliment. Pat O'Brien carries the show through in a forceful manner. The married life story of Pat and Beverly Roberts is emotional and well played. Running time, 86 minutes.—Ruff Bros., Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kansas. General patronage.

GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE WOMAN: George Brent, Beverly Roberts—This picture pleased everyone.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1937: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—For some reason Blondell is not popular—and Powell has slipped very badly with our fans. The picture is good.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GREAT O'MALLEY, THE: Pat O'Brien, Sybil Jason—O'Brien always good. Sybil very clever. Good show.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GREEN LIGHT: Errol Flynn, Anita Louise—A splendid picture.—Leo C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GREEN LIGHT: Errol Flynn, Anita Louise, Margaret Lindsay—A grand picture! We can forgive Warner Bros. for some of those cheaply made B pictures after playing this one. It gave 100 per cent satisfaction. Running time, 85 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Educational

BOOK SHOP, THE: Terry-Toons—Very good cartoon.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

BOOK SHOP, THE: Paul Terry-Toons—Flies through air on a book, sees famous characters of favorite books.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. General patronage.

SEEING EYE, THE: Dogs trained to lead blind persons.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. General patronage.

Majestic

HORSE SENSE AND HORSE POWER: Lowell Thomas—A life saver for us and a good subject on the automobile industry ever since the first invention of the horseless buggy, and up to the date. The last streamlined gas wagons are great. Running time, 1 reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

EVERY SUNDAY: Deanna Durbin, Judy Garland—One swell short. The singing is great.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MAESTRO: Tabloid Musicals—Just fair. Nothing to write home about.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

Top Salesmen Work On Commission

Hours don't mean so much to the average manager. The length of his working day is not as important to him as is an opportunity to increase his earning power. And there are exhibitors too, concerned with the problem of working out a more satisfactory plan of remuneration for it's a cinch that a contented manager makes a better producer. And a better producer, gentlemen, means higher earnings for the exhibitor also.

But how to decide how much an individual manager's efforts count in bringing in those extra grosses and how to compensate him properly for his peculiar talents?

A rise in salary is not the complete answer.

Giving the manager a percentage break has already been proven to come nearer the correction solution. For instance, figure out a yearly expectancy fair to both employer and employee, then give the theatreman a piece of every dollar over that figure at the end of the year.

No, that's not theorizing or just thinking out loud. It's being done and successfully to the satisfaction of both sides.

Recently, the trade press announced a distribution by a representative circuit of an extra week's pay to managers as a bonus. Which of course is all well and good. But no bonus given every now and then, and no matter how sincerely offered does much to settle the argument. It may be a step in the right direction but hardly a long one, or, for that matter, permanent.

Top salesmen in other lines are satisfied to be compensated on a commission basis. Why? The harder they work, the more they sell and the more they sell, the higher the payoff. That makes 'em tops. Your able manager is also a top salesman in his line. He's got to be to get by. And if he is, then why should he not be paid in accordance with his ability to bring in more to the boxoffice than the less skilled practitioner who labors less conscientiously? And if a percentage break will inspire the theatreman to do an even more profitable job for his employer, then it's good business for both sides, isn't it?

Famous Players-Canadian discovered the value of such reasoning some three or four years back and today, the plan originated by N. L. Nathanson and J. J. Fitzgibbons may well serve as a shining example. The procedure has been detailed in the Round Table before. In short, it allows the individual manager a chance to increase his annual earnings in proportion to the increase of his grosses during that time, over and above a set figure.

Every four weeks, the manager receives a home office statement detailing just where he stands and if the theatreman is not satisfied with his showing, well, it's up to him to dig in and do better. And he usually does.

The plan also does away with home office difficulties in determining a manager's exact value, for the figures, fairly arrived at, tell the story in a nutshell. And the plan is of further value to the circuit for it provides for an additional percentage break to the manager in proportion to the savings he is able to effect.

A system of managerial remuneration fair to both sides is the only vital issue in any argument between the man who does a good job and the exhibitor who expects it of him. To theatre executives accustomed to looking further than tomorrow the Famous Players-Canadian plan may well be the answer to greater profits and, as important, satisfactory adjustment of these employee-employer relationships.

16, GET OUT AND DANCE

Bernard DeGeorge is 16. He is a high school junior and the full time advertising manager of the Horowitz theatres in Houston, Texas. Bernard turns out all the circuit's display copy and, according to the newspaper story that tells about this talented lad, "when most boys are out dancing, Bernard is poring over theatre ads".

Sixteen, the golden age, when the world is a giant oyster packed with pearls—when music fills the air with swing—when youth rides high, wide and handsome. Imagine, 16 and no time for dancing.

Bernard, give yourself a break. Get out and step with the lovely girls. The ads will always be there but you'll never be 16 again.

Arthur Leatherman showing various devices utilized by famed females in corraling the males, at least, according to Leatherman. Among these were the apple that helped Eve land Adam; weapon used in first shotgun wedding; the garter of Mme. Pompadour that captured her royal lover; the skates on which Josephine chased Napoleon and for the topper—the bottle of wine used by Miriam Hopkins to pursue Joe McCrea in the picture.

Scene stills were mounted on silver cards and placard carried copy reading: "Be beautiful for that moment when he says Shall We Dance?"

SILK banners formed the background of artistic lobby display arranged by Mel Lawton, managing director, and Hermann Flynn, publicist, for the date on "Champagne Waltz" at the Prince Edward Theatre, in Sydney, Australia. Title was carried on center piece, stars and featured players on separate hangings and all mounted on white platforms. For further atmosphere, bottles of champagne were placed in foreground. Highlights of the campaign which earned a First Mention for May will be found on a following page.

Simple, withal compelling, was the cutout lettering of giant letters for advance lobby showing on "Maytime" created by Ernest Crabtree, Great States City Manager, for the date at the Fisher Theatre, in Danville, Ill. Letters were in third-dimensional effect and bordered by five-foot heads of the stars (lower right).

Tops Page One

The fact that the coronation scene in "Prince and the Pauper" were almost alike the ceremonies at the recent crowning of the new British rulers gave R. D. Hutchings a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to land a distinctly unusual page one break to tie in his date at the Portage, Portage, Wis. This was accomplished by supplying his paper with three of the coronation scene stills from the picture which the daily made up in a layout atop the front page masthead on opening day of picture.

Added publicity was secured when one of George's staff, dressed as "Juliet," called on Mayor Goldsmith and presented him with giant pass to the show. Stories and cut ran in local dailies. Special letters calling attention to the picture addressed to visitors were placed in hotel letter boxes and special communications were also forwarded to teachers and graduating seniors of high schools. Knitting mills tied up and arranged for special wool displays as well as knitting instructions as suggested by sweater worn by the star in the film. Various music stores were also contacted for window and counter displays of hit tunes and dance halls supplied with orchestrations.

Girl staff was dressed in formal attire and stationed in lobby distributing special programs, imprinted balloons were also given away and special letter was addressed to theatre's mailing list calling attention.

An intensive outdoor billing campaign was embarked upon covering downtown areas and extending to outlying districts. For lobby Lawton arranged a display of silk banners carrying title and cast, at bottom of which were placed bottles of champagne.

Stores Aid Redmond On "Waikiki Wedding"

Various merchants cooperated with Jimmie Redmond, Bonham Theatre, Fairbury, Neb., on "Waikiki Wedding," department store featuring window displays of print dresses and wedding finery tying in with the picture.

For street bally Jimmie dressed chaps in tuxedo to parade with back banner reading "I am dressed and waiting for the big Waikiki Wedding." Beside these chaps walked another dressed in tattered overalls playing a bazooka; his back banner carried copy "I am playing a bazooka until Bob Burns gets here."

Week ahead lobby was decorated in Hawaiian atmosphere with palms, hula dancers and large comic cutouts of the stars; center of display carried list of song hits together with sheet music and catch comedy line "Sing with Bing."

Unique Broadcast Arranged by Wise

The University of Dayton lays claim to the fact that Tyrone Power had attended that school in the Ohio metropolis, which fact allowed Nathan Wise, RKO Theatre publicist in Dayton, an opportunity to tiein with the university's annual June Jamboree for some extra publicity on "Cafe Metropole" at the RKO Keith's. First gun in the campaign was an invitation tendered the star by the college president to be present during the Jamboree which Wise utilized for an opening page one two-column story and picture, which was good enough to build up much local attention.

Then finding it impossible to promote the star's attendance, Nathan again contacted the studios and arranged for a long-distance interview between Power and picture editor of the Dayton Daily News, to be held three days ahead of the opening. Permission was also obtained following the interview for station WHIO to broadcast a transcription of the same interview. Paper is equipped with Wirephoto and arranged to have a shot of the star on the phone wired to the local daily where it was run in a three-column cut and detailed story of the tiein. Transcription was made and put on the air right before opening, introduced by a program devoted to the star's rise and his new picture.

Program widely advertised in advance as an unusually unique feature found favor with the air-audience and other papers in the drawing area found the stunt interesting enough to run as a feature story.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Neligh, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

Last night, for the third time, we went and saw "The Go Getter" with George Brent, Anita Louise and Charles Winninger. No matter how often this picture is shown, should we be in the neighborhood, we'll go and see it. It isn't often that we go and see a picture more than once, but when we see it for the third time, there must be a reason. The reason for this was the cast, especially Charles Winninger, and another reason was because of the reasonableness of the story and the superb direction of the picture.

Seldom do the critics of pictures give the directors the credit they are entitled to. Busby Berkeley, the director of this one, is entitled to the thanks of the theatre-going public for giving them some excellent entertainment.

As we view pictures it is our conviction that the writer of the story and the director of the picture should receive the same measure of commendation as the players who portray the story. This, we have observed, has been too often overlooked.

To our mind, Charles Winninger carries the banner at the head of the cinema world. When you see him in "The Go Getter" he will make you personally acquainted with old Cappy Ricks himself, and old Cappy Ricks was a "go getter," although George Brent and Anita Louise got the best of him in the end.

The World-Telegram of Omaha prints this from the New York Herald-Tribune:

"A film authority reports that attendance at the movies is running about 90 millions a week. Out of that number there must be fully seven or eight people who like those pictures of jazz orchestras." Our observation has been that the New York Herald-Tribune has placed the number of jazz lovers a little too high.

A man doesn't have to be a musician to play jazz. Anyone, even the driver of a garbage wagon, can do that if he can squawk a horn or scrape a fiddle. Those who love jazz will part their hair in the middle, wear spats and chew gum at a funeral.

We just received a letter from Conklin & Neely of the Globe theatre at Griswold, Iowa, enclosing a check and requesting us to send them the HERALD. Thanks, boys, we'll do it, that is, we will request Denny to do it. There is something rather peculiar about that boy Denny; we never sent him a request to mail the HERALD to someone that he failed to do so. Maybe, though, it was because we always enclosed a check with the request. Somehow checks always demanded attention.

In our 110 years in Nebraska (more or less) we have never seen the crops at this season of the year look any better than they do right now, and if this condition continues until harvest time the government will have to increase the number of alphabetical bureaus to harvest them. The main thing that worries the farmers right now is the fear of the lack of rain and the damage caused by the cutworms. What we are afraid of is grasshoppers. Last year they ate up everything in our garden but our housekeeper's hoehandle.

We have just received a letter from Miss Gertrude Merriam of the Managers' Round Table department of the HERALD. Miss Merriam is assisting A-Mike Vogel in editing that department and is collecting theatre passes from theatre boys all over the world —England, Scotland, Wales, Italy, Germany, Australia, the United States, the Fiji Islands, Missouri, and some from Indiana.

Miss Merriam is making a collection of these passes for her scrapbook and I know you boys will be glad to contribute to her collection, so be ready when we call on you over there in Iowa, which will be as soon as we can borrow money enough to buy gas for April Shower. You might even mail one to her in care of the HERALD or to us here at Neligh, Nebraska, the cow town of the west, where the roosters awaken us of mornings in time to slop the shoats before breakfast.

We heard Edwin C. Hill announce that an English caravan transporting several hundred pounds of gold to the Egyptians and about to be attacked by a band of robbers, hid the gold in the desert sand and it was drifted over and lost.

If you boys will send us a good stout-handled shovel and a round trip ticket and some sowbelly and beans, we will go over there and dig for it and will give you 50 per cent of what we find. You will find this to be as safe an investment as an election bet. We did.

We hear a whole lot nowadays about old lady "Justice" holding court in this country. This makes us wonder if she ever was inside a court room. We recently read an account of a woman who got drunk, drove her car into a bunch of children, killed one of them and crippled three others. She was convicted of manslaughter, sentenced for five years and then paroled on good behavior.

A man recently was hailed before our local court for drunken driving and for having smashed up another machine besides his own. The court fined him a small sum and then suspended sentence.

Suspended sentences can generally be traced to politics.

Regardless of what you may think about it, politics rather than justice, has gotten the upper hand in this country. Old lady "Justice" is entirely too slow for this generation. We know of a number of boys who went "Over There" to fight in the trenches for something or other who came back home maimed and crippled for life and who are receiving but a scanty dole. They faced the bullets of the enemy in muddy trenches while others wearing epaulets on their shoulders and stripes on their arms were drinking champagne, free from danger, in sumptuous headquarters paid for by the government. "Justice" has her headquarters on the other side of the "bar" while politics rules on this side, and our judgment is that there won't be a whole lot of mourning when some people cross the "bar" and our further judgment is that there won't be any epaulets, stripes or stars "Over There."

Maybe we have said enough. Maybe we have said too much already, and maybe we are like old Uncle Leazer back in Indiana. When Aunt Polly asked him if he had washed his feet before coming to bed he said: "By gosh, Polly, I'll be gosh dinged if I know."

PROGRESS!

MR. ADOLPH ZUKOR, who is as much of a seer as there may be in the world of the motion picture, is either predicting or promising that the bigger pictures of the coming season will be having extended runs, five weeks, perhaps, instead of the two weeks or occasional three that weightier attractions have been enjoying in larger centers.

This is a ready consequence of, or rather a part of, a trend that has been on the way since the screen assimilated sound.

The tendency has been most continuously toward bigger pictures, more costly, winning greater grosses and greater individual production profits—or losses.

Showmen, perennial optimists, perennial expansionists, are always addressing themselves at the bigger and better, or at least the bigger whether it is better or not.

Today it is being contended in many quarters that there should be much fewer pictures, bigger pictures, and that there is no place in the world for what is called "B" product, meaning anything that costs less than a million dollars.

RAPIDLY the motion picture tends toward a pattern that partakes considerably of that of the stage of two and three decades ago. In the era of Klaw & Erlanger dominance, with Shuberts rising, and with theatre domination an important inter-acting factor, the Broadway-and-road show runs made an amusement map, while smaller and less complex in its ramifications, which had many aspects of identity with that made now by the usurping industry of the screen.

What would have happened to that map of then in the world of the handmade drama of the stage never happened because the motion picture came along to absorb lower strata markets and eat up "the road."

Stage shows of Broadway origin were after all too big and expensive to penetrate the provinces beyond certain concentrations of population and buying power. Out beyond in the hinterlands, and down below in the cities, the motion picture began its attrition, the march on the capital.

Now the motion picture rules the amusement world. But it seems possible that the bigger-and-bigger program may yet so concentrate on the keys that the frontiers will be left open.

THE motion picture came to greatness in and through periods of vastly less competition than now, and on a basis far less costly to the consumer. There was no place else to go and you could go for a dime. Today there is everywhere to go, motor cars to go in, and besides there's a continuous flow of show radioed into the home if you do not want to go. There is also a flood of better, cheaper printing, purveying all possible, and many impossible, forms of entertainmen in type and picture.

Ahead, sometime, not now, is television, which if it arrives will proceed against the motion picture even as the motion picture proceeded against the stage. Television will, by all indications, start lower in the intelligence scale than the motion picture level of today, and it will likely reach farther into the back country than the screen.

Just now, more importantly, there are the beginnings of 16 millimeter showmanship in little Ford car roadshow equipments, traveling the dirt roads and taking entertainment to the far and small places. The various economies of non-inflammable, cheap and unrestricted 16 mm. film showings starting thus in the remote regions, can be the start of a movement which will again make the motion picture a low priced entertainment, for millions, requiring no such vast machinery of presentation and piles of architecture on costly land as the theatre necessary to today's distribution to the consumer.

In all our pride at the greatness and vastnesses of the motion picture of today, it will be seemly to remember that things can get too infernally big.

EVERY now and then it is wholesome to turn to "What the Picture Did for Me" pages of Motion Picture Herald, and note that there are many places, large areas of the United States in the aggregate, where Buck Jones is more than a Barrymore, where Gene Autry is greater than a Garbo. And it is to be remembered that Miss Gracie Fields rose to unprecedented star-grosses in the dialect service of a British region that could be lost in Coconino county.

It would be pessimism indeed to dispute that there is not to be a place for the greatest and most imposing motion pictures that talent can produce. It is, however, just possible that there can be too much competition for the top brackets, for address to a world market of too many pictures.

Plainly enough we are now in an evolutionary state due to the rise of walls of nationalism and the creation of indigenous motion picture arts behind them.

Not much farther away is the inevitable classification of regions, social strata, audiences, and theatres in the home market of the United States.

If the process must happen to the existing motion picture institution it may be costly. But if the motion picture industry makes it happen it may be profitable. It is inevitable.

EMPTY MONOPOLY

CONTINUING some of last week's thoughts about the motion picture industry and the causes of education, it is to be remarked that all programs addressed at trying to keep camera and screen exclusively under control of "the industry" are solicitations of trouble.

Monopoly of the art would imply expensive responsibility.

A large proportion of the external difficulties of the motion picture industry have been from pressuring groups and persons who want things done on the screen that have nothing to do with entertainment.

These pressures will be relieved in ratio as it is made possible for those who want pictures to say something to be able to say it for themselves, with pictures, at their own expense.

The motion picture industry of today means really the amusement picture. That is its job. It is in no manner equipped to tend to other jobs and never should be.

The linotype and printing press afford another, older way of saying things. They have become available to everybody. That saves printers and publishers a lot of trouble.

This Week

61 Stories Bought

While the last of the sales organizations of the large companies were meeting in annual conventions and receiving lists of the pictures they would handle in 1937-38, Hollywood producers continued to add properties to their lists chiefly for inclusion in the coming season's schedule. During the month of May, some 19 producers bought 61 vehicles from the regular sources.

A full list of the purchases, with all available production credits, is found in the story on page 13.

Trouble in Paris

The Paris International Exposition of Arts and Crafts has brought alarm and serious dissension to the French motion picture industry. Exhibitors, facing loss of revenue because of competition from the Exposition itself and from the free showing of foreign feature pictures before general release, say they may have to close their theatres. A large section of the industry, represented by the Confederation of the French Cinema, has withdrawn its support from the Exposition because French production was not given the prominent place it was thought to deserve.

Pierre Autre, in a story on page 58, reports the dispute and describes the extent of motion picture participation in the Exposition.

On the Road

Equipped with fountain pen and blank contracts salesmen for the distributors are on the road prepared to supply exhibitors with full details of the virtues of a total of 593 productions to be released during the 1937-38 season. The figure will be increased by further lists from Gaumont British and from the independents, many of whose plans are not completed.

Post convention product plans are listed on page 44.

Italian Decree

Italy has made its initial move toward an apparent plan to eliminate American pictures from the Italian market. A decree has been issued increasing the dubbing tax and also the number of films which may be dubbed free of tax in return for producing Italian films. The law also provides for a larger appropriation for prizes to producers of Italian films, and Italian theatres now are required to show one national film for every two foreign films shown. In a story from Rome, it is reported the decree makes it difficult and costly for the American industry to remain in business in Italy.

The effect of the decree is described on page 67.

Union Contracts

Tentative contracts have been completed for new exchange unions in 14 cities and distribution and labor executives continued their discussions of proposals for agreements in other territories. Arbitration also was the means employed by the Screen Actors' Guild and the Painters' Brotherhood in ironing out minor differences with employers.

The labor horizon is scanned on page 37.

Strike Newsreel Shown

Paramount Newsreel has voluntarily released its voluntarily suppressed "horror" pictures of the Memorial Day steel strike riot in Chicago, where police are charged with shooting nine and injuring scores of picketers. The company acted after the films were shown before the Civil Liberties Committee of the United States Senate, in Washington, last Friday, and before a "packed house" on Capitol Hill.

Repercussions from the films in governmental and press channels are described on page 27.

British Poll Leaders

Norma Shearer and Gary Cooper are the most popular motion picture stars in England, according to a survey conducted in the Bernstein theatres in London and the British provinces. The poll, based upon the votes of 159,723 patrons of the theatres, also showed that adventure and society drama are the best liked types of production, that double programs are preferred, and that 60 per cent of the patrons like colored features.

Other facts the study disclosed are published on page 61.

Protest Theatre Ax

David Niles and Mrs. Ellen Woodward, deputy administrators of the Works Progress Administration, were visited by a delegation of seven representatives of theatrical unions who are protesting against discontinuance of Federal Theatre Projects. The WPA officials, after hearing the protest of the delegation, promised to take steps, if possible, to minimize distress.

Details of the conference are reported on page 82.

Backing the Stage

The stage of Broadway finishes its 1936-37 season this month, with as much dependence, if not more, than heretofore, on Hollywood's producers for financial support, Hollywood taking 16 of the biggest plays, and paying an average of $75,750 per manuscript, in a season that was remarkably low in stage producing activity.

The year on Broadway and its relation to Hollywood is described on page 35.

Roxy Plan Approved

The proposed film franchise between the Roxy Theatre and Twentieth Century-Fox was approved in the U. S. District Court by Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey this week at a hearing of the mooted Roxy reorganization plan. Formal approval of the plan is expected at the next hearing, Friday. Closing of the contract between the Roxy and Twentieth Century-Fox has been deferred until August 1.

Monopoly Denied

American and Mexican representatives of distributors of Hollywood pictures stoutly denied to a Mexican federal district attorney that their domination of the motion picture market particularly in Mexico City and Monterey, constituted a monopoly and was, in effect, stifling domestic production.

The hearing and the charges, first of their kind in Mexico, are reported by James Lockhart on page 75.

Protest Meeting

United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Pennsylvania called for a mass strike meeting in Philadelphia to draft plans in its fight against Paramount for the allegedly unfair tactics of withholding six pictures listed for release during the 1936-37 season. The Pennsylvania organization already has voted to picket any theatre playing Paramount pictures during August.

Additional information about the contemplated strike is on page 38.

Aristocratic

The aristocratic New Amsterdam playhouse in New York has taken its place in the list of legitimate theatres which have been converted into motion picture houses. The theatre is now operated by Cinema Circuit Corporation.

Details of the change are on page 62.

GB Convention

GB Pictures will assemble in annual sales convention in New York from Friday through Sunday, to hear Arthur A. Lee and George W. Weeks outline product and policies for 1937-38.

Stock Transfers

Stock ownership changes, some of them considerable, in eight motion picture companies are reported by the Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington, involving Warner Brothers, Paramount, Columbia, Educational, Loew, Pathe Film, Twentieth Century-Fox and General Theatres.

The transfers are described on page 30.

Public Relations

That British exhibitors' relations with the public press could be improved to advantage through the establishment of a Press and Propaganda Bureau was the outstanding topic at the open session of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association at Harrogate.

Bruce Allan's news from England is on page 41.

Circuit Convention

All divisional operating heads, film buyers, chief bookers, and home office representatives of National Theatres (Fox-Chase circuit) will attend a three-day convention at the Hotel Broadmoor, Colorado Springs, Col., next month for discussion of new product deals and management problems. The tentative date set is August 10-12.

Facts and Figures

"Where a Hollywood Million Goes," by Terry Ramsaye, is the title of an article which sets the pace for the compilation of facts and figures and general and personal data which comprises THE 1937-38 INTERNATIONAL MOTION PICTURE ALMANAC, a Quigley publication which comes off the press this weekend. The contents of the book, in the aggregate, constitute an imposing record of the empire which is the motion picture industry. In its individual sections the volume is an invaluable index to who is who and what is what within that empire.

A description of the Almanac and a foretaste of its contents appears on page 28.

Village Theatre

The village of Utica, Neb., is an exhibitor partner. The merchants, anxious for a theatre to attract trade, persuaded the village fathers to invest the public funds. This stake, increased by a PWA grant and a bond issue, was used to build a house which will be operated for the village by C. N. Howe & Sons of Sturgis, S. D.

The unique plan is explained on page 82.

Kansas Victory

The Kansas City, Kan., Chamber of Commerce and a committee of the Theatre Owners' Association, to the accompaniment of loud acclaim from the Kansas City Kansan, announced a victory in a rousing civic drive to place their city on the same first status as Kansas City, Mo. "Abatement of the discrimination is in sight," Ray T. Willette of the Chamber of Commerce said after an official visit to distributors' offices where it was indicated a reduction of the present-day 28-day clearance would be considered.

The story of a militant city's drive for equality is on page 37.

At the Fair

Participation by the motion picture industry in the New York World's Fair of 1939 is undecided as to extent and form, although many plans for such participation have been advanced. Indirectly, however, the screen will have an important role in the Fair program through its employment in many of the industrial and scientific exhibits.

Wall Street Angel

Still in the rumor class but apparently capable of substantiation is a report that the New York legitimate stage will receive new life through an injection of financial aid, specifically Wall Street money. Leading bankers are reported interested in investing a comfortable sum in legitimate production.

The report is treated in the general survey of the stage at the close of its season which appears on page 35.

NEARLY every mail brings reports of a new medal, award or certificate presented to David O. Selznick for his Technicolor feature, "A Star Is Born." The M & P circuit of New England annually plays host at an outing for friends and employees. Martin J. Mullin and Samuel Pinanski, the M. and P. of the company, are shown seated in the center of the first row, in a picture taken at this year's affair.

61 STORIES PURCHASED FOR FUTURE PRODUCTION

Hollywood Producers Buying Additional Properties to Round Out Uncompleted Schedules for the New Season

As the last of the producing and distributing organizations finished their annual sales conventions and announced a large number of releases for the coming season, their Hollywood producers are buying additional stories for release in 1937-'38.

Some 19 producers bought 61 properties in May, with Sol Lesser, head of Principal Productions, leading with a total of 20 purchases. Nineteen of these were original stories by Edgar Rice Burroughs, who is also the author of the Tarzan stories, and the other will be used to star Bobby Breen. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer made six purchases and Twentieth Century-Fox and Radio each bought five.

A breakdown of the source of supply shows that, besides Mr. Lesser's 19 original stories and one book, MGM took two originals, two books and two plays; Radio, four originals, one play; Monogram, three originals; Warners, one original and two plays; Grand National, two originals and one book; B. P. Schulberg, two originals; Paramount, two originals; Samuel Goldwyn, one original and one play; General Pictures, one original and one book; John Ford, one book; Leo McCarey, one book; Crescent Pictures, one book; Selznick-International, one original; Republic, one original; Universal, one play; Major Productions, one book, and Walt Disney, one novel.

The purchase by Mr. Lesser of the Edgar Rice Burroughs works was first announced a month ago when the producer secured an option on a large list of the author's stories. No titles were announced at the time, however, and it was only last week that Mr. Lesser made his selections. No announcement has been made as to which distributor will handle the film versions but it is expected that either Twentieth Century-Fox, or Radio, through which Mr. Lesser now distributes, will release.

Derr Buys 17 Properties

The purchases in May by E. B. Derr, head of Crescent Pictures, totaled 17 properties in all from Major R. T. M. Scott. The novels and stories included in the deal all have to do with the character, "Secret Service Smith," who will be the leading character, as well, in the six features Mr. Derr hopes to produce with the detective, Aurelius Smith, as the leading character. It was reported that Mr. Derr paid $60,000 for the stories.

Radio also attracted considerable attention with the official announcement of its purchase of the current Broadway legitimate play, "Room Service." Warner Brothers, through its affiliation with producer George Abbott, had a financial interest in the show and entered bids for the motion picture rights as well. Radio, however, topped all bids with an offer of $255,000. This price was reputed to be the highest ever paid for the screen rights to a play, with the exception of Anne Nichols' "Abie's Irish Rose," for which Paramount paid a reported $300,000.

ORIGINALS STILL MAIN SOURCE

According to statistics compiled by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in 1936 nearly 70 per cent of all motion picture stories were originals written by studio writers. In 1935, these stories represented only 50 per cent of Hollywood's outlet.

Novels seem to be falling off, the report also says, as a source of story supply for, whereas 142 were made into pictures in 1935, only 92 reached the screen in 1936.

Stage plays continue to hold their own since there was no decrease in the supply of plays and short stories for the screen. However, these still form only a minority among all material used.

The MGM report concluded that in 1936 no less than 371 original stories written for the screen were produced.

Paramount Suits Up for Settlement

Conferences having an out-of-court settlement as their aim have been opened by the Paramount reorganization trustees in their two suits to recover alleged damages and losses from former officers and directors of the company. The trustees, whose action was started in 1934, charge losses of several million dollars resulting from excessive sums paid to company executives, socalled profits made by the defendants out of an employees' stock purchase plan, and fulfillment by the company of the agreements for stock repurchase.

Discussions were reported to be in the early stage, with no definite proposals made as yet. Indications pointed, however, to mutual desire between Root, Clark, Buckner & Ballantine, attorneys for the plaintiffs, and counsel for the 24 defendants that out-of-court settlement be made in preference to costly litigation.

Defendants in the first action include Paramount's board of directors from 1927 to 1931. They are: Jules Brulatour, Harold B. Franklin, Daniel Frohman, Sam Katz, Sidney R. Kent, Ralph Kohn, Jesse L. Lasky, the estates of Elek J. Ludvigh, Maurice Newton, Sir William Wiseman, Herbert Wobber, Adolph and Eugene Zukor.

Defendants charged with "unreasonable compensation" are Eugene Zukor and Messrs. Lasky, Kent, Katz and Kohn. Those who would be compelled to return profits—"actual or potential"—accruing from the employees' stock purchase plan are Felix M. Warburg, Jerome J. Hanauer, Gordon Leith, George W. Bovenizer, Lewis L. Strauss, Wiseman, and the estates of Otto M. Kahn and Mortimer L. Schiff.

Continued control of the International Film Chamber by Germany and Italy and use of the group as an instrument for propaganda by the two countries seemed apparent at the annual meeting in Paris this week.

Georges Lourau, vice-president of the French Cinema Confederation and manager of the French Films Sonores Tobis, was named president of the Chamber to succeed Oswald Lehnich, president of the Reichs Filmkammer. At the conclusion of Mr. Lourau's term the presidency will be given an Italian, thus destroying all hopes for changes in control from the hands of Germany, Italy and their supporters, which include all countries in Central Europe, even Poland.

Before the Chamber convened it had been the hope that its complexion would change sufficiently to induce the United States and England to participate in its activities. The election of Mr. Lourau gave rise to the belief because of his position in the French branch of Tobis, that Germany would continue its leadership of the Chamber. Informal opinions were that France, Belgium and Luxembourg sought to gain control through the entrance of the United States and England.

Besides the official delegates the majority of those attending the meetings were German, Italian and Central European. Luigi Freddi, Italian cinema chief, was present as a visitor.

In addition to the French Confederation members who acted as hosts, 17 other nations were represented with the delegates divided as follows: Germany, 17; Italy, 12; Austria, 10; Belgium, 14; Czechoslovakia, three; Norway, four; Switzerland, two, and one each for Finland, Denmark, Luxembourg, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Sweden, Rumania, Japan and India.

Neville Kearney, secretary of the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries, attended the meeting as a member of the authors' rights commission, the first session of which was attended also by Harold Smith, European representative of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, to whom the copyright situation is of interest.

Fanchon and Marco Pool Four St. Louis Houses

Nine theatres in St. Louis are involved in a pooling agreement made this week by Harry C. Arthur, executive operating head of Fanchon and Marco, with Bess Schulter and Alex Papand. The F and M's houses are Granada, Maplewood, Kingsland and Shaw while the Schulter-Papand units are the Avalon, Roxy, Whiteway, Columbia and Powhattan.

Under the agreement, which gives F and M 47 theatres in the St. Louis territory, the F and M circuit will do the buying and will supervise operations.

...AND THE PARAMOUNT PARADE WILL BE CONTINUED

New Financing is Consummated by Condor Pictures

Financial and executive reorganization of the comparatively new Condor Pictures was effected this week, following the continued inaction by the Securities and Exchange Commission on Condor's application for approval of a proposed stock issue. The company, producing for RKO Radio and Grand National, issued the following statement on Tuesday:

"Following meetings which have taken place during the past two weeks, negotiations were consummated yesterday with a strong financial group which has joined in the financial operations and policies of Condor Pictures, Inc.

"The resignation of Mr. George A. Hirliman as president of the corporation has been accepted with regret by the board of directors of Condor. Mr. Hirliman has withdrawn from the company entirely and will produce independently. (Richard Dix pictures.)

"M. H. Hoffman has been appointed executive vice-president in charge of production. Mr. Hoffman has returned to the West Coast to take complete charge of production, where he is completing the remaining pictures of this year's schedule.

"The companys' production program for 1937-38, for which national distribution has already been arranged, comprises 20 features and 26 shorts. Of this schedule four features and three shorts have been completed.

"Mr. Frank M. Snell has been elected treasurer and will depart for the West Coast immediately for permanent residence as the chief financial officer on the West Coast of the corporation.

To Produce on Coast

"All business and production activities will be centered in the West Coast with the exception of sales and exploitation, which will be maintained in New York. Mr. Amedee J. Van Beuren, chairman of the board, will continue to make New York his headquarters.

"Mr. Edwin N. Clark of New York, a newly elected director, has been chosen chairman of the executive committee. Mr. Clark has served extensively as counsel to various New York investment trusts and as their financial adviser in connection with various companies in which they had an interest. Mr. Clark as chairman of the executive committee will take complete charge of the financial operations of the company and will shortly leave for the West Coast for the purpose of formulating complete plans for the future operations of the company, particularly as they relate to the 1937-1938 season.

"At a special meeting of the board of directors of the company held July 6th, Messrs. Harold H. Anderson of Chicago, a director of Northwestern University; Edwin N. Clark of Robb, Clark and Bennitt, attorneys of New York; George A. Fry of Booz, Fry, Allen and Hamilton, industrial counsel of Chicago, and Lewis C. George of B. E. Buckman and Co., investment bankers of Madison, Wis., were elected directors.

"The new financial group is not replacing the original underwriters of the company. Messrs. B. E. Buckman and Company is retaining its position and interest in Condor as its underwriters."

Arnow in Charge of Talent

Max Arnow, for five years casting director of Warners, is succeeded by Steve Trilling, having been promoted to studio executive in charge of new talent. Mr. Trilling was for 12 years in charge of booking for Warners.

PARAMOUNT RELEASES STEEL STRIKE FILMS

Paramount News, after withholding its pictures of the Memorial Day steel strike riot in Chicago for one month, has released the film with the explanation that feeling on the labor question is not at the fever pitch it was immediately after the shootings occurred. Previously the company refused to have the film exhibited on the ground the "horror" of the contents might incite riots in theatres.

Says Tension Has Eased

Following exhibition of Paramount Newsreel's pictures of the Chicago steel strike riot before the La Follette Committee last Friday in the Senate Office Building, Washington, A. J. Richard, Paramount newsreel editor, ordered the general release and issued the following signed statement in explanation:

"Paramount News is releasing its pictures of the Memorial Day clash between strikers and police at South Chicago, Ill., to all of its theatre clients throughout the country.

"More than a month has elapsed since the riot pictures were made. A month ago more than 70,000 men were on strike in seven states; feeling ran at white heat. Today, generally speaking, conditions have changed for the better and the feelings of yesterday have subsided.

"Moreover, the pictures have been presented as evidence at a public hearing before the La Follette committee in session at Washington, D. C.

"For these reasons Paramount News now releases the pictures, unedited and exactly as they came from the camera, as a matter of public service."

Paramount alone obtained the pictures of the riot in which several were killed and scores injured, near the Republic Steel Plant, South Chicago. In a subsequent statement issued by Paramount, announcement is made that the films constitute an "extra" edition, Number 95-A, and that "the pictures of the clash, made before and during the trouble, are shown exactly as they came from the camera without editing."

Paramount also released a statement by Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, chairman of the strike investigating committee of the United States Senate, as follows:

"Following the Memorial Day clash between strikers and the police in Chicago, the Senate Committee requested the Paramount News to furnish it with a print of the pictures they had made on the spot. The committee has taken testimony from police officers, from strikers and from others who were present at the time this incident took place. These pictures, therefore, are not a complete portrayal of all the incidents leading up to, nor of the events which took place on that day. They have provided, however, an exhibit which has been of great value to the committee in endeavoring impartially to ascertain all of the facts relating to this particular phase of the investigation. Senator Thomas and I wish to express our appreciation for the cooperation of Paramount News in making this picture available to the committee. This film having been offered in evidence at a public hearing of the subcommittee now becomes a part of that committee's public record and as such merits the attention and study of all citizens of this country."

There is strong likelihood, however, that the films will be independently censored by communities and local boards in some places. Police Lieutenant Harry Costello, in Chicago, acting as Police Department censor there, banned the exhibition of Paramount's riot reel, on the ground that it "violates a local ruling which stipulates that pictures likely to incite patrons cannot be shown." Chicago's police are seen in the pictures wielding clubs and shooting strikers.

Andrew Rooney, of East Chicago, where the steel strike activity was centered, declared that the films may be shown in that section. But, in St. Louis, city officials banned the pictures because they are "unfit for women and children to see."

British theatres screened the films two weeks ago, after Paramount in this country declared it was using its editorial right of withdrawing from the screen pictures as "not fit to be seen." The British showings were explained by Paramount as "a mistake."

Shown Publicly

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee showed the films publicly for the first time, last Friday afternoon, before a packed house on Capitol Hill, after the existence of the pictures and weeks of controversial discussion over their existence almost became a national issue. During that period the press of the country and newspapers everywhere engaged in the controversy.

Senator Thomas, of Utah, a member of the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee, said the reel showed an "unprovoked attack on a peaceful group of strike demonstrators."

A graphic description of the newsreel's account was published in scores of newspapers, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch expressing a typical press opinion with the remark that those who saw the film "were shocked and amazed by the scenes showing scores of uniformed policemen firing their revolvers point blank into a dense crowd of men, women and children and then pursuing and clubbing the survivors unmercifully as they made frantic efforts to escape."

A resolution that the newsreel be exhibited to all members of the House of Representatives was introduced last week by Representative Teigan, of Minnesota, after Senator LaFollette got possession of a print.

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee showing is said to be the first instance where the motion picture was introduced into a Congressional investigation as definite evidence.

The darkened, velvet-draped LaFollette Senate hearing room was packed with about 500 spectators as the newsreel was shown.

Fred Wehrenberg, president of the MPTO of Missouri and Illinois, announced he will advise exhibitors in those states against exhibiting the pictures, and L. C. Hill, of Fanchon and Marco theatres, declared it will not be shown in F. and M. houses.

Agreement Awaited On Recording Fees

Negotiations have been in progress for more than a year between Electrical Research Products, Inc., and eight major producing companies with the view of reducing charges of recording license agreements. No definite understanding has been reached as yet, but one is expected shortly.

It is said that reductions may be as much as one-third. Charges are expected to continue on a per reel basis, but with the rate determined by cost of the individual production.

FOURTH OF FILM BUDGET TO CAST, SAYS ALMANAC

Federal Taxes Take 10 Per Cent 'Off the Top', Says Terry Ramsaye in 1937-'38 Edition, Out Next Week

Where a Hollywood Million For a Picture Is Spent

With a budget of $1,000,000 for production of a motion picture, the disbursement of the money is as follows, as presented in Terry Ramsaye's article on "Where a Hollywood Million Goes," in The 1937-'38 International Motion Picture Almanac:

BUDGET $1,000,000

Cast	$250,000.00
Extras, bits and characters	50,000.00
Director	100,000.00
Director Assistants	20,000.00
Cameraman and crew	15,000.00
Lights	20,000.00
Makeup, hairdressers and supplies	9,000.00
Teachers	2,000.00
Crew and labor	12,000.00
Story preparation	70,000.00
Story costs	50,000.00
Costumes and designers	20,000.00
Sets and art directors	125,000.00
Stills and photographs	4,000.00
Cutters	10,000.00
Film negative	10,000.00
Tests	12,000.00
Insurance	20,000.00
Sound—Engineering and negatives	31,000.00
Publicity, transportation, research, technical, miscellaneous	20,000.00
Indirect costs	150,000.00
TOTAL	$1,000,000

When Hollywood makes a million dollar picture, federal taxes take about 10 per cent of the cost "right off the top", what with income taxes payable to the United States treasury ranging up to and even in excess of 50 per cent of the star salaries, and assessments against executives' pay checks also figuring in the "indirect costs". Of the outlay of one-fourth of the picture's budget for the cast, $200,000 of this goes into the socalled star salaries. The 10 per cent lopped off by federal tax collectors in these classifications represents, furthermore, only "the beginning of the tax items that contribute to screen costs".

The foregoing facts, and quotations, are from an article on "Where a Hollywood Million Goes," by Terry Ramsaye, editor, in the 1937-38 edition of THE INTERNATIONAL MOTION PICTURE ALMANAC, a Quigley Publication, out next week.

"Everywhere there is a factory chimney smoking there is something being made that will sell to the movie mills of Hollywood," writes Mr. Ramsaye. That the motion picture "contributes vastly to the building materials industry, with its large component of labor costs," is reflected in the fact that "lumber of all sorts, metals, structural and electrical, glass, oil, paints, hardware, chemicals, electrical machinery, fabrics, plumbing, make-up materials, carbons, rubber and plaster are consumed by the train and shipload." An illustrative detail is this: nearly 40 per cent of the world's output of a certain class of synthetic, and specially treated woods and wall boards is consumed in the making of pictures.

Besides the contributions of the industry toward meeting the costs of operation of federal as well as state and local government, and making work for others to satisfy its demands for raw materials, the motion picture enters directly into the business of writing larger figures into the pay envelope of Mr. Citizen by the expansion of the industry in the past year, says the ALMANAC.

There was an increase of 9,500 permanent employees, to an estimated total of 282,000 persons directly employed in one or another of the three general branches of the industry, production, distribution and exhibition. By far the largest number of these, 241,000, are concerned with the final step in the course of a production, the presentation of it on the theatre's screen. The fact that 4,500 individuals were added to exhibition's payroll is evidence in itself that more theatres have returned to operation and new theatres have been built.

With a ten million dollar expansion in picture production costs, the spreading out of activity at the studios, particularly in the direction of concentration upon larger pictures, there was over the year a $7,800,000 rise in the payroll of Hollywood alone, to a total of $85,800,000 a year, according to the ALMANAC estimates. In terms of persons employed, production ranked second to exhibition. At the end of the period there were 28,- 000 holding jobs in the production field, as against 12,500 in distribution and the 241,000 in distribution. The business of selling the picture to the showman added 4,500 names to the bookkeeper's ledgers.

Studio capital investment, estimated roundly at an increase to a hundred million dollars, represented one-twentieth of the investment in the industry as a whole in the United States, which was in turn four-fifths of the total the world over. The studios in this country, which is practically to say in Hollywood, put that capital to work on an outlay of approximately $135,000,000 for production for the 1936-37 season.

880 More Theatres

New employment ranged from an increase of 18,436 placements of "extras" by the Central Casting Corporation in Hollywood, for a total of 268,436, to the 4,500 more employees in theatres. The records showed 880 more houses operating than a year ago.

In theatre construction, with all the wide range of labor involved, there were 465 new theatres built between April of 1936 and June this year. In dollars, from 1929 to the middle of 1937, theatre construction, including remodeling, brought an expenditure estimated at $424,914,000, almost a half billion dollars.

Increased attendance and increased admission prices together showed the progress made in the year. The Almanac records an average advance of one and one-half cents in the prices charged patrons, to a general average of 22 cents a ticket. With the total number of purchased tickets estimated within the range of 83,000,000 to 88,000,000 a week, in the United States, gross annual admissions, in dollars, were placed upward of nine hundred million dollars. World attendance weekly was approximately 215 to 220 million persons.

Most of the tickets were bought between 7:30 and 8:30 in the evening, but should everyone living within the borders of the United States set out to attend the theatre at exactly 7:30 p. m. the same day, there would be a problem for the exhibitors, though one they would enjoy experiencing, because the ratio of population to seats in 93 cities of more than 100,000 population averages 8.9. For the country as a whole, exclusive of the large cities, 14.4 persons, in the decimations by statistical fractions, would be trying to get into the same seat.

Approximately one-half of the 1,378 pages in this season's edition of The International Motion Picture Almanac are given to biographical information regarding persons in and close to the industry and of sufficient importance to warrant individual mention. There are 14,640 names in the Almanac's Who's Who, including stars, players, producers, directors, technicians, company executives, exhibitors, motion picture journalists and newspaper critics, and leaders of other societies and associations indirectly allied with the business which is the motion picture.

The international character of the Almanac is reflected in two special divisions of information, one on the British market, the other on the world at large.

World Problems

Despite the increasing motion picture consciousness of men in high places in other countries, with economists and politicians alike seeing in the theatre screen a powerful ally, the one to a national income, the other to propagandistic outpourings, productions from Hollywood represented 65 per cent of world output in motion picture production volume and 85 per cent in value, according to the Almanac. However, in individual articles by correspondents of Quigley Publications throughout the world, as well as in resumes of annual compilations by attaches of the Department of Commerce for the Motion Picture Division at Washington, the growth of the quota movement in principal nations and others of less importance on the world scene reflects the tightening competition.

A complete summarization of the year's earnings statements of companies in production, distribution and exhibition, also in theatre equipment and other concerns serving the business, is made in one of the 68 sections of the Almanac.

Among the sections are listing of product of the past season, with the most important credit details, both by company and alphabetically, and the titles of all features released in this country since the advent of the talking picture. Concomitantly, there is a list of stories and plays purchased in the past twelve months, some already made into pictures for the season now ending.

SEC REPORTS STOCK CHANGES IN 8 UNITS

Warner Brothers Sell Preferred; Hertz Disposes of Paramount Stock; Loew Buys Common

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

The Securities and Exchange Commission reported this week considerable activity by officers and/or directors of motion picture companies in changes of stock ownership, particularly in Warner Brothers, Paramount, Loew's, Twentieth Century-Fox, Columbia, Educational, Pathe Film and General Theatres.

Disposition by Renraw, Inc., (the Warners' private holding company), of 858 shares of Warner Brothers preferred stock and, by each of the three Warner brothers, of 286 shares of preferred, through their holding companies, was reported by the Commission in its first May summary of stock transactions. During the month, S. P. Friedman, New York, acquired 5,000 six per cent Warner debentures.

At the close of the month Renraw, Inc., held 13,500 shares of preferred; S. P. Friedman, 600 shares of common and 46,000 debentures; Albert Warner, vice president, held, directly, 59,260 shares of common, 10,618 shares of preferred and 1,530,000 debentures and, through holding companies, 5,988 shares of common, 4,500 shares of Warner preferred and 269,460 debentures; H. Hertz Releases Shares

A report from Paramount showed the disposition by John D. Hertz, through Lehman Brothers, of 6,000 shares of common stock, 2,500 shares of second preferred stock and 55,000 three and one-quarter per cent debentures, holding, at the close of May, some 5,500 shares of second preferred and 32,000 debentures. The report also showed that Maurice Newton disposed of 400 shares of Paramount common and acquired a like number of second preferred, directly, and, through Hallgarten and Company, disposed of 200 shares of common; at the close of the month he held 8,118 shares of common and 2,813 shares of second preferred directly, and 200 shares of first preferred and 97,000 debentures through Hallgarten and Company.

2,196 Shares to Arthur M. Loew

In Columbia Pictures, Harry Cohn, president, disposed of purchase warrants covering 18,587 shares of common voting trust certificates and at the close of the month held 1,639 shares of common and 67,127 common voting trust certificates.

In Educational Pictures, Bruno Weyers, New York, disposed of 100 warrants for common stock, holding 1,540 at the close of May.

Through liquidation of his holding company, Arthur M. Loew acquired 2,196 shares of Loew's common during the month and disposed of 1,901 shares, holding 295 shares at the close of the period.

Also reported was acquisition by Robert R. Young, New York, of 1,900 shares of Pathe Film common in April and 3,000 shares in May, bringing his holdings at the close of May to 35,715 shares, directly, and 10,283 shares through a holding company.

In Twentieth Century-Fox, A. R. Jenkins, through his wife, disposed of 25 shares of common stock.

A report on the holdings of officers and directors of Educational Pictures when the company's registration became effective showed that Hugh MacNair Kahler, Princeton, N. J., director, held no securities, while E. W. Hammons, New York, president, held 700 shares of common and 17,683 warrants, and Theodore R. Williams, New York, officer, held five common warrants.

A similar report from Pathe Film showed that Theodore C. Streibert, New York, director, held 15 shares of preferred.

John E. McAuley, Chicago, elected a director in General Theatres Equipment Corporation in May, reported the holding of 100 shares of common stock.

Kincey Doubts Value Of Higher Admissions

Increased admission prices in the Southeast would bring no increase in gross profits, H. F. Kincey, cooperator with R. B. Wilby of one of the largest circuits in the south, said when he arrived in New York to confer with Frank Freeman, Paramount theatre head.

Attendance, Mr. Kincey said, would be curtailed in proportion to the increased scale. The Wilby-Kincey theatres, 105, are located in North and South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Alabama and Georgia.

Representative Named

Barnette Pomerantz, for the last 15 years in charge of the construction and modernization of many theatres for independent operators and for Warner Brothers, is now New York representative of Amusement Supply Company, 341 West 44th Street, New York. Mr. Pomerantz is supervising the theatre construction, modernizations, furnishings and equipment departments.

Warning on Fight Films

Violators of the federal regulation prohibiting transportation of the Louis-Braddock fight pictures across state lines will be prosecuted in Alabama, James C. Smith, United States attorney of Birmingham, warned theatre owners.

HOLLYWOOD STILL BIGGEST BACKER OF STAGE, DESPITE RESTRICTIONS

16 Plays, Averaging $75,750, Bought by Films in '36-'37, When Broadway Production Hit a New Low for a Season

by FREDERICK W. AYER

The 1936-37 legitimate theatre season, now drawing to a close, has demonstrated more clearly than ever before just how much the Broadway stage has come to depend on Hollywood financing of plays in addition to the technical and creative talent of the film studios. Although Hollywood this season has paid higher prices for the film rights to Broadway plays—an average of $75,750 for each of the 16 plays purchased of the past season's crop—production on Broadway hit a new low with only 90 plays and musicals as against 99 the previous season and 120 during the 1934-35 cycle.

The total number of productions during 1936-37 would have been considerably larger, it is agreed, if Hollywood had participated as freely as it ordinarily would have done had not the stiffer contractual rights insisted on by the Dramatists Guild a year ago been put into effect at the beginning of this season.

The result of this has been, of course, that the motion picture interests were discouraged from entering financially into Broadway theatrical production and this is borne out by the fact that film money was involved this season in only 13 productions compared with more than twice that number during 1935-36 in spite of the fact that there were indications that the trend was toward even larger participation until the dramatists' action.

For more than a year Hollywood has abided by its agreement not to finance Broadway plays—those which were so financed this season being previous commitments—and the consensus along Times Square now is that shortly Broadway and Hollywood will get down to round table discussions of ways and means of counteracting the situation created by the new Minimum Basic Agreement of the Dramatists' Guild.

It is true, of course, that the immediate occasion for the dramatists' stipulations was the same kind of mercenary consideration which prompted the objections thereto, both in Hollywood and Broadway managerial circles. Regardless of the fact, which the dramatists themselves probably would not trouble to deny, the legitimate theatre as an institution would seem to have been saved a few possible headaches.

Use of Hollywood Financing

"While the public may regret any factor which curtails the selectivity and quantity of drama and entertainment, it is fitting that the public remember at the same time that under the prevailing circumstances a large-scale investment of motion picture backing in legitimate theatre enterprises could easily have the effect, say, of controlled inflation," observes Stirlring Bowen in the Wall Street Journal. "I am speaking now of the effects on product. And the reason is not prejudicial to Hollywood methods as such but only to their possible misapplication in the legitimate theatre at this particular time. For the motion picture interests would be investing in a Broadway product for the benefit of the motion picture industry, which is naturally their first concern, rather than in the interest of the best possible stage entertainment."

"GHOST GOES WEST" CALLED BEST BRITISH

"The Ghost Goes West," produced by London Films, with Alexander Korda as producer and Rene Clair as director, was the best film of the past season, according to a vote of the readers of the Film Weekly, English trade publication. The awards were made at a luncheon last week at the Trocadero, London.

The performance of Nova Pilbeam in "Nine Days a Queen" was voted the best of the year.

John Maxwell, head of Associated British Pictures, in replying to a toast to British films, declared, "I think the crisis is over. The industry has been deloused. Having gotten rid of the promoters and fly-by-nights, it will go on to prosperity."

Mr. Bowen points out that such an investment would entail a measure of authority, as in any other commercial enterprise and that, due to the problems of motion picture production, the influence presumably would be toward haste.

"There are a few theatrical managers who have succeeded in using Hollywood financing to fine purposes," says Mr. Bowen. "In these instances the managements and everyone else, including the public, have been the beneficiaries. It is easy, however, to imagine an instance in which a legitimate management in seeking to absorb such financing would find the arrangement detrimental to the product. No one would be particularly to blame, but there might be impaired the singleness of purpose which every worthwhile stage presentation requires.

"There is no reason why motion picture capital should not be invested in the future in good Broadway productions to the advantage of all parties concerned. Hollywood, for example, finds it profitable to buy the rights to Broadway plays without financial participation in advance. Thus far, however, there is lacking a sufficient understanding and agreement on all sides of the underlying factors involved in such a partnership."

From Artistic Viewpoint

Br. Bowen's plea for further film financing of Broadway is made purely from the investment angle and it remains for an official of the motion picture industry, itself, to come to the defense of film participation in the Broadway scene from an artistic, as well as commercial, standpoint.

Says Jacob Wilk, eastern scenario chief of Warner Bros.:

"There are still many plays produced without any consideration of their cinematic possibilities. There are still producers who play the theatrical production game by its own rules, taking chances on plays on their legitimate merits and regarding any Hollywood vein of gold that may later be tapped as 'gravy.' This way of producing plays is, of course, a gamble. It always has been. It was a gamble long before the movies began their portentous flickering. If it is today a bigger gamble than ever, I submit that the blame lies rather in the ever-mounting costs of theatrical production than at any door in Hollywood.

"As for the economic influence of the movies," Mr. Wilk continues, "there have been excellent plays of late years that might never have reached the boards but for the backing of motion picture firms. The obvious retort to that is, I suppose, that these plays were brought out as mere by-product of the Hollywood factories preliminary to their incarnation in celluloid.

"Let producers . . . take heart," Mr. Wilk concludes. "Let them nourish a faith in the ability of a good play to stand on its own feet. That is really the view that Hollywood 'money-grabbers' take when they invest some of their shekels in a Broadway production. An inferiority complex is a deadly thing, and a certain number of stage producers—a minority, I trust—are suffering from one."

Another Source

Meanwhile, another possible source of financing for stage producers was made known this week when it was reported, unofficially, that a group of Wall Street financiers are considering the formation of a corporation with the specific purpose of investing in the legitimate theatre's production branch.

It is said that, during the recent convention of the American Theatre Council held in New York, the president of one of New York's largest banks attended unobtrusively various of the business sessions and absorbed the information—dwelt upon at length by most of the speakers—that the cardinal problem of show business is lack of suitable or sufficient backing.

As things stand now, it is understood a group of financiers will form a corporation, charging the manager six per cent for the money. plus a share in profits to be settled on. There will be no stock sold. According to report the corporation will have an investment fund of from $500,000 to $1,000,000, and it further is asserted that it will transact business with producers on an individual basis only, it being recognzed that successful producers are at their most efficient peak when they are working as individuals.

Film Rights

With respect to motion picture rights, it is understood the organization would require the producer to keep his play running three weeks, so that, in the event the production fails, there would be a reasonable chance for the backers to balance their losses with film money. (N. B.: Uuder the terms of the Dramatists Guild the management of a Broadway play does not participate in the sale of film rights unless the play runs either three weeks in New York or for 75 consecutive performances on the road.)

Prognostications of financing and other plans for the theatre generally are rife, however, at the conclusion of each season and seldom, if ever, amount to anything. For the season just closing, no matter whether fewer plays were produced, whether there was a greater proportion of failures and whether or not Hollywood backed fewer plays than ever before, it cannot be denied that the 1936-37 season did prove that there still is a theatre-going public, not only in New York, but on the road as well.

Probably the most remarkable feature of this season was the fact that Shakespeare came into his own commercially and artistically, with two smash hits to his posthumous credit: "Hamlet," as portrayed by John Gielgud and presented by

Guthrie McClintic, and "Richard II," enacted by Maurice Evans and produced by Eddie Dowling and Robinson Smith.

It also should be noted that one of Hollywood's favorites, Leslie Howard, attempted a production of "Hamlet" and while Mr. Howard's production in many ways overshadowed that of the Gielgud-McClintic combine, it was duly recorded that Mr. Howard's histrionic ability hardly could be compared with that of Mr. Gielgud.

Of interest, too, is the fact that whereas the McClintic production of "Hamlet" reputedly cost in the neighborhood of $100,000—and Mr. Howard's, also—the Dowling-Smith production of "Richard II" actually cost only $23,000. The latter production cost, roughly, $6,500 weekly to operate and, for 16 weeks, grossed $285,000. The figures on the two "Hamlets" are not available, but they do not compare with those of "Richard II," which will reopen in September for a limited New York engagement before a road tour of 26 weeks.

With the Broadway season on the wane for ten weeks of the hot weather period, Summer stock, as is its annual custom, again steps into the theatrical limelight, a limelight which this year does not seem as potent as in seasons past. Last season saw the demise of many summer companies within a brief period of their openings and this, together with the fact that Actors' Equity has "cracked down" hard on the fly-by-night element which has marked this phase of theatrical activity in the past.

Fewer Summer Productions

In any event, there are far fewer companies planning summer productions this season and thus far it has been impossible to obtain even tentative schedules from the majority of those contemplating the usual ten-week season, even though the commencement of the season is only a few weeks away.

Steady growth of summer theatre activities in the past five years has unquestionably established the more responsible operators as an important branch of the theatre, but in the expansion process a great many irresponsible persons have been weeded out and thrown into the discard. For this reason it is thought that while this year there may be fewer theatres operating in the "cow-barns," there will be more dependable operators, running their enterprises on sound, businesslike methods, than ever before.

Interest in the summer theatre was slight until last year when expansion hit a new record. Actors Equity evinced interest when it found that the summer enterprises were affording more employment to more actors than the road. Action immediately was begun to organize groups, resulting in regulation of salaries, conditions, expenses, number of performances, salary and transportation guarantees and the number of Equity members used in each company. All of these factors have this year helped to eliminate the irresponsibility of former years.

Federal Theatre Factor

In a discussion of the Broadway theatre during the 1936-37 season the Government's Federal Theatre Project can scarcely be overlooked, for it has assumed a position of great importance in the Broadway scene.

Whether or not the complaints of Broadway's legitimate managers that the Federal Theatre is cutting into private enterprise are justified may now be more adequately aired, comparative attendance figures now being available for both Federal and Broadway drama.

Since the Federal Theatre's drama units began to function in New York in December, 1934, and up to January 1, 1937, the WPA presented 68 so-called "professional productions" for a total of 2,369 performances to a total attendance of 2,161,452. According to a previous checkup on Broadway commercial theatre attendance records as indicated by statistics on the distribution of The Playbill, 18,000,000 programs were distributed during the combined 1934-35 and 1935-36 seasons, and while the Playbill distribution is not to be taken as an exact indication of Broadway attendance, it is a close approximation.

COOPER, DIETRICH LEAD TOKYO POLL

Gary Cooper and Marlene Dietrich were chosen as the most popular motion picture stars in a poll conducted among patrons of six Tokyo first run theatres. Questionnaires were distributed by the Waseda University Advertising Research Club.

Five per cent of the voters reported they attended motion picture theatres ten times a month; three per cent, nine times; 3.5 per cent, eight times; 2.2 per cent, seven times; seven per cent, six times; 14.7 per cent, five times; 20.5 per cent, four times; 26.3 per cent, three times; 16 per cent, twice, and 4.5 per cent, once.

The voters ranged in age from 17 to 25 years. One-third listed themselves as students and 15 per cent reported they were unemployed. Paramount pictures were voted as the best liked.

Creating New Audience

One important factor to be considered in connection with the Federal Theatre's statement that it is creating a new audience and is not cutting into the commercial theatre is that houses used by the FTP are not concentrated in the Times Square area, some of them lying on the fringe of this section, some of them being completely outside it, though still in Manhattan, and others being in Harlem and Brooklyn. On the other hand, the FTP consistently has increased its production rate, 11 plays being produced between January 1, 1937, and the beginning of May.

Although accurate figures on grosses of the Federal Theatre are not available, officials of the government agency claim 80 to 90 per cent of attendance at their "professional productions" are paid admissions.

Second Play Competition

The second play competition of the Bureau of New Plays for college students and recent graduates is announced today by Theresa Helburn, director. The terms and requirements were decided after a series of preliminary meetings between Miss Helburn, the Advisory Council—Walter Pritchard Eaton of Yale, Chairman; Frederick H. Koch of the University of North Carolina and Kenneth Rowe of the University of Michigan—and the representatives of the seven major motion picture companies sponsoring the Bureau of New Plays. These last are: Marion Avery, Columbia Pictures Corporation; J. Robert Rubin, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation; Russell Holman, Paramount Pictures, Inc.; Leda Bauer, RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.; Edwin P. Kilroe, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation; Charles Beahan, Universal Pictures Company, Inc.; Jacob Wilk, Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc.

The Bureau of New Plays was founded May 4, 1936, by these same seven companies in association with Theresa Helburn to discover and encourage young playwriting talent for the theatre and to assist authors, not only with financial aid but with criticism and advice, toward a professional goal at a difficult period in their careers. To this end funds have been appropriated for competetive cash awards, as well as for scholarship and fellowship awards.

Awards May Be Increased

Awards of 500 will again be made to the authors of the six best plays submitted in the competition. At the discretion of the Bureau of New Plays, and on the basis of future promise and financial need, these awards may be increased to scholarship awards of $1,250 or to fellowship awards of from $1,500 to $2,500. More awards may be granted if the material submitted justifies it or, if in the opinion of the judges, the material submitted does not justify the full quota of awards, the Bureau reserves the right to grant only as many as they recommend.

The recipients of such scholorship or fellowship awards will be expected to submit at least two plays within the year's tenure of the scholarship or fellowship or within six months thereafter, and in case of production of one or both of such plays, part of the scholarship or fellowship awards shall be considered as advance on royalties to be returned to the Bureau of New Plays for the maintenance of awards.

It was decided to open this second competition October 1, close it December 15, and announce the awards not later than March 15. This change in dates from last year's competition was made to allow students who may have written scripts this summer to revise them with professorial criticism in the fall before submitting them in the competition, to obviate rushing professors in colleges at the last moment for letters of recommendation which must accompany the scripts, and to permit students new in the fall in playwriting courses likewise to enter the competition.

Any undergraduate or graduate student now attending any American or Canadian university or college, or who has attended such an institution at any time since September 1, 1931, whether or not the work for a degree was completed, is eligible to compete for the awards.

Plays must be full length, original, unpublished and unproduced by any professional theatre, and must have written recommendation by the head of the English or Drama Department or his authorized representative, of the college or university attended by the author.

Miss Helburn says, "The colleges are showing a great deal of interest already. The professors of playwriting report that their students are even now planning what plays they wish to submit in this competition. A great many of the competitors in last year's competition who received encouragement and advice on their manuscripts are working now on new plays which they expect to submit in this second play competition."

A committee of judges selected from a panel of leading producers, directors, educators, actors and critics, and Theresa Helburn, ex-officio, will make the final decisions in the second play competition. Their names will be announced in a few days.

Motion picture rights to plays produced on Broadway this season hit an all-time high last week when RKO-Radio paid to producer George Abbott and co-authors Allan Boretz and John Murray the sum of $255,000 for their smash hit "Room Service."

FEDERAL THEATRE AS A FACTOR

Like "Abie's Irish Rose," "Three Men on a Horse" and many other subsequent smash hits, "Room Service" had been peddled for several months to Broadway producers. Rejected repeatedly, it finally was picked up last year by Sam H. Harris, who, with MGM backing, produced it in Philadelphia, put Pulitzer prize-winner George S. Kaufman to work on it and dropped it, reputedly taking a loss of $27,000 on the tryout.

Master-mind Abbott bought the play, tried it out in Baltimore a few weeks ago and opened in New York to paens of praise from the critics and substantial lines at the Cort Theatre box-office. Since the play opened in New York it has maintained a steady average weekly gross of $18,000—considered phenomenal for this time of year—and looks as if it might stay at the Cort for at least two seasons.

Hollywood buys of plays produced this season follow, listed according to prices paid:

PLAY	COMPANY	PRICE
Room Service	RKO-Radio	$255,000
You Can't Take It With You	Columbia	200,000
Stage Door	RKO-Radio	130,000
Excursion	MGM	125,000
The Women	Gordon-Goetz	125,000
Yes, My Darling Daughter	Warner Bros.	110,000
Having Wonderful Time	RKO-Radio	82,500
The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse	Laemmle	55,000
Night Must Fall	MGM	40,000
Spring Dance	MGM	25,000
Swing Your Lady	Warner Bros.	25,000
Double Dummy	MGM	15,000
Miss Quis	Columbia	10,000
A House in the Country	RKO-Radio	10,000
Chalked Out	Warner Bros.	7,500
Without Warning	Warner Bros.	2,000
	TOTAL	$1,217,000

The above listing represents the outright purchases of plays by Hollywood. It should not be overlooked, however, that Warner Bros. bought two productions not listed. These were "White Horse Inn" and "Tovarich." Both of these buys were unusual in that, in consideration for paying Gilbert Miller $100,000 for "Tovarich," Warners agreed to finance the production of "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" and "Promise." The loss on the two plays has been estimated at $40,000 and it is reported that Warners also secured the film rights to "White Hourse Inn" gratis in return for financing the stage production, the loss on which is estimated at $170,000.

The 16 plays listed above make up the sum total of plays purchased by Hollywood from the 1936-37 harvest, but during the season the motion picture companies also bought several plays which were produced last season and, in three instances, two and three seasons before. The list follows:

PLAY	COMPANY	PRICE
Boy Meets Girl	Warner Bros.	$175,000
Idiot's Delight	MGM	135,000
First Lady	MGM	75,000
On Your Toes	Warner Bros.	50,000
Yellow Jack (1933-34 season)	MGM	20,000
Lost Horizon (1933-34 season)	MGM	15,000
Jezebel (1933-34 season)	Warner Bros.	10,000
Moon Over Mulberry St.	Blackstone	1,000
	TOTAL	$481,000

Hollywood, during the legitimate theatre season just closed, backed only 13 Broadway plays as compared with an estimated 30 in the prior, 1935-36, season. In virtually every instance plays backed this season by film companies were contracted for prior to the time the new Minimum Basic Agreement of the Dramatists Guild went into effect.

The complete list of plays backed by Hollywood this season follows, with the name of the motion picture company:

Night Must Fall, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.
St. Helena, MGM.
Red Hot and Blue, Paramount.
Swing Your Lady, Warner Bros.
Sweet River, Warner Bros.
Brother Rat, Warner Bros.
White Horse Inn, Warner Bros.
Young Madame Conti, Warner Bros.
Promise, Warner Bros.
The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse, Warner Bros.
Johny Johnson, John Hay Whitney.
200 Were Chosen, John Hay Whitney.
Babes in Arms, John Hay Whitney.

Out of these 13 plays only two, "Babes in Arms" and "Brother Rat," were considered to be in the "hit" class, while "Red, Hot and Blue," "White Horse Inn," "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" and "Swing Your Lady" were in the category of moderate successes.

K. C. Fight Over Clearance Eases, Chamber Says

"Abatement of the discrimination is in sight," said Ray T. Willette, manager of the Chamber of Commerce of Kansas City, Kan., after a committee of the Theatre Owners' Association of the city last week called on distributors at nearby Kansas City, Mo., relative to quicker first runs. Members of the committee who called on the local exchange managers were George Baker, Electric; Charles Vaughan, Art, and Fred Meyn, Pershing.

Said the Kansas City Kansan, which is backing the fight for first runs to the finish: "Last week's call on the distributors, 13 of whom office on film row in Kansas City, Mo., was the second indulged in by the local Theatre Owners' Association, following the insistence of Kansas City, Kansas, theatre patrons that this, the largest city in Kansas, should be permitted to see new films as early as they are shown in other first-run communities throughout Kansas."

Because distributors said they would have to confer on the matter with home office executives, the Kansan went on, "the claims were not pressed with the distributors during the interim of several weeks to permit them to confer with their company superiors. But last week, at the insistence of the Chamber of Commerce that ample time had passed, the T. O. A. group returned to learn what prospects are in store for Kansas City, Kan., in the new film year that is approaching."

Contracts Given Exchange Unions In 14 Key Cities

With tentative contracts completed for exchange unions in 14 key cities discussions continued this week between home office distribution executives and officials of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees on proposals from other territories.

Although it was expected Salt Lake City would be among those on the immediate calendar, home office exchange heads were informed that none of the major companies was represented by a group which sent in a request for recognition. In all situations discussed so far, only contracts for the eight major companies have been involved. What action independent companies will take toward the new unions has not been decided.

Other labor organization activities included the enforcement of a closed shop for eastern production by the Screen Actors' Guild and the completion of an agreement between the painters, scenic artists and makeup men and producers in Hollywood.

The Guild, through Mrs. Florence Marston, eastern representative announced last week that Hollywood producers would be unable to film sequences in New York in which eastern talent is used without signing a Guild contract with her office, establishing Guild wage scales and working conditions for the talent employed. The ruling was made as a result of the filming by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer of scenes for "Big City."

A closed shop for the studio employees went into effect on July 1st in accordance with the agreement reached with the Painters Brotherhood locals when the recent strike ended. Makeup men voted to remain in the Brotherhood and presented to Pat Casey, producer representative, salary demands calling for $2.25 an hour for make-up men, $1.50 an hour for hairdressers, a 48 hour week and time and a half for overtime.

Negotiations toward a settlement of the strike of the Commercial Artists and Designers Union against the Max Fleischer studio in New York were continued in the office of Louis Nizer, attorney for the producer. Attending the session in addition to Mr. Nizer were William Collins, American Federation of Labor vice-president, acting for the union, who was asked by Mayor LaGuardia to aid in the discussions, and Mr. Fleischer.

After Warner Brothers hired eight nonunion painters on Tuesday about a score of members of the studio painters' local walked out and picketed the studio but returned to work when the studio discharged the men. The strike was on for only about ten minutes when the studio capitulated. The walkout was called by Herb Sorrel, business agent of the local, who charged that the studio had violated a verbal agreement.

Exhibitors Call Mass Meeting in Paramount Fight

United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Pennsylvania, following the appeal made in Washington last week for an exhibitors' strike against Paramount, called for a "monster strike" mass meeting this week at the Broadwood Hotel, Philadelphia.

In a notice sent to all members of UMPTO, it was pointed out that the organization has "voted to lawfully picket any theatre in the zone that buys Paramount at this time or plays any Paramount pictures, features, shorts, or newsreels, on and after August 1st."

On Wednesday, the UMPTO sent a notice to the press that, "Attorneys for this organization are preparing action for a suit to compel Paramount to deliver what they sold," and, "It is intended by this action to give all film contracts, and the Paramount contract in particular, a thorough judicial airing. To that end, Mr. Zukor and Mr. Balaban and other Paramount executives will be subpoenaed to answer a number of questions which have long bothered exhibitors."

A group of district captains already has been appointed to rally exhibitors in the drive. It is charged Paramount is including on its 1937-38 program six features which were supposed to have been released during the 1936-37 season.

Another charge made by the Pennsylvania organization is that Paramount's 1937-38 contracts gives the company the right to audit exhibitors' books. This, according to the UMPTO bulletin, would make Paramount "a partner to profits but not to losses."

P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio and sponsor of the Washington meeting has continued his attack on Paramount by mailing bulletins containing a summary of the points decided upon at the protest session.

The four points that make up the course of action agreed upon, according to Mr. Wood, are:

That all exhibitors throughout the United States refuse to play any Paramount pictures during August and for such longer period as the Washington committee may, by its future action, decide upon.

That all exhibitors refrain from entering into any 1937-38 contracts with Paramount at this time and during the duration of the strike.

That all 1936-37 contract holders make a demand for the release of the six pictures involved.

That the action be called a "buyers' strike" or a "sit-down strike" of exhibitors against Paramount.

The six films which the exhibitors charge should have been released are "Souls at Sea," "High, Wide and Handsome," "Angel," "Artists and Models," "Spawn of the North," and "The Count of Luxembourg."

MPPDA, Eight Companies Charged with Bias

Charging conspiracy and violation of anti-trust laws, the Gary Theatre Company, of Gary, Indiana, has filed joint suit against the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Balaban & Katz, and eight major producers in Indianapolis, asserting that the defendants had been discriminatory in refusing to sell it films. The complaint alleges that the defendant companies have "maintained by agreement among themselves clearances of protection, refusing to sell films until they had been shown in one or more Chicago theatres in the Loop and by one or more outside it."

Alleged is that Gary, situated but 30 miles from the Loop is unable to obtain first-run films and is thus under competitive handicap. In addition to Paramount, which is accused of owning B & K by stock control, other defendant producers are Columbia, M-G-M, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists, Universal, and Warners.

National Decency Legion Classifies 13 Productions

Of 13 new motion pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week, 12 were approved for general patronage and one was classed as objectionable in part. The pictures and classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage—"The Emperor's Candlesticks," "Forlorn River," "The Hoosier Schoolboy," "I Cover the War," "King Solomon's Mines," "A Law Man Is Born," "New Faces of 1937," "Roaring Timber," "Under Strange Flags," "Wee Willie Winkie," "Westbound Limited," "Wild Money." Class B, Objectionable in Part—"It Could Happen to You."

Japanese Enjoy Tarzan

Tarzan pictures are so popular in Japan that exceptions are made in their favor in booking arrangements and they receive greater playing time than any other American pictures, David Lewis, former manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in that territory said on his return to New York.

Of the 1,600 theatres in the country, there are only 250 possibilities for pictures made in the United States Mr. Lewis said.

An annual convention of managers will be held by Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., at Kansas City September 21st and 22nd.

Odlum Explains Increased Asset Value of Atlas

Atlas Corporation showed a gross increase of $56,067,000 in asset value from 1930 to 1937, Floyd B. Odlum, president, revealed in a table displayed at the Securities and Exchange Commission hearing on investment trusts in Washington.

The largest item in the gain, $17,700,000, according to the table, was the result of the acquisition of other investment trusts at below asset value.

Atlas is the owner of 50 per cent of RKO Radio and holds an option to purchase the remaining 50 per cent from Radio Corporation of America. In addition, Mr. Odlum's firm also has variously owned large blocks of Paramount and other motion picture securities.

Mr. Odlum, in answer to questions put to him by David Schenker, SEC counsel, voiced opposition to compulsory governmental regulation of investment trusts.

Figures in the table introduced by Mr. Odlum revealed the 22 small investment trusts acquired by the corporation originally had a net contributed capital of $600,000,000 but when Atlas took them over the total had dwindled to $174,400,000.

In describing the methods used by Atlas in acquiring National Securities Investment company from its sponsors, A. G. Becker and Company, in 1931, Mr. Odlum said the preferred stock of National Securities had an asset value of only $80 per share although it was a $100 par stock.

A. G. Becker and Company, Mr. Odlum explained, held a majority of the common stock but the preferred stock was in the hands of the public. Atlas bought the common stock for $3 a share on the condition A. G. Becker and Company buy up the preferred stock on behalf of Atlas, Mr. Odlum said.

Odlum May Become Envoy to Russia

Floyd B. Odlum, president and organizer of Atlas Corporation, may succeed Joseph C. Davies as ambassador to Soviet Russia, according to Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance in Washington.

The rumor is, according to the news agency, that the appointment will be made when Mr. Davies is named to another post. The fact that Mr. Odlum has indorsed the New Deal and that he gave $14,000 to the Democratic campaign fund last year lend color to the report, the Alliance said.

Mr. Odlum, the article stated, "is tired of making money, the story runs, and wants to try his hand at public service."

Jack Lee will open an office on the Coast for the Blackstone Agency. The western office will be known as Monte Proser, Inc.

Ken Renaud, exploitation man in Seattle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been transferred to Hollywood.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS SEEK BETTER PUBLIC RELATIONS

Suggestion Made at CEA Summer Meeting for Establishment of Propaganda Bureau

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

The open session of the summer conference of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association at Harrogate was noteworthy chiefly for the emergence, on an occasion which theoretically makes possible the ventilation of every bee in every bonnet, of only one outstanding subject.

On the institution of a Press and Propaganda Bureau the conference felt so strongly that it passed a unanimous resolution asking the General Council at its next meeting to proceed to the establishment of such a department. A resolution to the same effect is going forward from the London and Home Counties branch.

Leading officers of the association are known to favor the plan strongly and it therefore may become an actuality at last, after having been discussed at each of the periodical crises which mark the history of the CEA.

The suggestion ties in with the present quota controversy which was discussed loudly and long at earlier sessions of the conference in that the exhibitor undoubtedly has had a bad press compared with the producer. It gained further support from certain unfortunate publicity arising out of the let-down with the Coronation newsreels. Its emergence at this time is one instance of increased militancy on the part of the CEA.

Studio Unionization Defined

The Association of Cine-Technicians and the National Association of Theatrical Employees have completed an agreement of which the essence is the recognition on the part of each union of the right of the other to enroll specific classes of studio workers. A joint consultative committee is to be set up, with local committees. The agreement is a further move towards unionization on a hundred per cent basis in British production, inasmuch as it will cover every grade of worker in studios, laboratories, newsreel organizations and television plants and indicates a possibility, in fact a certainty, of joint action in case of disputes.

Korda Starts Star Search

Alexander Korda, in cooperation with Oscar Deutsch, is inaugurating a campaign for the discovery of new British stars and feature players. He will make at Denham a series of short films, introducing unknown artistes, and will ask the patrons of theatres in the Deutsch Odeon chain to vote on cards provided. The artistes coming out best in a series of such ballots will be given parts in full-length features and definitely developed to such rank as their talents permit. Apart from possibly revealing some definite new talent, which may assist Mr. Korda to overcome the necessity, which he deplores, of "importing so-called 'big names' from Hollywood, often at an almost prohibitive cost," the plan will, of course, provide excellent publicity for London Films and for the Odeon circuit, which have a common interest through United Artists. Quite incidentally, the news breaks on the eve of the big Odeon flotation.

"Dixey Scheme" Sales Office

The British Independent Exhibitors (Distribution) Company, Ltd., familiarly known as "the Dixey Scheme," is now established as an active distributing organization at 84 Wardour Street and in branch offices in Manchester, Liverpool, Leeds, Birmingham, Newcastle, Cardiff and Glasgow. This week it published its full list of sales personnel and a statement that, following "Cotton Queen," three more features have been acquired. The number of franchise holders are also declared to have increased recently.

Internally, BIEDC has recently undergone a certain measure of reorganization. A general purposes committee and a finance committee have been constituted, with J. H. Iles, chief financial backer of the organization, prominent on each. The steps are declared to be part of the process of putting the affairs of the company on "a practical basis." Captain A. C. N. Dixey, originator of the scheme, does not appear on either committee, which is taken as indicating that the cooperative distribution movement is regarded as having proceeded beyond the stages of organization and propaganda.

Goetz Defines Production Aims

William Goetz, vice-president of Twentieth Century-Fox, made two statements of special interest on his arrival in London. He indicated that Darryl Zanuck proposed to visit London later in the summer and he offered a possibility that production for Twentieth Century-Fox release by Robert T. Kane at Denham might develop on a scale rendering the present Fox-British studio at Wembley unnecessary. It is true that the latter comment was in the course of an official denial that closure of Wembley was in immediate prospect and was in fact "a long way off," but it appears to be one of those denials which convey a lot. What seems to be conveyed in this instance is that, if the new Films Act follows the lines which at present seem probable, Twentieth Century-Fox may be in major production in England on a six-picture-a-year basis as a minimum almost as soon as Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The Wembley plant has made modest quota pictures for the Twentieth-Fox London office for several years. The company owns the freehold.

The immediate cause of Mr. Goetz's visit is to confer on current production plans with Mr. Kane with special reference to the first Gracie Fields picture, and also to arrange details of the visit to America of Annabella, to star in "Jean" on the Coast, but first cast in "Follow the Sun" at Denham.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Artists and Models

(Paramount)

Romantic Comedy, Music, Spectacle

Paramount believes that "Artists and Models" is going to be the best musical it ever produced. Most studios, when they have an important picture in work, are similarly enthusiastic. Sometimes results justify the anticipations; sometimes they don't. However, granted that this picture will be all that its sponsors are convinced it will be as entertainment, it might be wise to proceed to analyze what has gone into it.

For principal names it will offer Jack Benny, Ida Lupino, seen at her best undoubtedly in "The Gay Desperado"; Richard Arlen, Gail Patrick, Ben Blue, who is the studio's new comedian; Judy Canova, the Yacht Club Boys and Louis Armstrong. Martha Raye is down for a specialty, as are Andre Kostelanetz and his orchestra; Russell Patterson's "Personettes," Judy, Anne and Zeke and Connie Boswell. Then, and it appears to be an interesting departure, a group of the world's leading artists, Peter Arno, McClelland Barclay, Arthur William Brown, Rube Goldberg, John LaGatta and Russell Patterson, will be presented. Additionally, there will be the handpicked models, costumed and presented against spectacular backgrounds which are the last word in modernistic design and construction, singing and dancing.

The story is comedy romance, two girls wanting to marry two men and none of them quite sure which one she or he wants. Everybody wins. But Cecil Cunningham, Hedda Hopper, Sandra Storm, Donald Meek and Nick Lukats have a hand in bringing it about.

Sig Herzig and Gene Thackrey are credited with the original. Walter DeLeon and Francis Martin and Eve Greene and Harlan Ware combined to evolve the screen play and adaptation. Raoul Walsh directed. Half a dozen or more composers and lyric writers are listed as preparing the musical numbers which Boris Morros directed. LeRoy Prinz was responsible for the spectacular dance arrangements.

Guided by producer Lewis E. Gensler, an imposing array of creative talent has contributed to the picture. Unquestionably Paramount has done its part. If exhibitors do theirs, and there does not seem to be any lack of tools necessary with which to work, no one should be disappointed.

Flight from Glory

(RKO Radio)

Melodrama

It may be that the title suggests a war picture more directly, because, by the initial word, aviation adventure is logically anticipated. This is correct. Thereupon, regardless of the entertainment potentialities, inasmuch as similarly conceived pictures have been presented more than once, MGM and Universal, itself, having released films almost exactly like it, the exhibitor's problem is how he can re-create interest in the subject.

The locale is the Andes Mountain country. For one reason or another a lot of blacklisted flyers have sought sanctuary there. Into it comes another man without a country, a flyer, and his bride. His morale is shattered. His wife, falling in love with another, finds her original love turning to pity. The weakling is a hero whom his fellow outcasts consider a martyr. It would be contrary to the motion picture ethics did not the girl find comfort in association with the story's leading sympathetic character.

Chester Morris, now in "I Promise to Pay" and "The Devil's Playground," is the sympathetic character. A Hollywood newcomer, Whitney Bourne, earlier in Hecht and MacArthur's "Crime Without Passion" and "Once in a Blue Moon," is the girl. Van Heflin, the man afraid, has been seen with Katharine Hepburn and in "Outcats of Poker Flat." Others representing presumed name value are: Onslow Stevens, Douglas Walton, Rita LaRoy, Richard Lane, Paul Guilfoyle, a definite prospect; oldtimer Walter Miller, and, freshly new to the screen, the comic Solly Ward.

The picture has been directed by Lew Landers, before credited with "Border Cafe," "The Man Who Found Himself," "Night Waitress" and "Without Orders." Robert Andrews, who did "Jailbreak" and "Little Big Shot," wrote the story.

Release date: September 1.

Fit for a King

(RKO Radio - Loew)

Comedy

Joe E. Brown is the star of this production. Other entertainment and commercial qualities, value of supporting name, quality of production and appeal of story as far as audience is concerned, being acknowledgedly meritorious, the fifth ranking name choice, according to "Fame," is the immediate showmanship asset.

Besides Joe E. Brown exhibitors will have Helen Mack, Paul Kelly, Harry Davenport, Halliwell Hobbs, Russell Hicks, Charles Lane, Gertrude Short, Donald Briggs, Genarro Curci, Frank Reicher and Charles Trowbridge.

They may tell their clientele if they wish, that this is the third picture Brown has made for David L. Loew, whose name is illustrious in the records of legitimate stage and motion picture history. The others were "When's Your Birthday," "Riding on Air." Edward Sedgwick, with Brown in the Loew ventures, is listed as director. The original story writing credits are indefinite, but Richard Flournoy, long time associated with Hal E. Roach and all his name represents, is credited with the screen play.

The story, naturally, is farce. It also is topical. The situations in which an American newspaper reporter finds himself, while the affairs of state present themselves, and immediate romantic and historically dramatic events intervene, are recent headline material.

Release date: August 6.

100 Men and a Girl

(Universal)

Comedy-Melodrama

Universal is supposed to be planning some radical departures from formula in this production. What they are and what character they will assume is being held a close secret. Whatever may be done and how, there are certain evident facts associated with the film that should make it the subject of more than ordinary interest.

The star of the picture will be Deanna Durbin. Few if any players have been as fortunate as this fourteen-year-old miss in winning public favor. It may have been the all-around character of her first picture, "Three Smart Girls," her personality or singing ability. Nevertheless, Miss Durbin almost immediately became Universal's top ranking name. In this production she will be given full opportunity to demonstrate her musical talent. That in itself constitutes a prime showmanship and exploitation value.

Although the limited featured cast includes such capable players as Adolph Menjou, Mischa Auer, Eugene Pallette, Billy Gilbert, Alma Kruger and Frank Jenks, the next most important personality is Leopold Stokowski. Noted musical conductor, seen in Paramount's "Big Broadcast of 1927," his name is a potent commercial asset, particularly as it may appeal to the "upper class" patrons.

The story is comedy. An impoverished musician, played by Menjou as the father of Miss Durbin, unsuccessfully attempts to get a job with Stokowski's orchestra. Finding a sum of money, he deceives his child into believing he's working. The deception is discovered in a rather tragic way by the girl. But meanwhile Menjou and Auer have been rehearsing a group of unemployed musicians. Miss Durbin prevails upon Stokowski to listen and hear her sing with them. The climax is happiness all around.

The story is by Hans Kraly and the screen play by Charles Kenyon. The producing and directing combination of Joseph Pasternak and Henry Koster, which made "Three Smart Girls," again is functioning.

Release date: tentatively September 6.

Danger—Love at Work

(20th Century - Fox)

Romantic Comedy

According to a studio publicity announcement this production, for name worth, "assembles one of the finest all-star casts of farceurs and comedians in Hollywood." It identifies them as Jack Haley, a "smashing hit" in "Wake Up and Live"; Ann Sothern, outstanding in "Fifty Roads to Town" and many RKO-Radio films; Mary Boland and Edward Everett Horton, who are well known; Margaret Sedden and Margaret McWade, the "pixilated sisters" of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town"; Walter Catlett in "Wake Up and Live" and "Banjo on My Knee"; John Carradine, remembered for "Ramona," "Prisoner of Shark Island" and "The Garden of Allah"; Etienne Giradot, Bennie Bartlett and E. E. Clive. Additionally there are Maurice Cass, Franklin Pangborn, currently in "Easy Living," Hilda Vaughn and Charles Coleman.

While much is said about personalities, practically nothing is said about story. That may be due to the fact that it would require the talents of a very expert word painter properly to describe the plot and theme and all their gyrations. It concerns the adventures of a young lawyer, with all the cards stacked against him and up against one of the craziest families that anyone ever visioned, who attempts to put over a business deal and at the same time win the girl of his choice. It looks to be quite a ridiculous story, somewhat along the lines of "Three Cornered Moon" and the just previewed "Easy Living."

So many writers participated in its concoction that 20th Century-Fox has not yet got around to determining the exact writing credits. However, Otto Ludwig Preminger, Viennese stage director and former chief assistant to Max Reinhardt, who helped direct "A Midsummer Night's Dream," was assigned to direct. It is his first American screen job.

Idol of the Crowds

(Universal)

Topical Action Melodrama

Topical sport pictures, according to custom, are reserved for the season of the year when interest in the sport treated is at its height. But in moving pictures, as well as almost everything else, customs are made to be flouted. Consequently and in due schedule, which means almost immediately, exhibitors who, during the summer months, make a great to-do informing patrons that it's so many degrees cooler inside will also have an ice hockey picture with which to further the illusion or realism of the advertising and also entertain the customers.

In theme, "Idol of the Crowds" is romance melodrama against the background of action ice hockey. The plot follows the familiar formula. An unknown becomes a great hockey star. He carries his team to victory. In comes the gambler who wants the star to throw a crucial game. The girl whom the star loves seems to be in league with the crook. The star's little boy friend of course is injured. Because of this and because he believes the girl is false to his ideals, the hero plays listlessly. But when the little boy recovers and it is revealed that the girl is not a double-crosser, the great player burns up the ice.

An original story by George Waggner, who was aided in preparing the screen play by Harold Buckley, "Idol of the Crowds" is being directed by Arthur Lubin. John Wayne, currently so well received in "I Cover the War," Sheila Bromley, Charles Brokaw, Billy Burrud, Jane Johns, Huntley Gordon, Frank Otto, Russell Hopton, Virginia Brissac and Hal Neiman are the production's principal personnel.

Mr. Dodds Takes the Air

(First National)

Comedy Romance with Music

The plot of this production concerns what happens to a country boy who is both a singing and electrical genius when he has to combat the inanities of his friends and well wishers as well as defeat the selfish romantic and business conspiracies of a lot of city slickers. It appears to be composed of the elements that make for popular entertainment and, as it is being produced by Mervyn LeRoy, it can be expected that it will not be lacking in any of the qualities necessary to make it such an attraction. Mr. LeRoy's two pictures, "The King and the Chorus Girl" and "They Won't Forget," denote that he has his finger on the pulse of public entertainment taste.

The story used was written by Charles Budington Kelland and recently appeared in a popular weekly magazine. The screen play is by the humor specialist writers, William Wister Haines and Elanine Ryan. Music and lyrics are by Harry Warren and Al Dubin, who have contributed to many outstanding Warner musical pictures, and Alfred E. Green is directing.

Kenny Baker, starred on Jack Benny's radio broadcast and featured in "Turn Off the Moon" is "Mr. Dodds." While a promising newcomer, Jane Wyman, is the center of romantic interest, the principal supporting cast list many a familiar name. Among those who will be seen are Gertrude Michael, Alice Brady, Frank McHugh, Luis Alberni, Henry O'Neill, John Eldredge, Cliff Soubier, Sybil Harris, Ferris Taylor, Maidel Turnery, Harry Davenport and Linda Perry.

Reading the script and also watching some of the action indicated that comedy will be the dominating showmanship feature, with Baker's singing the next alternative.

The Sheik Steps Out

(Republic)

Comedy Romance

Comedy, romance, action adventure and menacing appearing melodrama in European capitals and on the Sahara Desert are the principal entertainment elements being blended into this forthcoming production. Basically, as the title indicates, it's a sheik story. One time this form of entertainment was much in demand, so much so that Rudolph Valentino's memory is still much alive. Of recent years, however, there haven't been very many of them around. In the martial and desert pictures that have been presented, the glamorous and exotic sheik has usually been a minor character. Consequently there is more than a possibility that the time again is ripe to follow the adventures of a beautiful girl from civilization and a compelling nomad chieftain.

So that she may not have to marry a fuddy-duddy English peer, she makes a bet that she can get a race horse that will beat his. Arabian horses are the fastest so she will have an Arabian. Into the desert she goes and a sheik posing as a menial consents to guide her. He desires her, and causing his followers to simulate a raid, he forces her to go through a native wedding ceremony so that the savages will think she is his wife. It's nice at first, but it doesn't look so good when they get back to civilization. Yet to justify the situation a surprise and logical climax is developed.

The cast contains a lot of familiar faces and several fresh ones. Ramon Navarro is the sheik; Lola Lane, the girl. Others of importance are Gene Lockhart, Kathleen Burke, Stanley Fields, Billy Bevan, Charlotte Treadway, Robert Coote, Leonid Kinsky and Georges Renavent.

The story is an original by Adele Buffington, long a contributor to the screen and recently credited with the adaptation of "Michael O'Halloran." Irving Pichel is the director.

Wild and Woolly

(20th Century - Fox)

Comedy

The rapid rise which Jane Withers has made in popular regard quite likely will be considered the showmanship keynote of this production. Since her featured debut as a mean girl in a Shirley Temple picture, Jane has had some good pictures, also she has had some that were not so good. Nevertheless this looks like the best vehicle she has had to date. In idea, as the title denotes, the story is harum-scarum comedy, interspersed with romance and action melodrama.

The main plot centers around Jane, Jackie Searl, still a boy, but one who has been around so long that he seems like an old timer and Douglas Scott who was the boy "Horatio Nelson" in "Lloyds of London." A fourth important participant in the wild juvenile goings on is Carl ("Alfalfa") Switzer, long time member of the "Our Gang" comedies crew. Romance in the story features Pauline Moore, last in "Charlie Chan At The Olympics," who appears as Jane's teacher and Robert Wilcox, recently in Universal's "Man In Blue," presented as a newspaper publisher. Comedy melodrama feature Walter Brennan, outstanding in "Barbary Coast," "Come And Get It" and "Banjo On My Knee" and Berton Churchill. Douglas Fowley is the focal point of straight menacing drama. Less important personalities are Lon Chaney, Jr., Frank Melton and Sid Saylor.

Alfred Werker is the director. The story is an original in which several writers participated in writing and adapting, but because of the recently set up codes, exact credits are not yet definite. Music and lyrics, however, are by Sidney Clare and Harry Akst.

Release date: Not determined, but after August 1.

First Lady

(Warner)

Modern Political Melodrama

The part that women have come to play in the national scene and the influence that they, one in particular, have in American politics, is the subject matter of this production. Washington, D. C., is the locale and the atmosphere and theme of the story is surcharged with the glamour, action, romance and comicalities which columnists, authors and special writers have made so familiar to the populace. Although the characters are anonymous, audiences should have no difficulty in relating them to prominent personalities as the events which form the backgrounds for their action also elevated many now well known personalities to prominence.

Originally "First Lady" was a successful and much discussed stage play. Its pointedness and authentic and cleverly veiled idea caused it to be considered an anthological chronicle of events in national life and of those who participated in them. The play was product of the imagination of the playright George S. Kaufman in collaboration with Katherine Dayton, who may be recalled as the author of humorously satiric political articles occasionally published in Saturday Evening Post. Screen play is by Rowland Leigh and Stanley Logan is directing.

The central figure in the plot is a granddaughter of a late President. Possessed of a political instinct she is actively engaged in all the social and political intrigue that goes on in Washington. Forestalling the ambition of a Supreme Court justice to be president because of a womanly desire to emerge politically triumphant over his husband and her rival, she booms successfully the candidacy of her own protege.

Kay Frances, currently in "Another Dawn," is featured. The high caliber supporting cast includes Preston Foster, Anita Louise, Verree Teasdale, Walter Connly, Victor Jory, Louise Fazenda, Marjorie Gateson, Marjorie Rambeau, Henry O'Neill, Sara Haden and Grant Mitchell.

Sack Amusement Enterprises of San Antonio has acquired distribution rights in the South for three all-Negro features produced by Gramercy Pictures Corporation. The pictures are "The Vicious Circle," "Children of Circumstance" and "Harlem Hell-Cat."

SALES MEETINGS END; 593 FILMS ANNOUNCED

GB and Independent Releases May Bring Final Figure to 700; Salesmen Starting Rounds

With the conclusion of the Gaumont British convention in New York this week, a report of which appears on page 38, exhibitors will have all advance information available on product for the 1937-38 season. Salesmen for 11 distributors already are on the road, eager to furnish further details with contract and fountain pen easily at hand.

Columbia with 62 features announced at its sales meeting last week brought the estimated product total for next season to 593 and it is estimated that the GB and independent films to be released may bring this to 700.

Meetings of branch managers and the western sales division representatives brought the Columbia sessions in Los Angeles to a close last Thursday. Sightseeing trips to the studios and Hollywood occupied the remainder of the day and the convention special left for the east on Friday.

That the company is giving consideration to following the plan of other large distributors in putting accessories on a rental basis was indicated by Abe Montague, general sales manager, before the convention adjourned. Further discussions on the matter will be held at the regional meetings in October and final decisions made at that time, Mr. Montague said.

Delegates were told that the next convention will be held in New York and that it will be international in character. Regional meetings will be held throughout the year.

The company will produce a feature starring Carole Lombard, and will borrow Loretta Young from Twentieth Century-Fox for a feature to be directed by Al Hall.

Atlantic Films

Two new productions, one in Technicolor, will be started this month by Atlantic Films, producers of "Thunder in the City" which Columbia is releasing. The Technicolor production is not titled, but will be a costume picture.

Best Film Company

Best Film Company headed by Rene Huisman, distributors of "Cloistered," plans foreign branches in London, Paris and Warsaw. Mr. Huisman will leave New York in August to open the new offices. He also is seeking foreign distribution rights for American features.

Grand National

Grand National will have a summer schedule of 12 features shooting in the next two months. Set to go before the cameras are: "Here's Flash Casey," "Government Agent," "Wallaby Jim of the Islands," "Renfrew of the Mounted," "Face the Facts," "Return of the Shadow," a second Wallaby Jim feature; "So This Is Hollywood," "Painter in the Sky," a Tex Ritter western, and "Gorgeous."

The company has concluded a deal in London for the distribution in the United States of five pictures produced by Associated Talking Pictures. The arrangement is on a share basis with a minimum guarantee of $100,000 for the five pictures.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM, is on a tour of exchanges on which he will meet managers in Cleveland, Chicago, Minneapolis, Omaha, Salt Lake City, Denver and San Francisco. The company will reissue one feature a month during the summer period. "Trader Horn" and "Hell Divers" were released in May and June and "Manhattan Melodrama" and "Naughty Marietta" will be released during July and August.

593 PRODUCTIONS SET FOR SEASON

Eleven distributors have announced a total of 593 features for release during 1937-'38. The list, complete except for Gaumont British which meets this week, and the dates of the Motion Picture Herald issues which carried the product announcements follow:

COMPANY	NUMBER	DATE
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer	44–52	May 8
Monogram	42	May 8
Warner Brothers	60	May 15
Universal	50	May 22
Grand National	65	May 22
Twentieth Century-Fox	66	June 5
Republic	54	June 5
Paramount	50–60	June 12
RKO Radio	56	June 19
United Artists	36	June 19
Columbia	62	July 3

Following long preparation, the company last week announced its plans for production in England had been completed and that Louis B. Mayer would go to London in August to launch the first of four pictures, "A Yank at Oxford," with Robert Taylor. The other three will be "Finishing School," "To Victoria" and "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." Michael Balcon, former production manager of GB, will be in charge.

Buster Keaton has been signed as a short subject director at the MGM studios. Although a star for many years, it will be his first directorial venture.

Monogram

Nine pictures of the 42 outlined for Monogram's 1937-38 program are completed and release dates have been set up to October 1st. These are: "Hoosier Schoolboy," July 7th; "Blazing Barriers," July 14th; "Riders of the Dawn," July 21st; "Paradise Isle," July 28th; "Legion of Missing Men," August 4th; "Outer Gate," August 11th; "Luck of Roaring Camp," August 18th; "God's Country and the Man," August 25th; "Atlantic Flight," September 2nd; "Where the West Begins," September 9th; "Shadows of the Orient," September 16th; "Federal Bullets," September 23th, and "Telephone Operator," September 30th.

Paramount

Paramount's sales policy for next season provides for 37 pictures on percentage and the balance of 21, which includes six westerns by Harry Sherman, on flat rentals. The top group will include four features at 35 per cent. The second group will be eight pictures at 30 per cent. In the third group there will be 10 films at 30 per cent with a reversion clause to 25 per cent if the stipulated figure is not reached. The last and lowest percentage bracket has 15 pictures listed at 25 per cent.

The company will have only one reissue on next season's program. The revival, "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," will be sold on a separate contract. "Beau Geste," listed as one of the big pictures on the 1937-38 program, will be a remake.

Barney Balaban, Paramount president in Hollywood, with Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee, last week said: "There are larger theatre audiences today than ever, but they are audiences for good pictures. What the public wants and what it will crowd theatres to see are pictures of the caliber of "Waikiki Wedding," "Mountain Music," "High, Wide and Handsome" and "Souls at Sea." All of these films cost well over a million dollars each. This is a lesson that the last few months of watching box office graphs has taught every executive in the business. Paramount is geared to expand its schedule and double or even triple the number of such films we've made in the past. . . .

"Consequently, as Adolph Zukor announced at the recent Paramount convention, we will make 20 or 22 pictures costing in the neighborhood of a million dollars each in our new program and it is to help map that program that Mr. Griffis and I have come to Hollywood."

RKO Radio

Mr. Balaban's views were echoed by Sam Briskin, production chief of RKO, when he announced that his company would spend $18,000,000 on production for 1937-38, an increase of $3,500,000 over the current season.

"Rising labor costs and increased production of 'A' pictures explain the budget boost," Mr. Briskin said. "Star salaries have never been so high and there is no top. Production of 20 'A' pictures is planned for next season.

"The quality of motion picture production is improving and this is attested by the fact that there are more hit pictures today and more big gross pictures than ever before."

Warner Brothers

The fourth and final regional meeting of Warner Brothers bookers and ad salesmen, which was to have been held last week in New York, was postponed indefinitely. Earlier meetings were held in Oakland, New Orleans and Chicago.

The company will send stars and feature players to England from time to time for pictures to be made by Irving Asher, production head at Teddington Studios, where from 16 to 20 features will be produced.

Imports Valued At 81,784 Pesos

Official foreign trade statistics place Colombian 1936 imports of motion picture equipment and accessories at 10,323 kilograms valued at 81,784 pesos, according to a report by Assistant Trade Commissioner Jack B. Neathery at Bogota. Of the total, 8,902 kilograms worth 74,099 pesos came from the United States and 638 kilograms valued at 3,879 pesos from the Netherlands.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Now that the courts and the licensing authorities have stripped the Minsky Brothers of their "strip-teasers," and hundreds of strippers do not know which way to turn, Ted Cook is starting a campaign for the relief of unemployed strip-teasers. He's going to ask Congress to work out some sensible plan that can be applied before the girls catch cold.

Meanwhile, a frantic appeal will be made by radio to the public. Anyone wishing to donate penthouses, champagne, mink coats, cosmetics or bearskin rugs is requested to get in touch with any of the Minsky Brothers.

Clark Gable was having himself a bachelor evening down in Los Angeles' Mexican quarter when Jimmy Fidler caught up with him. "Are you from Mexico City?" Clark asked, just to be friendly.

"Oh, no! I'm from California," Estalita beamed.

"I've always wanted to shake the hand of a native daughter," admitted Gable, suiting the words to the action.

"In fact," the girl added, "I was born right here in Los Angeles." At that Gable leaned across the table with: "Now that calls for something more than a handshake," and kissed the girl gingerly on the forehead. Estalita was beside herself with joy, but she was thinking fast. Suddenly, she said, coyly:

"Yes, I was born just around the corner!"

BARRYMORE'S ELAINE
WINS RIGHT TO UNDRESS

¡Ayayay! and ¡Caramba! Manrique's Whiskers!

Forcible barbering of an ex-Hollywood extra's luxuriant jet black whiskers has Mexican national political circles agog. The beard was the joy of Professor Aurelio Manrique, outstanding intellectual, quondam state governor, linquist and movie player, who is now running for the Mexican congress, besides being director of the National Library, Mexico City.

During his enforced residence in California for his participation in the ill-starred military uprising of 1929, Mr. Manrique met up with some of that irony that life is so fond of disposing: his intellectual gifts could only gain him a mere handout pittance as translator and interpreter. But Hollywood producers were willing to give him something worth pocketing because of his swell beard. So, Manrique and beard played in several picures.

Now the beard is no more. The Professor's luxuriant mustache and hair have likewise vanished. While making a speech in San Luis Potosi City, territory of his political foeman, General Saturino Cedillo, minister of agriculture, a score of Cedillo's huskiest henchmen took umbrage at the Professor's remarks, mobbed him, and though Manrique has Sandow strength and licked several of his assailants, they beat him up and barbered him to the accompaniment of fired shots which wounded 15 bystanders.

Manrique came to Mexico City with a bath towel wrapped around his clean shaven head and the parts where the glorious beard had been. His many supporters are plenty sore. Complaints by the score have been lodged with President Lazaro Cardenas. The outrage and the whiskers have become a national political issue.

(Edward Everett) Depinet, vice-president of RKO Radio, was the guest, two weeks ago, of the pictorial pages of Motion Picture Herald, in which his photograph appeared showing him in true Texas style, with ten-galloon hat, wide leather belt, gun and holster, boots and bandana. He had stopped off for an hour, with RKO's salesmen, at the Dallas Exposition of Billy Rose's, while en route home from the company's convention in Hollywood.

What we neglected to say in the caption accompanying the picture was that the ten-galloon hat was presented to him by Bob O'Donnell, the gun by Claude Ezell, the belt by Bill Underwood, the boots by Pierre Levy, the Hoblitzelle Circuit manager in Dallas, and a Mickey Mouse sweater by Walt Disney. The pose and the pants were by Mr. Depinet. (Texas Ranger rides again, on page 12).

She figured he was just a studio stooge, or a salesman, and, to make conversation, she began complaining about how she was overworked by RKO, was put into too many pictures, asked him if he didn't think she was getting a raw deal. "Well, I don't know, really," he said. She figured he probably didn't know enough about pictures to know what she meant. "By the way," she queried, "what's your name?"

"Leo Spitz," he replied, meekly.

The Life of Emile Zola

(Warner)

At the end of the showing of "The Life of Emile Zola," the audience staged one of the most unusual demonstrations ever seen in Hollywood. It refused to leave the theatre. Choking the aisles, foyers and lobbies, it seemed to be awaiting some way in which to express its appreciation of the picture it had just seen. When Paul Muni appeared, spied by some one who called "there he is," it was the signal for an outburst of handclapping and cheering. This enthusiasm was accepted as a sample of the influence "Zola" may be expected to exert wherever and whenever it is presented. The reception of Muni's work was symbolic.

Had the preview been an invitational affair with a handpicked gathering, the exhibition probably would not have been considered a true reaction. But Warners, very likely with considerable interest in box office totals, do not go in for invitation previews. Consequently, with the exception of the working press, studio officials, several of the cast and others associated with the making of the production, the vast majority of the audience was composed of ordinary picture enthusiasts who had paid their way.

As was "The Story of Louis Pasteur," another Muni vehicle also directed by William Dieterle, "Zola" is a very different kind of biography. It is educational, but primarily it is elevating entertainment of the most desirable variety. That it might be so, some romantic license was taken, although historical details are authentic.

The picture is a sympathetic biography of Emile Zola, who lived to write the truth and expose falsity and hypocrisy. His story becomes tensely interesting through the intelligent approach that has been made and by the judicious inclusion of incidents and events, orally and in action, calculated to impress both the intelligent and obtuse mind. Several chapters in the man's career are treated; two are concentrated upon. The first details the early years of Zola, spent in poverty but dedicated by him to the creed of telling the truth. It culminates with the success of his novel "Nana," which brings down upon him the wrath of hypocritical officialdom. Weathering the storm, producing one great book after another, Zola and his family rise to affluence and wealth.

Then the Dreyfus scandal explodes; an innocent officer, accused of treason, is railroaded to Devil's Island. The perpetrators, inspired by religious bigotry, screeching that the honor of the Army must be saved, go free temporarily. Yielding to the appeals of "Mme. Dreyfus," Zola, who knows the truth must be told, publishes his famous "I Accuse." Arrested for libel as the French populace erupts in fanatic fury, Zola's trial is a travesty on justice. The Army and those who have something to hide can do anything. Sentenced to prison, he flees to England as the officials he accused are exonerated.

But Zola's friends do not fail him. A new regime comes into power, the true circumstances are brought to light. Zola returns to France to be acclaimed a national hero. The old man's hour of triumph is short and hollow. He is accidentally asphyxiated by a leaking coal stove. As Dreyfus, a man Zola never saw, stands in humble reverence, Zola is posthumously honored by the French government as Anatole France delivers the eulogy.

"The Story of Emile" is a picture which managers should urge their patrons to see. There is a wealth of material with which to work. From a histrionic viewpoint, Muni, Donald Crisp, Joseph Schildkraut, Gale Sondergaard, Gloria Holden, Henry O'Neill, Morris Carnovsky, Grant Mitchell, Louis Calhern, Robert Barrat, Vladimir Sokoloff and Harry Davenport are all that anyone could desire. Production support and directorial technique, especially as they embellish thematic content with the action of hostile mobs, brutal soldiery and callous judges, create the required movement. Musical accompaniment, as it has been included either to excite or allay emotional reactions, is dramatically valuable in establishing the various moods.

The picture is valuable screen merchandise and proper showmanship treatment should make it one of the season's outstanding commercial successes.

The Californian

(20th Century-Fox-Principal)

Melodramatic Romance

Showmanship potentialities accruing to Robin Hood type pictures depend to a great extent upon who is in them, novelties injected into the familiar pattern of story, quantity and character of thrill action and the worths of production detail.

"The Californian" is another of those semi-historical melodramatic romances. It details the adventures of the scion of a great Spanish landowner, forced to turn bandit in order to rectify injustices practised upon his father, friends and neighbors by unscrupulous Americans. The principal roles are assumed by Ricardo Cortez and Morgan Wallace about whom the melodrama rotates; Marjorie Weaver center of love interest, Katherine DeMille, a jealous menace to Miss Weaver and Cortez and Maurice Black and William Fletcher who carry the comedy contrast. Other important characters are Nigel de Brulier, as Cortez's father and George Regas whom the hero deposes as bandit chieftan.

Depicting the happiness that Spanish Californians knew prior to the coming of thieving Americans, the story turns to melodrama when "Ramon Escobar" returns a grown man. "Barsto's" tactics have impoverished the peaceful people. Establishing himself as head of a band of bandits thereby earning "Ruiz's" enmity "Escobar" loots to return stolen property to rightful owners. Betrayed by "Ruiz" and "Chata," "Escobar" conquers "Barsto" and the coming of a just governor again assures happiness and prosperity to the Spaniards.

Love in a Bungalow

(Universal)

Comedy-Romance

Scaled to accommodate the desires of some segments of the family trade, "Love in a Bungalow" calls for the type of exploitation that should arouse the interest of those classes. Fortunately, for that purpose, an idea has been included in the production, one that is somewhat novel and sets the whole picture apart from a routine comedy romance is available for adaptation. It's a gag stunt dealing with what happens to two unmarried persons who win a contest for the best letter explaining why they consider themselves the world's happiest husband and wife.

Though prolonged and somewhat irrelevant the situations, action and dialogue leading up to the real meat of the story are fairly amusing. "Mary Callahan" is hostess in a realty promotion model bungalow, into which brazen but likable "Jeff Langan" injects himself. His charm, wit and resourcefulness quickly cause "Mary" to forget her anger at the intrusion. One thing and another, especially a visit to a food fair, kindle the spark of romance. Then they hear about the contest, enter it and as a lovers' spat ensues, separate and forget it. Adjudged winners, "Mary" is in a predicament until she locates "Jeff." Together they try to make everything look as has been described. Borrowing prop children, a dog and an old car, they receive the prize donor, "Mr. Bisbee," and his suspicious old maid sisters. Everything is rosy until the parents arrive to reclaim their children. Irate at first at the deception practiced upon him, "Bisbee" decides that such courage as displayed by the young couple is worthy of the award and they are permitted to keep the prize money. "Jeff" has a minister handy and real estate agent "Babcock" is also present to receive a down payment on "Mary's" dream house.

Previewed in Pantages Theatre, Hollywood. About everything discouraging to a preview happened to this. The film got out of register, one sequence seemed to be in the wrong place and the film broke. Nevertheless, it was noticeable that some in the audience were interested and entertained. Of course, as is usual with previews, some were dissatisfied. The conclusion, however, provoked a hearty burst of applause.—G. M.

And "Inky"

Rustler's Valley

(Paramount-Sherman)

Hopalong Cassidy

It is said that the more experience a person has with a thing the better he does it. Producer Harry Sherman has had much experience in bringing the Clarence E. Mulford "Hopalong Cassidy" stories to the screen. Continual perusal of the "What The Picture Did For Me" section reveals, in the main, that both exhibitors and their patrons have been satisfied with his efforts. One would apparently be lacking in showmanship acumen did he not realize that this condition was not the dominant exploitation value associated with this or any othed picture, based on the same topic, that the producer might make.

Although the series started with James Ellison as the third member of the trio which included William Boyd and George Hayes, nobody, either manager or patron, seemed to feel that the quality of the product suffered when Russel Hayden took Ellison's place. There probably wasn't as much musical content, otherwise the production technique was pretty much as was.

In this instance, exhibitors and the public who like the pictures have all that went to make its predecessors popular. Of course there is an expected difference, nevertheless the picture continues the familiar formula. Still there is no triteness, no evidence of the idea being or becoming shopworn.

With action as the keynote, things happen—robberies, rustlings, connivances, which get "Hopalong's" pal "Lucky" in trouble. Not without difficulties to himself, including the radical departure that he almost falls in love with the rancher's daughter, "Agnes," "Hopalong" sees that "Lucky" and "Windy" are extricated from their jam, and as he again escapes the wiles of Cupid, "Randall Glenn" et al get their just deserts.

Previewed in Grand National Studio Projection room, Hollywood. It's all right to look at some sorts of pictures in projection rooms, but not so good in which to look at a comedy or thrill action film. One must depend upon what he thinks he knows to anticipate what general audience reaction might be. Regardless, this writer, having seen almost all of the "Hopalongs," is of the opinion that this is the best considered from the standpoints of story quality, acting performances, quality of production support and the way in which it has been produced.—G. Musical Romance

There is considerable entertainment to be enjoyed in "The Singing Marine"—the audience at the Strand in New York's Broadway showed that it had found it and liked it—even if whatever there is of the strikingly unusual is concentrated in a novelty or two and in a telling use of black shadow in a dancing and singing number.

Dick Powell is the picture, his singing is the exploitation message, but to it must be added a word for the work of the promising Doris Weston, the dancing of the new Lee Dixon, the harmonica wizardry of Larry Adler.

The story is sketchy, despite a somewhat fresh introduction. Without Powell it would be empty, or not much more than an echo of "Flirtation Walk" and "Shipmates Forever." With Powell it is effervescent without being penetrating. The toughest job of the tough Marines is to lift the sleeping "Private Skinner" (Powell) out of his cot and tote him to the "brig." The one "thrill" sequence, in which "Skinner" rescues "Peggy" from Chinese bandits, is melted into the story as a play-within-a-play spectacle, not especially convincing, but nevertheless pleasing.

Besides the names mentioned there are several familiar ones elsewhere in the large supporting cast, among them Hugh Herbert as the fussy promoter partner, Allen Darwell, as a sufficiently blustering sergeant, Jane Darwell, Jane Wyman, Berton Churchill, Robert Barrat, Eddie Acuff, Pierre Watkin, Addison Richards, and the newcoming Veda Ann Borg.

Busby Berkeley's conception of singing and dancing display is at its best in the introduction to the Chinatown scene with a pair of hands weaving in the distance against a black background, gradually moving into closeup and dissolving into the figure of the harmonica player.

Elsewhere in the same sequence, however, the audience did not seem to take well to the extended cessation of action while Powell was singing. Explanation perhaps lies in the difficulties of photographing a face in closeup with justice to its owner during actual singing. The same reaction was felt to one closeup of Miss Weston.

The story of the picture begins with "The Singing Marine" being financed by his mates in a radio tryout. His success is not to be measured in dollars, however, because the promotor sinks all the earnings in a night club, just when the soldier has an opportunity to do a good deed for the "mother" of the regiment. However, when the club pays dividends, so does he. His swell-headedness also vanishes and he finds that happiness with the girl he loves outweighs the easy kisses of fame.

At the Strand theatre in New York the feature was a bit more than quietly received, with the reservations already noted.—Ernest A. Rovelstad.

Produced and distributed by Warner Bros. Directed by Ray Enright. Musical numbers created and directed by Busby Berkeley. Music and lyrics by Harry Warren and Al Dubin. Original screen play by Delmer Daves. P. C. A. Certificate No. 3037. Running time, 105 minutes. Release date, July 3, 1937. General audience classification.

Easy Living

(Paramount)

Comedy

It may be that not all audiences will accept "Easy Living" as the preview crowd did. Should such a thing happen, the reason will be that they are without a sense of humor. For straightaway fun, all the more surprising because its stars, Jean Arthur and Edward Arnold, have not recently been associated with comedy, few pictures approach the merit of this throw back to slapstick farce as a laugh provoker. In atmosphere the picture is clean, wholesome, modernized fun. It is so made that people can laugh at the characters, the things they say, what they do and the situations in which they involve themselves. It's silly. Unquestionably those who had anything to do with its making intended that it should be silly. Nevertheless producer, director, writers and players have seen to it that it is unique and refreshing fun.

Of course there isn't a serious moment during the entire running time. Everything is conceived and developed with the sole idea of stimulating laughter. The yelling breakfast table argument of the wealthy banking "Ball" family, participated in by husband "J. B.," wife "Mary" and son "Johnny," starts the ball rolling. To teach extravagant "Mary" a lesson, after "Johnny" has left home in high dudgeon, "J. B." in a wild chase tosses a costly fur coat off the roof. It lands on "Mary Nash's head and thereby ensues a comedy of errors chain of events. Not permitted to return the coat, "Mary" is fired from her stenographer job because no moral girl could own such a coat. But hotel keeper "Louis," thinking that "Mary" is the paramour of the powerful "J. B." (who holds the mortgage), installs her in the Imperial Suite. Then "Mary," not knowing who "Johnny" is, is a participant in an automat wrecking sequence that would give any of Mack Sennett nonsensical riots a run for its money. Tradesmen, laboring under the same delusion as "Louis," shower "Mary" with all sorts of lavish merchandise and neither she nor "Johnny" can understand why.

Through "Johnny's" mistake, "Mary" gives market tipster "Hulgar" a stock tip which almost wrecks "J. B.'s" bank and fortune as the market is panicked. But, somehow, to effect a conclusion all the strings are drawn together and as the audience roared everything is adjusted to the satisfaction of all concerned.

To sell "Easy Living" successfully and to let the maximum number of people know of its merits as a farcical comedy, it seems that merely labeling it as an "all laugh" picture would suffice. The film is wide open for all sorts of exploitation; exploitation that should be in the character of the film's theme and atmosphere. A showman's show as well as an audience show,

Damaged Goods

(Grand National - Criterion)

Melodrama

Adapted from Eugene Brieux's stage play, "Damaged Goods," has as its theme the indictment of society for its suppression of information regarding venereal disease, its prevention and treatment.

The story is of a young man who contracts a disease, refuses to follow the advice of a physician but goes to a "quack." Thinking that he has been cured, he marries. His child has the disease. Finally the reputable physician straightens out the tragedy and persuades the bride's father, a Congressman, that legislative action must be taken.

Based on the subject of venereal disease as plot motivation the picture is considered unsuitable for theatrical entertainment.

A Criterion production distributed by Grand National. Adapted by Upton Sinclair. Directed by Phil Stone. Running time, 60 minutes.

I Cover the War

(Universal)

Melodrama

A fast action melodrama, with sufficient comedy and romance, serves to provide John Wayne with a new type role in contrast to his usual western fare. Thematically it is also different in that it concerns the adventure of the newsreel men in their coverage of wars. Their prototype the newspaper reporter and war correspondent have figured prominently in many productions but the men who photograph the news have apparently gone unnoticed in the search for stories and characters.

While it is true that either branch of reporting the news could be substituted for the other without changing the theme of the story it does provide the exhibitor with a fresh approach in advertising the picture. Which in this case is particularly fortunate, for the cast, while giving a good performance collectively, is little known and of slight marquee value. John Wayne, where he is known for his western roles, can of course be counted on for a name but in other situations the story seems to be the picture's selling point.

Opening with shots of the war in Spain with "Bob Adams" (John Wayne) and "Elmer Davis" (Don Barclay) covering the hostilities for their newsreel company the scene of action shifts to their London office where they are informed that they will cover the impending uprising in Samari between the British and the natives. En route they meet "Pamela" (Gwen Gaze) on her way to visit her uncle who is the commanding officer of the British garrison in Samari. "Bob's" brother "Don" (James Bush) follows "Bob" to Samari.

Unable to convince "Bob" that he wants to be a cameraman instead of a surgeon "Don" decides to take matters into his own hands.

Big Fella

(British Lion-British)

Comedy, Songs

Paul Robeson and Elisabeth Welch, generous with songs in their distinctive and popular genre, provide the most obvious box-office angle in "Big Fella." Robeson has six numbers: "Lazin'," "I Got a Robe," "Roll Up, Sailorman," "Ma Curly-Headed Baby," "River Steals My Folks from Me" and "You Didn't Oughta Do Such Things." The Welch titles are "One Kiss" and "Harlem in My Heart." There you have the selling campaign in a nutshell.

The story is that Joe, a good-natured negro resident of the Marseilles underworld, is asked by the Police to assist in the discovery of a boy, only son of a rich English couple, who is believed to have been kidnapped from a liner which has just docked.

Joe finds the boy by accident. He has not been kidnapped, but has bolted from his oversolicitous mother and is as happy as may be as one of a gang of wharf-side urchins. He accepts mothering from Joe and his friend Manda, negress cafe singer, on condition that he is not returned to his parents. However, all the quarter knows about Joe's "secret" police mission and Spike, one of the crowd, carries off the boy by strategy and delivers him to the prefecture, collecting the reward and, under pressure, splitting it with Joe and his two cronies, but getting most of it back from the easy darkie during a carouse.

The boy manages to tell his parents something of the truth and, refusing food until Joe is sent for, persuades them to make the negro an offer to come along on the ship. At the last moment Joe decides to stay with Manda, and Spike, his face blackened, is sent aboard in a drunken sleep, and wakes at sea.

There is originality in the story idea and some humor in its development, but the casting of the boy's part could have been bettered. It is the singing which makes it a possible.

New Faces of 1937

(Radio)

Musical Comedy

Precisely what the title implies, this picture introduces a group of players, some quite well known though in limited circles, but all exceptionally talented. Joe Penner and Milton Berle, along with Harriet Hilliard and Parkyakarkus, all four familiar to audiences because of previous picture work but especially for their radio programs, are also prominent in the cast and lend balance to the production by smooth performances.

Exhibitors have a world of material with which to work and the ingenious ones can open up their books of showmanship to exploit the newcomers.

The picture itself is a backstage musical comedy, of the type that has been done time and time again. This time, however, there are several new twists worked into the plot to make it appear almost new.

"Robert Hunt" (Jerome Cowan), Broadway producer, with his stooge, Parkyakarkus, and "Wellington" (Milton Berle), a backer, is giving an audition to "Elaine" (Thelma Leeds), a rhumba dancer, later explaining to Parky that he produces flops for which he sells each of four backers 85 per cent of the show. He pockets their money when the shows close, escaping jail by keeping his backers separated. According to custom, "Revels," his current show, closes and several mourn their losses.

The same night "Patricia" (Harriet Hilliard), a chorus girl, proposes to "Jimmy" (Bill Brady), a bit player in "Revels," but, although they love each other, he refuses to marry her until he can sell his play, "New Faces." The following day "Patricia" offers "Hunt" $15,000, which she inherited, to back "New Faces."

"Hunt," resuming his unscrupulous tactics, is en route to another certain flop when "Elaine" visits him and reveals that she knows the way he is operating. He proposes marriage and a trip to Europe to shut her up and she accepts. "Hunt" turns the show over to "Wellington," who immediately hires the good acts, but he soon finds himself up to his neck in backers, all owning 85 per cent of the show.

In an amusing finale, in which "Seymore" works his way onto the stage and is a comedy sensation, the show clicks. "Patricia" and "Jimmy" settle their difficulties.

All through the production are interspersed the comedy antics of Berle, Penner and Parkyakarkus.

Let's Make a Night of It

(Associated British)

Musical Comedy

The type of production which uses a farcical story as background for a series of cabaret and variety acts and spectacle. It is staged on a much better scale than most British efforts of the kind, is speedy, has plenty of humor understandable in America, with some that probably is not, and certainly offers a big range of dance bands and of star solo performers for the considerable public which likes song, dance and laughter without worrying whether or not the story is progressing.

The "plot," in fact, is ingenious enough. A wealthy business man acquires, as a bad debt, the "Silver Spoon" night club in London. His wife, at the suggestion of a foreign count who is in fact an American crook, similarly becomes the owner of the adjacent "Coconut Grove." Each conceals the speculation from the other. Their daughter is in love with a young waiter, whose ambitions are realized when he gets charge of the "Silver Spoon," and puts on shows which makes it the rage, at the expense of its rival. The climax comes when the young lovers, knocking down a wall or two, make the rival establishments into one.

A farcical episode picturing a police raid by officers of both sexes, disguised as revellers, is a comedy high spot. No less than seven famous dance bands are featured. The individual turns are of a very high level. The characters of the story proper are interpreted by June Clyde, Buddy Rogers, Claud Allister, Fred Emney, Steve Geray, Zelma O'Neal and Iris Hoey.

As light entertainment it is an item which can usefully find a place in many American bills.

Viewed with a very hard-boiled audience of several hundreds of exhibitors at the CEA Conference at Harrogate. They did not react like "fans," but opinion rated it a good booking. —BRUCE ALLAN, London.

Make Up

(ABFD, British—Grand National)

Circus Melodrama

The circus atmosphere, some good incidental humor and fair story values are the assets of this British production, which maintains a very leisurely pace. Nils Asther, starred with June Clyde, is handicapped by the fact that, pictured as an internationally famous clown, he is given no opportunity in the ring to justify this reputation. It is a modest production which, due to the background, may be acceptable in the smaller places. There is this original twist in the story that a "murder" is traced to a revengeful elephant by a reconstruction of the crime, which clears the heroine. A point of interest is that Bombardier Billy Wells, once British heavyweight champion, appears as a ringmaster.

"Bux," doctor turned circus clown and animal trainer, is pursued by Marion, daughter of an English officer. He is also loved by Joy, orphaned daughter of an old friend, whom he has adopted and houses in his caravan as his niece. Lorenzo, a lion-tamer, pursues Joy and is thrashed by Bux, but as the result of the disturbance the latter is compelled to leave the circus, on the Continent, and take an engagement in London. Here his friendship with Marion deepens, but, called back to the circus, he realizes that Joy is a woman and that he loves her. He tells Marion, who has begun to follow the circus wherever it goes.

Lorenzo, annoyed at Bux's return as chief attraction of the performance, tries to poison his animals. Joy interrupts him and strikes him down with a tent peg. Joy is about to be arrested for murder when Bux, "reconstructing the crime" by means of a dummy figure wearing a hat of Lorenzo's, proves that the real killer was an elephant, maltreated by Lorenzo long previously.

Passingly Fair

The supremacy of matter over mind is illustrated in this Melody Master by the fact that the story made no exhaustive demands upon mind but there's nothing the matter with the orchestra's playing. The Rhythm Kings' singing follows the approved pattern of the day and other specialties are provided by Paul Barry and Bobby Gilbert. Joseph Henabery directed.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Rhythm of the Game

(Paramount)

Sportlight

Different from the usual sport subject, this is both interesting and intriguing. Ted Husing, seated at a desk, conducts a guessing game on sounds the various sports are connected with. To set the stage for the guessers some common sounds are run off, such as frying eggs and marching soldiers with Husing naming the correct answer followed by pictures of the performance. The same procedure is followed with the sports, which includes pitching horse shoes, racing motors, canoe paddling, bag punching, roller coasting, crew racing and a shooting gallery. Running time, 10 minutes.

The Little Pioneer

(Warner Bros.)

Action, Singing, Beauty

All essential elements of entertainment have been crowded into the 19 minutes of this Broadway Brevity. There is music, from little Sybil Jason, Carlyle Moore, Jr., and Jane Wyman, an actionful story that goes farther than to serve merely as a chute for dishing up the songs, other familiar names in Bodil Rosing and Frederick Vogeding, and finally a use of color that points up the climax in which the Boers and British soldiers unite forces to snuff out a band of Zulus on the loose. Excellent direction by Bobby Connolly has made the short subject well worth while.

Sweet Sioux

(Warner Bros.)

Filled with Fun

Seen in the forenoon in the projection room with an enthusiastic group of press reviewers and again at the Strand on Broadway in the evening before an equally interested audience, "Sweet Sioux" gave every indication of being one of the best received comedies in color in months. The burlesque does not let up for a moment. "Trader Drum" and his prairie schooner are ringed with howling and shooting warriors, who turn into a merry-go-round long enough for the "coach" to send in a "sub" for a brave who has been shot in the pants. Under supervision of I. Freleng, the animation was done by Bob McKimson and A. C. Gamer, the music by Carl W. Stalling. It's a Merrie Melody production of Leon Schlesinger.—Running time, 8 minutes.

Porky's Super Service

(Warner Bros.)

Lively

The cartoon animator is at his best when he is let loose on the idea of mixing up men and mechanics, and Charles Jones and Bob Clampett, under supervision of Ub Iwerks, have drawn Porky into some funnily painful experiences with motor gadgets in this "Looney Tune," produced by Leon Schlesinger. Carl W. Stalling did the musical score.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Land of the Magyar

(Warner Bros.)

For the Ladies

While there is little off the beaten track of the travelogue in this Colortour Adventure into Hungary by E. M. Newman's camera staff, the especial attention given to the brightly hued creation of needle and thread should give the production the undivided attention of womanfolk, particularly in the light of the footage allotted to wedding preparations and dances. The musical background matches the seamstress' flying fingers, and the color tones are subdued where unexciting settings are caught and brilliant where action and enthusiasm call for splashes of shading. The narration is by Basil Ruysdael.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Newsboy's Nocturne

(Warner Bros.)

Mildly Diverting

There's dancing and singing in generous dabs in this Broadway Brevity, directed by Roy Mack, lightly threaded through a story of a newsdealer who goes into competition with the radio. The Lane-Tree-Edwards trio does considerable singing, Evelyn Poe less but with greater effectiveness, while the dances, one or two excellent, are contributed by Tommy Rafferty, Jean Travers, Billy and Beverly Bemis, and Maurice and Cordoba. The best received act, however, was the trick drumming by Jack Powell, in which he didn't miss a plate, pan or glass in the kitchen.—Running time, 20 minutes.

EXHIBITORS TURN ON EXPOSITION IN PARIS, PROTEST FREE SHOWS

Mismanagement Is Charged by Confederation, Claiming Snub for Production

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

Charging destructive competition from free shows and mismanagement of motion picture exhibits in the Paris International Exposition of Arts and Crafts, Paris exhibitors have threatened to close their theatres and the Confederation of the French Cinema has withdrawn its support from the project.

French exhibitors who received a formal promise from the management of the Exposition that films would not be shown in competition with them, have threatened to close their theatres as a result of the free showings of features, chiefly in a 240-seat auditorium in the German pavilion where German productions with French subtitles are screened daily, many of them before their general release in France.

The Cinema Confederation last winter agreed to cooperate with Charles Delac, former head of the Syndical Chambers of the Cinema and director of the Photography and Cinema Exhibit which is housed in a special pavilion, but withdrew before the opening of the Exposition on the ground that production was not given a sufficiently prominent place.

Appointment of Mr. Delac as director of the cinema exhibits was opposed from the beginning by the Confederation of the French Cinema, of which Charles Demaria is president and which represents 90 per cent of the production, distribution and exhibition companies including subsidiaries of foreign companies. The former Syndical Chamber of which Mr. Delac was president, has become the Federation of the Syndical Chambers of the French Cinema and is headed by Marcel Vandal, associate of Mr. Delac in the production company, Vandal and Delac. It includes only a few small companies, all French.

In April, in an open letter to Mr. Delac which was published in the French trade papers, Mr. Demaria announced that the Confederation had decided not to participate any further in the exhibit for the reason that the manner of organization would not give the French cinema industry the important place and prominence it had the right to expect.

An exchange of open letters followed in which Mr. Delac said curtailment of the production representation was made necessary by the budget limitations imposed by the Exposition management. The Confederation, however, refused to reconsider its decision and pointed out, in addition, that the showing by foreign nations in their various pavilions of foreign made pictures constituted unfair competition with French exhibitors.

Special Cinema Pavilion

The pavilion devoted to the Cinema and Photography, classified as Section 14 of Group IV of the Exposition, is located under the Eiffel Tower and, when finally opened, will include a large hall, two exhibition floors and a 900 seat theatre in which films will be shown. With the exception of a part of the ground floor to be occupied by the photography and gramophone exhibits it will be devoted exclusively to motion pictures.

The original plan was to reproduce in this pavilion under the title, "The Life of a Film," all the operations of feature production, from the manufacture of raw film to final projection. In addition films were to be made showing daily operations in typical French studios in which French stars and directors were to participate. These plans, however, were abandoned following the withdrawal of the Confederation and the exhibit will consist only of models and still photographs showing the methods of production. There will be also special sections for newsreels, amateur cinematography and other branches of the industry.

In addition to the Cinema Pavilion the industry will occupy an important place in 25 sections of the Exposition including the projection of documentary and advertising films. Motion picture theatres have been or will be installed in the pavilions occupied by the United States, Germany, Russia, Denmark, Greece, Switzerland, Norway, Holland, Austria and Siam for the showing of propaganda films as well as features, dramas and comedies typical of the product of these countries.

German Films Shown

The German Pavilion, the first at the Exposition to open, includes a 240 seat theatre in which five daily performances are held free of charge. Each show includes German newsreels, documentary films or an educational picture, and a feature. Over 100 films, 60 full length productions, representing the best efforts of the German industry, and 50 shorter pictures, depicting Germany's scenic attractions and economic products, have been chosen for the programs. Among the 60 features to be shown are "The Kreutzer Sonata," "Traitors," "The Emperor of California;" "The Master," Emil Jannings' latest picture; "Der Maederl um Schubert," "Hofkonzert," "Der Herrscher," "Ball Im Metropol," and "Fluchtlinge."

The Danish Pavilion was inaugurated with a showing of the film, "The Vikings, Their Ancestors and Their Descendants," produced under the sponsorship of the Tuborg Breweries of Copenhagen, and showing the history of the nation from earliest times to the present.

A motion picture theatre is planned also for the American Pavilion and a photographic display, showing the various steps in the making of a feature film, will be exhibited by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Exhibitors Aroused

It was the announcement of the showing of foreign features which aroused the greatest opposition from exhibitors in Paris and the vicinity. Many of them predicted a serious slump in business because of competition from the Exposition and the fact that in addition to the daily and nightly attractions there are to be free programs of feature pictures added to their fears.

The general opinion of exhibitors is that the City Council must revoke, at least during the Exposition, the 8.75 per cent tax on net receipts or they will be forced to close their theatres. Even with this burden lifted, it was said, it will be difficult to maintain income at a level sufficient to meet expenses.

Of the industries which will use motion pictures in their exhibits the most important is the Electrical Section, housed in the Palais de l'Electricité et de la Lumière, the front wall of which will be used as the largest screen in the world. The surface, roughly 65 yards in length, will be used for the projection of scientific films from an underground projection booth.

Other scientific films will be used in the astronomical and mathematical exhibits and in many of the industrial displays.

The General Culture section of the Exposition will organize a competition for the pictures shown in the theatre of the Cinema Pavilion. A Grand Award will be given for the best French film of over 6,700 feet; a prize of 25,000 francs ($1,100), is to be reserved for French films; an international prize of 10,000 francs will be awarded for the best amateur film, and a fourth prize of 10,000 francs will be reserved for scientific films. There will be also six cinema festivals devoted to productions of the United States, England, Germany, Italy, Russia and France.

Plans for Industry Representation At New York Fair Remain Nebulous

While it is expected that motion pictures will play an extensive role in the industrial and scientific exhibits at the New York World's Fair in 1939, no plans have been made by the film industry for direct participation. Production and distribution executives are known to have discussed numerous plans for a motion picture section and the management of the Fair has indicated that they would welcome such action but no decision has been made on the establishment of the exhibit or on what form it would take.

Indications that visual education through the use of motion picture films in the classroom would play a prominent part in the education section of the Fair followed the submission of an analysis of the subject to the Fair management by Daniel Bertrand, formerly of the motion picture code division of the NRA.

"In depicting the World of the Future, the Education Division of the World's Fair of 1939 should emphasize the use of sound films as a primary development in pedagogical technique," Mr. Bertrand said. "The Fair offers an excellent opportunity for presenting a program designed to acquaint publishers, educators, parents and students with educational talking pictures and supplementary audio and visual aids."

5. Janet Gaynor	5. Marlene Dietrich	5. Claudette Colbert
6. Greta Garbo	6. Katherine Hepburn	6. Shirley Temple

Norma Shearer, for the third consecutive time, retained her popularity leadership among British audiences, while George Arliss, who ranked first among male stars in 1934, relinquished his position to Gary Cooper in a direct-to-patron survey conducted by Sidney L. Bernstein at his theatres which number about 30 in London and the British provinces.

A total of 325,000 questionnaires was issued and 159,723 were filled out and returned. In 1934, on the occasion of the last questionnaires, 250,00 were issued and 124,837 were returned.

In addition to showing the popularity of stars, the latest survey which was completed February 20th, reveals a number of other facts:

Mae West and James Cagney are the most "disliked" stars.

Una Merkel and Arthur Treacher are players who should be starred.

Adventure and society drama are the best liked types of production.

Cartoons are preferred over other types of short subjects.

Sixty per cent of the patrons liked colored features.

Double feature programs are preferred.

Patrons like stage shows included on the program.

Frank Capra is the best liked director.

A total of 44.8 per cent of the patrons attend the theatre twice a week while only 4.2 per cent attend less than once a week.

Patrons would like to see the cast shown on the screen at the end of the picture as well as at the beginning.

"Mutiny on the Bounty" heads a list of films liked most while "Klondike Annie" tops a list of most disliked pictures.

A comparison of the results of Mr. Bernstein's survey with those of MOTION PICTURE HERALD's poll of British exhibitors on "Money Making Stars" for the year ending September 1st, 1936, shows the two have little in common. Miss Shearer ranked tenth as a money maker while Mr. Cooper failed to win a place among the ten.

In Mr. Bernstein's canvass the six male leaders were:

1. Gary Cooper
2. Clark Gable
3. Charles Laughton
4. Robert Taylor
5. Ronald Colman
6. William Powell

The only one of the six who obtained a place in the HERALD's ten "Money Makers" was Mr. Gable who ranked in fourth place.

The six feminine leaders in the Bernstein poll were:

1. Norma Shearer
2. Myrna Loy
3. Greta Garbo
4. Ginger Rogers
5. Claudette Colbert
6. Shirley Temple

Of the six, Miss Shearer ranked tenth as a "money star"; Miss Temple, first, Miss Garbo, ninth; Miss Rogers, with Fred Astaire, second; Miss Garbo, ninth; Miss Colbert, 29th; Miss Loy, 38th.

Previous surveys were made by Mr. Bernstein in 1934, 1932 and 1928. Tabular comparisons of these polls are made on a succeeding page.

This year's survey shows Mr. Cooper's popularity is steady with both sexes and in all age groups; Mr. Gable's popularity increased among men and he had a higher vote from women both "under 21" and "over 60" than did Mr. Cooper.

Sixty-one per cent of Mr. Laughton's votes came from men and he polled a higher vote among men in the age group, 21 to 40, than either Mr. Cooper or Mr. Gable. Mr. Taylor owes his position to votes from women, 89 per cent of his ballots coming from them. Mr. Colman's popularity was steady with both men and women and in all age groups. William Powell is more popular among men than women.

(There were four age groups in the poll; under 21, 21-40, 40-60, and over 60.)

Under comments on feminine stars the survey reports:

Norma Shearer is more popular among women than men and derived a great number of her votes from the 21-40 women's age group; Myrna Loy, on the other hand is more popular among men; Greta Garbo is preferred more by women than men; Ginger Rogers has men to thank for her popularity, and Claudette Colbert and Shirley Temple both are more popular with women than with men.

Film Preference

In the matter of choosing the type of features preferred, male patrons listed their likes in almost the identical order as in 1934. Their preferences, in order, were adventure, musical comedy, comedy, society drama, historical, love-romance, and war. The only difference with this listing and that in 1934 is that love-romance replaced travel which was omitted from the question this year and historical films took the place vacated by love-romance.

Women's preferences were society drama, adventure, musical comedy, love-romance, comedy, historical, and war. In 1934 the listing was musical comedy, society drama, adventure, love-romance, comedy, travel, and war. War pictures ranked seventh among both men and women in 1934 and in the latest poll.

As for age groups, the study shows that while adventure features rank as leaders in the younger age groups, society drama moves steadily upward as age increases.

Cartoons took the lead in preference among short subjects by both men and women. Men's other favorites were travel, sport, musical, science, industry and animal life, in the order named. The feminine choice, after cartoons, also was travel and they then listed musical, sport, animal life, industry and science.

In the age classifications, cartoons led in under 21 and 21 to 40 while travel took first position in the other two groups, 40 to 60 and over 60. But while interest in travel increases with age, interest in sports declines with age, the poll showed.

Results of two questions concerning colored films disclosed the fact that a small majority likes them. Fifty-nine per cent of the men answered in the affirmative to the query "Do you like colored feature talkies?" while 61 per cent of the women also replied "yes." The second question was "Would you rather that those (colored films) had been photographed in black and white in the ordinary way?" The replies to this were men, 46 per cent yes, women 45 per cent yes.

Double Features Win

Although percentages as compared to the 1934 poll showed a slight decrease in the preference for double features, this type of program was favored overwhelmingly by the voters. The figures were 79.5 per cent for two features and 20.5 per cent for one feature and short subjects. In 1934, 84.5 per cent favored two features on the program.

Women proved the strongest advocates of double bills. They voted 83 per cent for two pictures while the men voted 75 per cent for the same type of program.

Stage Shows Liked

"Do you like stage shows included in cinema programs?" brought 76.5 per cent affirmative replies. The preference for stage shows was slightly stronger among men, 79 per cent voting yes as against 75 per cent of the women.

Capra Favorite

Frank Capra took the honors as favorite film director, replacing Alexander Korda who was voted the best liked in 1934. Mr. Korda ranked second this year. The films directed by Mr. Capra which won the most votes were "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "It Happened One Night," "Forbidden" and "Dirigible."

Mr. Korda's best liked film was "The Private Life of Henry VIII."

Other directors in the order chosen were W. S. Van Dyke, Alfred Hitchcock, Frank Lloyd, Cecil B. de Mille, Tom Walls, Ernst Lubitsch, Herbert Wilcox, Mervyn LeRoy, Henry Hathaway, Victor Saville, Rene Clair, and George Cukor.

Twice-a-Week Popular

"How many times a week do you usually go to the pictures?" patrons were asked and 42.7 per cent said "twice"; 30.4 per cent, "once"; 15.6 per cent "three times"; 4.2, "less than once a week," and 5 per cent, "more than three times a week."

Heading the list of pictures which received "Outstanding" votes were "Mutiny on the Bounty"; "Lives of a Bengal Lancer"; "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town"; "Under Two Flags"; "David Copperfield"; and "Captain Blood."

The six films with the greatest number of unfavorable votes were "Klondike Annie"; "Modern Times"; "A Midsummer Night's Dream"; "When Knights Were Bold"; "Things to Come," and "East Meets West."

James Cagney and Mae West, as in 1934, topped the male and feminine lists of "disliked" stars. With Miss West, in the order listed, were Greta Garbo, Marlene Dietrich, Katharine Hepburn, Jean Harlow, Zasu Pitts, Joan Crawford and Constance Bennett. With Mr. Cagney were Ralph Lynn, Charlie Chaplin, Laurel and Hardy, Boris Karloff and Joe E. Brown.

Noted Playhouse Is Reopened with Shakespeare Film

The New Amsterdam Theatre, scene of many distinguished plays during the last third of a century, passed out of existence as an aristocratic playhouse Saturday night. In its place now stands a motion picture house featuring popular prices.

It was 34 years ago that New York City's theatregoers flocked to the New Amsterdam's dedicatory performance of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream." It was a depiction of the same story that the New Amsterdam audience saw Saturday night but this time it was a film version.

The change from playhouse to motion picture theatre was brought about through the purchase of the property by the Cinema Circuit Corporation last month.

Although many alterations were made, the plastic lobby decorations depicting the important episodes of the theatres have been left lining the lobby. Among the changes are the substitution of transparent glass doors for the heavy dark panels that led from the foyer into the auditorium; erection of a new marquee that is surmounted by a light tower 47 feet high, and elimination of the 41st Street gallery entrance.

It was in the New Amsterdam of yesterday that Florenz Ziegfeld staged many of his most ambitious editions of the Follies and it is to a paraphrase of his famous slogan that the cinema corporation announced it has dedicated itself—"Glorifying the American Dime."

Deletions Ordered

Several deletions in "Smashing the Vice Racket" were ordered by the Memphis censor board before permitting the film to be shown at M. A. Lightman's Strand theatre. Mr. Lightman withdrew a trailer after he noticed that all the sequences cut from the film proper had been included in the trailer.

Native Film Seeks U. S. Outlet

Filippine Film Productions, Inc., is seeking a distribution outlet in this country for "Zamboanga," its first production for world wide release. Dialogue is partly in English, with supplementary sub titles. Previously, the company had confined distribution of its native features to the Philippine and Hawaiian Islands.

Burnside Joins Selznick

William H. Burnside, recently returned from London, has joined the production staff of Selznick Studios. While abroad, Mr. Burnside was production manager for "Fire over England" and "Farewell Again" and assisted in the production of the first English Technicolor release, "Wings of the Morning."

The GB program for 1937-38 will offer none but Class "A" pictures—the finest product to come from any studio. . . . In order to accomplish this goal, GB will release a limited number of pictures—NOT LESS THAN TWELVE—few enough in number to guarantee the maximum in quality and entertainment. . . . That there may be no doubt in the exhibitor's mind as to our intentions and our confidence, GB will arrange, for those exhibitors who prefer it, a picture-by-picture buying plan.

ITALY ADDS MORE LIMITATIONS TO WEAKEN GRIP OF HOLLYWOOD

Cost of Dubbing to Industry Increased One-Half Under New Decree; Quota Tightened; Europe May Profit by Measure

by VITTORIO MALPASSUTI
in Rome

The first step in an apparent move toward gradual elimination of American motion pictures from the Italian market has been taken with the publication of a four-point decree which makes it extremely difficult and costly for the American industry to remain in business in Italy.

The decree provides for:

1. An increase in the dubbing tax from 30,000 lire ($1,575) per film to a sum varying from 50,000 lire ($2,625) to 110,000 lire ($5,775) per film, depending upon the box office receipts.

2. An increase from three to four in the number of foreign films which the producer of each national film may dub free of tax with a maximum fixed value per permit of 50,000 lire, making a total of 200,000 lire ($10,500) subsidy per Italian film produced instead of the former 90,000 lire ($4,725).

3. An increase from 2,000,000 lire ($105,000) up to a maximum of 4,000,000 lire in the annual appropriation of the national budget for awarding cash prizes to producers of Italian films. This will provide a further subsidy.

4. All Italian theatres to show one national film for every two foreign films instead of one to every three as formerly.

It is frankly said in Italian official quarters and in the Italian press that the proceeds of the dubbing tax will be used to subsidize the Italian film industry.

Point to December Accord

Opposition to the measures has been voiced by the American industry on the ground they are contrary to the spirit of the accord of last December, at which time the American industry believed there would be no further restrictions in the entry or release of its films in Italy.

The American industry also has declared itself strongly opposed to being forced to contribute to the subsidizing of a national competing industry and has repeatedly declared this is an objectionable trade practice and contrary to the accepted principles of international trade.

It has been charged by the American industry since the very beginning of the taxation that it is, in fact, a form of discrimination against the American film in favor of Italian films since there is no similar tax in Italy on producers or distributors of Italian films. The industry also pointed out that the operation of dubbing films is simply one to adapt American films to the Italian market which might be compared to adaption of Italian products imported into the United States for sale there.

In substantiation of its contention, the American industry also pointed to the fact the United States has not imposed any restrictions or special taxes on Italian films imported there and that Italian products imported into the United States are not subject to any taxes, after imporation, that are not assessed against similar American products.

HERRON INSISTS PACT UNCHANGED

Frederick L. Herron, head of the foreign department of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, reiterated this week his contention that Italy's new decree does not affect the agreement reached last fall between Will H. Hays, MPPDA president, and Premier Benito Mussolini.

The arrangement made last year increased the number of American pictures that could be imported into Italy from 48 to 250, Mr. Herron explained, and provided for the withdrawal from Italy of 20,000,000 lire.

The agreement had nothing to do with dubbing taxes or the number of Italian films that have to be shown, Mr. Herron said.

Cost Increased One-Half

Although the decree does not alter the number of American films which may be imported into Italy, the cost of dubbing American films into Italian has the same effect as a limitation. At the same time, the huge expense of dubbing contributes toward the national economic life of Italy because several thousands of persons are employed in the dubbing industry.

While formerly the dubbing tax cost the industry nearly 10,000,000 lire ($525,000) a year, it is estimated with the increase the cost will be almost 15,000,000 lire ($787,500) most of which the American companies will pay.

In no other country in the world is there a similar heavy tax burden or discrimination imposed on American films.

See Europe Benefited

It is the opinion of the American industry that the proposed increase in the tax, and the increase in the number of dubbing permits without tax, will operate in favor of European films. European film producers do not maintain branch offices in Italy and their films are imported and dubbed by Italian producers and distributors, who hold tax free permits issued because of the production of Italian films.

Thus distributors of foreign films must either buy dubbing permits from Italian producers or pay the dubbing tax directly to the Italian government.

It also has been pointed out that the dubbing tax is aimed directly at American films in that it would discriminate against American films in favor of European pictures because the tax would range from 50,000 to 110,000 lire, depending upon the receipts of the theatres.

Subject to Higher Rates

The tax for European films, if paid, would never exceed the minimum rate because the receipts from their releases are low. On the other hand, it is well known by authorities here that American films gross the highest receipts of any films released and, therefore, would be subject to the higher rates of tax. It is estimated the average tax on American films will range from 60,000 lire to 80,000 lire. The tax to be paid by distributors of foreign film is not a tax on the turnover nor the distributor's profits.

Unfairness of the tax is further illustrated by the fact a theatre program including an American feature film generally includes an Italian government newsreel, short subjects and often other attractions. All contribute to the drawing power of the program, but the dubbing tax, based on the total receipts of the theatre for the entire program, will be paid only by the distributor of the American picture.

The fourth clause of the decree, requiring every theatre to show at least one Italian film for every two foreign films, also is considered by the American industry as discrimination against its films. Under the former laws, American films did not enjoy equal terms with Italian films. With the change it is even more difficult to sell American films in Italy and it must be accepted as further proof of authorities' intention to eliminate American films.

Formal Decision Subjects Rentals To N. Y. Sales Tax

Although made in behalf of theatres elsewhere, all product transactions closed in New York City are subject to the two per cent sales tax, according to a formal ruling by Milton Solomon, deputy city comptroller.

He also declared the sales tax applies to the rental or sale of posters, stills and other advertising materials despite the fact that they are intended for the use of theatres outside of New York.

It is estimated that if the ruling is upheld in court it will increase the annual New York film tax from approximately $700,000 to $1,700,000. Distributors contesting the application of the tax to film rentals are now two and a half years in arrears and the city, has refused to waive penalties and interest on the taxes.

Mr. Solomon issued his formal ruling in support of an informal opinion given distributors by the city comptroller's office a month ago.

U.S. Companies In Mexico Deny Monopoly Charge

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

No further action will be taken by the Mexican Government on charges that certain American distributors have attempted to set up a monopoly of the Mexican market, with particularly acute manifestations in Mexico City and Monterey, it was indicated after a hearing before the federal district attorney.

Answering claims of Mexican producers who instigated the hearing that foreign companies are stifling the native industry, American and Mexican representatives of the companies denied that such a monopoly exists and told the attorney general that while they were doing all they could to have their pictures exhibited as widely as possible they had no interest in placing stumbling blocks in the way of development of the Mexican industry.

The extent to which American pictures are accepted in this market is demonstrated by the report of the Mexico City amusement inspection department that of 102 pictures approved for exhibition during May, 93 came from Hollywood, six from Germany, two from France and only one was made in Mexico.

Cinemas lead in paid public amusements in the Federal District which includes Mexico City, a survey made by the government press and publicity department revealed. The data showed that of the 97 places of paid public diversion that regularly function in the District, 58 are cinemas. There are but seven legitimate theatres and five vaudeville or revue houses.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 76

Question No. 76 was: There are those who insist that coating the back of a screen with opaque color, to stop light from passing through, increases screen brightness. What is your idea of such a proposition?

The following made acceptable replies: S. Evans and C. Rau; D. Danielson; G. E. Doe; C. Oldham; T. F. Bochert; C. Champney; R. and K. Wells; C. Lonie; J. R. Prater; W. Limmroth; D. E. Birdsong; H. B. Robbins and W. Winkler; W. A. Kendal; N. S. Reid, D. D. Roberts and H. T. Watkins.

G. E. Doe answers, "The answer might depend upon the definition of opaque, concerning which Webster attaches several meanings. If, for example, black be under consideration, there could be no advantage, since such light as might reach the rear surface of the screen and pass on into the air, were the black coating not present, would of course all be absorbed by the black. That is self-evident.

"If, however, the opaque coating be red and of sufficient thickness to stop all light passage, and the screen itself be thin, then the red would absorb all light rays except the red, which same would be reflected back into the white surface, surely not to its advantage. This would be true of any other color-tinted coating. But if the rear coating be of white and sufficiently heavy to be termed opaque, then white rays would be reflected back into the white surface, possibly to its advantage, though only moderately so for the reason that the reflected rays would strike the rear of the surface substance. Just what the effect of this might be in increasing screen brightness I am afraid to venture more than a perhaps rather wild guess. I believe there might be some gain, but again we must consider that the screen image reaching observers' eyes is wholly due to light rays reflected from the extreme front surface, therefore—well, I cannot say what would result from light reflected in the manner we are considering.

"In view of these various things my answer to the question, as stated, is that such coating would have very questionable value, or no value at all, and in the event color be added to such coating it might do harm."

J. R. Prater also makes a most excellent reply, as follows: "Applying an opaque coating to the back of a screen is worse than nothing at all, unless the said coating be pure white, since a colored coating will absorb all rays except those carrying the color employed, and these rays will be reflected back toward the screen front, thus causing impure light to be reflected to observers. [Correct, except in case of black, which possibly the writer does not regard as a color, and of course it really isn't.—F.H.R.]

"If a somewhat porous screen material be coated on the back with pure white opaque material, such as calcimine or paint, the reflection power of the screen front will be increased slightly, though not as much as might be supposed. [Would it? Glad to have this phase discussed.—F.H.R.] Any porous substance will absorb a very large percentage of light incident upon it, hence brilliance at its rear surface would be much less than at its front. A coating of white calcimine or paint will reflect approximately 70 to 82 per cent of incident light, by authority of table No. 6, page 150, of the Bluebook of Projection. It then follows that what light reaches the coating under discussion will be only 18 to 30 per cent of the original incident light, less absorption in passing through the coating material. We therefore see that in any event the amount of light a white back coating might reflect would be very small indeed, in view of the fact that it must pass through the front coating twice.

"There is of course no way of saving any percentage of the light passing through perforations. It inevitably is a total loss. However, the newer way of having the greater number of perforations at and around the screen center, their number diminishing toward its outer zones, not only serves to minimize the total loss to some extent, but also, since the screen center inevitably is more brightly illuminated than are its outer zones, such perforation serves the double purpose of reducing light loss and evening up the screen illumination viewed as a whole."

D. and W. Porter answer, "While such a coating of white might have some value on a raw white cloth screen, such screens are never employed in theatres at this late day. So far as its value for present day commercial screens, our answer would be that if such a back coating has any value at all it is certainly too slight to justify its application, unless the small amount of light passing through is objectionable, at the rear of the screen, for some unknown reason. Its stoppage would have practically no effect whatsoever upon what reaches the eyes of theatre audiences, except possibly for this reason: A ray of light meeting a back coating having reflective power would, in the very nature of such a coating, be diffused. Hence it would be reflected back to the screen surface, if ever it got that far (doubtful), smeared over the darker as well as the lighter points of the screen image.

"No, Dad, our answer is that such a coating certainly would have no value insofar as improvement of the screen image be concerned. On the reverse it might, and very possibly would, have some ill effect."

IN COURTS

Springer & Cocalis Suits Settled Out of Court

Suits against Springer & Cocalis by four distributors for copyright violation arising out of unauthorized switching of pictures ended in out of court settlement last week. The amount of the settlement, which was reached by Sam Cocalis and Louis Nizer, plaintiffs' attorney, was not disclosed.

Last week, one of the four actions, brought by Fox Film, was decided in favor of the plaintiff, by Federal Judge Robert P. Patterson, who withheld opinion on the amount of the damages awarded. Other distributors who had similar suits against the circuit were M-G-M, Paramount, and Republic.

De Forest Infringement Action Dismissed

Federal Judge John C. Knox has dismissed the suit brought by the De Forest Phonofilm Corporation and De Forest Phonofilm, Inc., against Fox Film Corporation, Fox Case Corporation, Zoethone Picture Corporation and William Fox for alleged infringement of patents covering methods for recording and reproduction of sound. The dismissal followed the plaintiff's failure to prosecute.

Permitted to Give $5,000 to Fox Suit

Circuit Judge Martin T. Manton last week granted the request of Milton C. Weisman, receiver of Fox Theatres Corp., to contribute $5,000 to the prosecution of a $15,000,000 action against William Fox in New Jersey. The complaint alleges illegal transfer of assets to the All-Continent Corp.

In his petition, Weisman declared that inasmuch as other Fox creditors have donated $57,566 for legal expenses, it seemed fair for the receivership to contribute.

Perjury Trial July 13

Delmar W. Whitson, George T. Whitson and Robert Kyle, inventors, will go to trial in Los Angeles July 13th on perjury charges growing out of their testimony before a federal patents commission in connection with their patent claims on sound reproduction apparatus. Richard J. Connor and Walter E. Gallagher, assistant attorney generals, will prosecute.

Disney Wins Injunction

Federal Judge Vincent L. Liebell has granted Walt Disney Products and Walt Disney Enterprises a permanent injunction restraining J. Chein and Company, toy manufacturers, from further alleged infringements of Disney toy copyrights. Damages and an accounting of profit has been waived by the plaintiff.

Columbia Named Defendant

Columbia Pictures and Tom Van Dycke are named defendants in an action brought by Valentine Davies, author and playwright who charges infringement of his play "Fly from the Ointment" in the picture "Alibi for Murder." The suit is in U. S. district court.

Decision Reserved On Orpheum Plea

Decision was reserved Tuesday by the United States circuit court of appeals on the application of the preferred stockholders' protective committee at Orpheum circuit for permission to appeal from orders by Federal Judge Robert P. Patterson, who had approved sale of Orpheum assets to Stadium Theatres, Inc., RKO subsidiary, for $700,000, rejected the stockholders' bid for the same assets and denied stockholders' motion to compel Marcus Heiman, Orpheum trustee, to intervene in RKO reorganization proceedings.

Judge Patterson's order upheld the bankruptcy referee, Oscar W. Ehrhorn.

The circuit court also reserved decision on a motion to stay Stadium from disposing of the assets pending the appeal.

Isidore Kresel, representing the stockholders, argued that Orpheum was solvent and demanded "fair, equitable and non-discriminatory treatment" for the creditors and stockholders.

He pointed out that although creditors of other RKO subsidiaries would receive 100 per cent payment on claims under the reorganization plan, Orpheum creditors who did not participate in the reorganization will receive only 30 per cent and that stockholders of Orpheum get nothing as compared with the 50 per cent exchange for stock for other RKO subsidiaries.

Mr. Kresel charged RKO had stripped Orpheum of all its assets except $3,000 in cash before Orpheum's bankruptcy.

The claim of the Hippodrome Building Company against RKO, which had been partially allowed by the U. S. district court in the amount of $88,666, was reversed by the U. S. Court of Appeals with the recommendation that the claim be allowed at $450,000 at its re-hearing.

The claim is founded upon a 17-year lease made in 1930 for the Cleveland Hippodrome Theatre by an RKO subsidiary, the Cleveland Hippodrome Theatre Corp. The lease, which provided for an annual rental of $150,000, was rejected by the Irving Trust Co., RKO trustees, in April, 1933, and the theatre was then re-rented by the claimant at $90,000.

SEARS PROPOSES SELLING CHANGE

Drastic change in the merchandising of motion pictures of the "unusual" type is advocated by Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager for Warner Brothers, who announced the release dates for "They Won't Forget" will be staggered.

Generally with this type of film, Mr. Sears said, the initial key city runs had only fair results while subsequent runs found a large audience. Mr. Sears' plan which will be tried on "They Won't Forget," involves the showings in 30 or 40 key cities with intensive advertising selling campaigns to build the film for the area surrounding each key location.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

TRAPPED: Charles Starrett, Peggy Stratford—Well received by our weekend customers. Business average. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Crescent

REBELLION: Tom Keene, Rita Cansino—An excellent and above average Western.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

First National

HER HUSBAND'S SECRETARY: Jean Muir, Beverly Roberts, Warren Hull—This was an excellent picture up to nearly the end. Then it became entirely too dramatic and impossible. This Muir girl is deserving of better stories. Running time, 60 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MOUNTAIN JUSTICE: Josephine Hutchinson, George Brent—We advertised this as a picture of the same type as "Black Legion," and considering the fact that we had rainy weather, we had a good day at the box office. The people here seemed to enjoy the picture. They think Josephine Hutchinson is one swell actress and she was good.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

ONCE A DOCTOR: Donald Woods, Jean Muir—A fine show for any theatre.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

STAGE STRUCK: Joan Blondell, Dick Powell—Good musical. Running time, 91 minutes.—P. G. Held & Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Grand National

23½ HOURS LEAVE: James Ellison, Terry Walker —Good comedy that for some reason fell flat at the box office.—P. G. Held & Son, New Strand, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ESPIONAGE: Edmund Lowe, Madge Evans—Good entertainment that drew fairly well coupled with "Polo Joe."—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LAST OF MRS. CHEYNEY, THE: William Powell, Joan Crawford—Did above average business the opening night, but fell considerably below par the second night.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LIBELED LADY: Jean Harlow, Spencer Tracy, Myrna Loy. William Powell—Oh, Boy! What a show; but the title must have made them believe that they would not see much. Big four-star picture with a poor title has made us no money, but not the fault of the picture. It has everything to make it a worth while evening spent at the movies. Running time, 10 reels. —Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

LONGEST NIGHT, THE: Robert Young, Florence Rice—A fair program picture that we double billed with a Western for the weekend.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MAYTIME: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Metro undoubtedly thought to better themselves by allocating this as one of our percentage epics. At buying time we understood only percentage would be allocated to bona-fide road-shown pictures. At any rate, this turned out a flop and neither they nor we made a thing—we even lost money on the engagement.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MAYTIME: Nelson Eddy, Jeanette MacDonald—I believed "Maytime" pleased most of our crowd. Some men did not care for it and quite a few stayed away. We did not do the business we expected to do. Personally, I would never tire of these two stars singing together. Their voices are wonderful. Running itme, 132 minutes. Played June 3-4.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

NIGHT MUST FALL: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—I do not hardly know how to report on this picture. Heard several say they had seen sorry pictures but this one had all of them beaten. Others said they liked it. Was too long and tiresome. Really boresome and not the kind of picture for Bob Montgomery. Running time, 117 minutes. Played June 8-9.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

PERSONAL PROPERTY: Jean Harlow, Robert Taylor—Our last one with the gorgeous Jean Harlow. No one will ever take her place on the screen. MGM has truly lost one of their best drawing stars. Jean had a host of fans in our town. "Personal Property" did not please very well. Just a programer. Running time, 84 minutes. Played May 13-14.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

Paramount

GIRL FROM SCOTLAND YARD: Karen Morley, Robert Baldwin—Loosely produced and shabby entertainment. No stars, no story worth the telling, and no box office. We do like Karen Morley and think her worthy of many more roles, but we do hope she gets more support than in this "quickie," or so it seemed.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HIDEAWAY GIRL: Shirley Ross, Robert Cummings, Martha Raye—A fair program picture. If Martha Raye is good for your bet, this one will please. For us, however, it was a flop on the night of the Joe Louis vs. Jim Braddock fight, but we don't blame the picture. Running time, 8 reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

HOTEL HAYWIRE: Mary Carlisle, Leo Carrillo, Spring Byington, Lynne Overman—Fairly good light comedy drama. Has to be doubled or braced with plenty of shorts. Played June 18-19.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

INTERNES CAN'T TAKE MONEY: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—Very fine, indeed. Wish more people had seen it as we know it pleased 100 per cent. —L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JOHN MEADE'S WOMAN: Edward Arnold, Francine Larrimore—A fair picture. Did not mean much at our box office, however.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MAID OF SALEM: Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray—Very few liked this picture, and no business. Claudette good but not in this type story. The acting by entire cast was excellent but our patrons just did not care for the story. Running time, 86 minutes. Played May 9-10.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

SWING HIGH, SWING LOW: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—Just a program picture and should not be classed as a special. Rather slow and tiresome in spots. No extra business. Running time, 97 minutes. Played May 18-19.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

TURN OFF THE MOON: Charles Ruggles, Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs—This is one of those pictures that prove "If it's a Paramount Picture, it's the best show in town." The best impersonation ever done for the screen is in this; just one of the high spots. If you ask me, the high spot is the Phil Harris number, "That's What I Like About the South." This picture is packed full of entertainment.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crosby, Shirley Ross, Martha Raye, Bob Burns—Very good, a picture that pleases as near 100 per cent as any of them. No doubt one of the best pictures of the year. Keep up the good work, Paramount. We had the misfortune to play this when it was 105 degrees in the shade. Running time, 88 minutes.—P. G. Held & Son, New Strand, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crosby, Shirley Ross, Martha Raye, Bob Burns—An excellent draw at the box office and liked by most everyone. Bing Crosby does not seem to draw like he once did, but the title of this picture and Martha Raye and Bob Burns help to get them in. Running time, 89 minutes. Played May 11-12.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BEHIND THE HEADLINES: Lee Tracy, Diana Gibson—Pretty good newspaper story, although rivalry of girl and man reporter has been used plenty. Played June 16-17.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SHALL WE DANCE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Roberts —Mighty good picture, we thought, but it drew only slightly better than half the gate money of "Swing Time." Played June 20-21.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

THAT GIRL FROM PARIS: Lily Pons, Jack Oakie, Gene Raymond—Good show to very poor business; not the fault of the show. Too much outdoors going on, such as picnics and ball games. All are going somewhere on a real nice day, and stay late; can't get back to go to the movies on time. Running time, 12 reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

THAT GIRL FROM PARIS: Gene Raymond, Lily Pons—You cannot go wrong if you give this one your best playing time. We played on Sunday-Monday to a good crowd and everyone satisfied. I believe it pleased 100 per cent. Entire cast fine. Running time, 105 minutes. Played May 23-24.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

WHEN'S YOUR BIRTHDAY?: Joe E. Brown, Marian Marsh—Joe E. Brown has about lost out. Our crowd just refuses to go to see his pictures and he used to be one of our best liked players. This picture good where Joe is liked. Running time, 77 minutes. Played May 6-7.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

20th Century-Fox

DR. BULL (RE-ISSUE): Will Rogers, Marian Nixon—About on a par with others in these reissued Rogers pictures.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DR. BULL: Will Rogers—These reissues still have box office value. We were more than satisfied with the business we did.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FIFTY ROADS TO TOWN: Don Ameche, Ann Sothern—Good performances by the cast in a light, frothy comedy-drama. Very light at box office also!—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LOVE IS NEWS: Tyrone Power, Loretta Young—Good entertainment.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SEVENTH HEAVEN: Simone Simon, James Stewart—A fine picture. I will have to admit that Simone proved she could act in this one. She was also lovely. Our patrons remarked that she would be just fine if she could cut out the baby talk. James Stewart very good in this also. Running time, 102 minutes. Played June 10-11.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

GREAT O'MALLEY, THE: Pat O'Brien, Sybil Jason—Very good program picture suitable for the whole family. Running time, 71 minutes.—P. G. Held & Son, New Strand, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

KID GALAHAD: Edward G. Robinson, Bette Davis—This is the kind of show that will please all your customers. Plenty of action and will draw them to the front of their seats. One woman patron remarked to me after the feature, "Too bad they don't give us a chance to cheer out loud." Play it. Running time, 10 reels. Played June 10.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

KID GALAHAD: Edward G. Robinson, Bette Davis, Wayne Morris—A very good picture that actually pleased the men and women both. They all seemed to go for this Wayne Morris in a big way, and he's sure going places. A picture of the ring, but, outside of a beating or two, there's nothing objectionable in it. We ran it Sunday-Monday and heard plenty of good comments on it. Running time, 101 minutes. Played June 21-22.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

KING AND THE CHORUS GIRL: Fernand Gravet, Joan Blondell—A picture that pleased one hundred per cent. Fernand Gravet is truly a gift to America. He is handsome and a swell actor. The girls fell for him in a big way. I am anxiously awaiting his next picture. Running time, 95 minutes. Played June 13-14.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

LAND BEYOND THE LAW: Dick Foran, Linda Perry—My patrons thought it tops as a western. It was good, had plenty of action of the type the rural patrons go for. They're asking for more of Dick Foran. Running time, 54 minutes. Played June 25-26.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Returning to the reportorial ranks after almost a year of absence is

W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan.

POLO JOE: Joe E. Brown, Carol Hughes—In our opinion, this is far funnier than "When's Your Birthday?" Joe should make sure in changing producers he doesn't change his characteristics. They laughed constantly at this and only very seldom at "When's Your Birthday?"—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PICTORIAL: All-Star—Very good short for a filler, that's all. Colored parts too dark to project on the screen. Running time, 1 reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D.

THAT'S THEIR BUSINESS: Paragraphics—Only fair; the print on this poor. Running time, 9 minutes.—P. G. Held & Son, New Strand, Griswold, Iowa.

THIS IS MY AFFAIR: Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Taylor, Victor McLaglen—For some reason this failed to draw. The people who came seemed to enjoy only parts, especially noticeable when Victor McLaglen was in the parts. Robert Taylor was miscast in this and although he played his part fairly well, it didn't seem to excite the ladies. It would have been a good draw here, if Tyrone Power had had the lead. Fox should have used Taylor in a story of modern times—for their, his and our good. Running time, 99 minutes. Played June 27-28.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Universal

AS GOOD AS MARRIED: John Boles, Doris Nolan—I hope you will have better business with this one than I did. It would not click. Business off over 50 per cent less than average. Well, how would the picture makers like to be doing less than average business with a picture set in the highest allocation?—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

CRASH DONOVAN: Jack Holt, Nan Grey—A good picture full of action and thrills. Jack is a real actor and this part fits him like a glove. Good for any night when you want an action picture; little short for Sunday. Running time, 6 reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Warner Bros.

BLACK LEGION: Humphrey Bogart, Erin O'Brien-Moore, Dick Foran—First class entertainment for a small town audience in the same class as "I Am a Fugitive from a Georgia Chain Gang." Plenty of action and a good story; not as gruesome as the ads would have you to believe. Running time, eight reels. Played June 24.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

CALL IT A DAY: Olivia de Havilland, Ian Hunter—Just passable. No one liked it. Running time, 90 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

GIVE ME YOUR HEART: Kay Francis, George Brent—We picked this up late and found it about average entertainment. Kay Francis is needful of a little more attention than her producers have given her lately.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE WOMAN: Beverly Roberts, George Brent—One of the most beautiful pictures we have ever played and very good. Pleased 100 per cent. George Brent extra good in this. GO GETTER, THE: George Brent, Anita Louise—Good programer. Running time, 92 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BAD MEDICINE: Headliner Series—Good comedy of a somewhat different type. You go to a circus and you can see this kind for nothing, but you have to stand up. Here you are resting and just laugh at the spiel of the salesmen. Running time, 2 reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D.

A DAY WITH THE DIONNE QUINTUPLETS: Special—The best yet, appreciated very much, as their teacher, who appears in the picture, is a Tilbury girl.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Universal

BATTLE ROYAL: Oswald Cartoons—Here is a knockout of a cartoon for Oswald. Very, very good, okay Oswald. Running time, 1 reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: No. 18—Good filler, but these "Stranger than Fiction" reels have too many items that they show over and over. It's a gyp in buying them. Running time, 1 reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D.

Vitaphone

LITTLE JACK LITTLE: Pepper Pot Series—Excellent! All of Warners' band acts have been good. Running time, 9 minutes.—P. G. Held & Son, New Strand, Griswold, Iowa.

POETS OF THE ORGAN: Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Crawford—Can't understand why these artists do not make more singles, as they are the tops in entertainment and this reel was enjoyed by all my patrons. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

SUNDAY ROUND-UP, THE: Broadway Brevities—Very good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

VITAPHONE GAIETIES: Big Time Vaudeville Reel—Very good. Running time, 9 minutes.—P. G. Held & Son, New Strand, Griswold, Iowa.

WHEN YOU'RE SINGLE: Cross and Dunn—Good singing and dancing reel. Running time, 21 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

Serials

UNIONS CARRY FIGHT FOR WPA TO CAPITAL

Gillmore Heads Delegation to Washington Protesting Federal Theatre Curtailment

The theatrical unions' fight to avert discontinuance of Federal Theatre Projects was carried to Washington last weekend by seven representatives of the groups, who officially protested to David Niles and Mrs. Ellen Woodward, deputy administrators of the Works Progress Administration.

After listening to the delegation's arguments against curtailment, Mrs. Woodward and Mr. Niles promised to take such action as possible to minimize distress but at the same time they pointed out the move is in line with the reduced program necessitated by Congress' reduction in WPA appropriations for the fiscal year.

Gillmore Heads Delegation

The delegates included Frank Gillmore, president of Actors' Equity; Mrs. Dorothy Bryant, executive secretary of Chorus Equity; Paul Turner, Equity counsel; Matt Shelvey, of the executive board of the American Federation of Actors, and Dave Freed of the executive board of musicians, Local 802.

They declared that while opposed to any curtailment they were more specifically concerned over the elimination of experienced actors and actresses who depended upon the stage to make their living while novices were retained on the WPA rolls.

In this connection, The Billboard in the July 10th issue will say that "of the 500,000 people in show business today, about 50 per cent, or 250,000, are unemployed."

Cites Unemployment Figures

Quoting union representatives, Billboard says the "basis for the cuts is grounded upon a fallacy, namely, the ability of private industry to absorb the Federal Theatre Project Workers. According to the theatre men, private industry is in no better position to absorb them than it was at the inception of the WPA.

"Taking as specific examples the reports on unemployment compiled by the musicians' union and Equity, the condition of show business since the Wall Street crash is clearly indicated.

"In July, 1935, survey of membership of Local 802, American Federation of Musicians, showed that approximately 50 per cent of the total membership of 15,200 were unemployed. . . .

"Actors' Equity now has a membership of 4,400 of which 3,300 are in good standing. In the boom years stretching between 1920 and 1930, Equity had a membership of 10,000, of which 75 per cent were employed. . . .

"Statistics on conditions before and after the depression for stock, tent and repertory shows show that these fields have folded almost completely as a source of employment."

Universal in All Warner Theatres

After meetings which have been carried on for the past two months between officials of the Warner Brothers Theatre Circuit and Universal Pictures, a deal was signed Wednesday for the exhibition of Universal pictures in all Warner Theatres.

The representatives of the theatre circuit, which contains a total of 463 theatres, were Joseph Bernhard, general manager, and Clayton Bond. Universal was represented by J. R. Grainger, general manager of distribution, F. J. A. McCarthy, E. T. Comersall and W. J. Heineman.

The contract calls for the exhibition of features, short subjects and newsreels for 1937-38.

Utica Discovers Solution Of No Theatre Problem

Merchants of Utica, Neb., worried over the lack of a theatre in their community, have finally solved the problem.

The town, with a population of 570, had been without a theatre since the advent of talking pictures. The merchants, tired of seeing farm trade going to towns with motion pictures, attempted in vain to interest an exhibitor in building a house.

It seemed hopeless until the Public Works Administration was formed. The village board had $8,500 in the general fund. To this was added a PWA grant of $6,000 and another $5,500 which was raised through a bond issue.

Now C. N. Howe & Sons, who also operate a theatre at Sturgis, S. D., have taken over the theatre, named it the Empire and agreed to pay the village 25 per cent of the gross receipts. From this money the village board expects to retire the bonds and build up the general fund again.

Richey Begins His Duties as Director Of 'Co-op' Groups

H. M. Richey assumed the duties of director of theatre operations and public relations for Cooperative Theatres of Michigan Wednesday after resigning as general manager of Allied Theatres of Michigan, a post he had held since August, 1921.

Following his resignation came the announcement that 55 theatre members of Cooperative had resigned from Allied along with eight members of Allied's board of directors. Included among the theatre members who severed relations was Fred DeLodder, Allied president.

It was not indicated whether Mr. Richey's resignation in Michigan would have any effect on his position as secretary of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, a national organization.

Despite the loss of its members and leaders, Allied is planning to carry on as a unit under the direction of Frank A. Westman, vice-president and a partner in the Wisper & Westman circuit. A meeting of the remaining 12 directors will be held within the near future and officers and directors will be elected.

Cooperative is a booking and buying combination of 90 theatres, most of them located in Detroit. Ray E. Moon, general manager, will continue in that capacity.

In offering his resignation, Mr. Richey declared:

"Years of experience have convinced me that the days of the old fraternal, loosely-hung-together organization where exhibitors can make the organization entirely dependent on their whims and can resign or threaten to withdraw financial support any time the organization fails to do what an individual demands, are gone and in its place must come an organization bound together with mutuality of interest and stock holdings, with contractual obligations that will guarantee the carrying through of constructive policies decided upon by the majority. I believe that an organization of 100 of the outstanding theatre owners of the city and state can do more to protect the investment of these members than can a larger organization not so closely bound together."

In addition to Mr. Richey's organization work with Cooperative, it was indicated the combine might try collective buying of supplies and equipment with him in charge.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

ON MARKING TIME

It happens quite often, the case of the member who complains of not having sufficient boxoffice outlets for his energy. The theatreman in mind not so long ago was handed a house needing lots of nourishment and having brought the spot up to a very healthy condition now finds little need for further heroic measures. So he marks time holding his advances and is champing at the bit while waiting to move on to a bigger spot where, as he writes, "I can cut loose again and start slugging."

The hardest thing for a man of ambition to do is to keep himself throttled down while red corpuscles move swiftly and the yen to keep tearing along is hard to deny. And doubly hard it is when the throttling-down is required for any kind of a long stretch while waiting for another road where the motor can be thrown wide open. For after all, managers may be talented and worthy of promotion but the number of openings to higher posts are not always equal to the number of available men who can fill them.

The fact is recognized that the man with more on the ball than the next fellow will eventually be recognized. But something remains to be done about the manager who realizes that while progress is often slow he still wants the opportunity to keep in good boxoffice condition on his way up.

COLOR IN ADVERTISING

Since color is coming to play an important part in pictures, theatremen alert for ways and means to stimulate advertising on this type of production are being tempted by the potentialities of color in newspaper displays. From time to time, ad men in various situations have experimented with this medium, but others have gone far beyond the experimental stage and find it profitable. For instance, the Pioneer Theatre Corporation, operating in Iowa and reported by Frank D. Rubel who forwards tearsheets showing compelling color ad effectiveness. Says Mr. Rubel:

"This theatre company which operates sixteen houses in small towns of 3,000 to 6,000 in Iowa has streamlined their advertising and has attempted to keep in tune with modern trend. At the suggestion of Mr. Harold Field, president, every town in this group of theatres has secured colored ads in the newspapers from time to time. The vari-hued pictures that have flashed across the screens in the last couple of years are sold to patrons of these theatres by colored newspaper ads.

"It wasn't an easy job. The newspapers objected at first, stating that they did not have the equipment to make such ads and that the expense would be prohibitive. Some of the theatre managers doubted the value of these ads. Events have proven, however, that first, every single colored ad has been productive of unusual results in the boxoffice, and, second, believe it or not, the newspapers like 'em.

"It was no cinch. The newspapers did not want them. But after they saw how nice they looked and how they dressed up their paper, and after other merchants had cooperated by taking part of the page or the reverse side of the colored page, also in color, the newspapers realized that colored ads not only were unusual and pretty in their paper, but that they brought in additional revenue.

"Our theatre managers have now arrived at a point where they feel it would be unusual to use a black and white ad to sell a colored picture."

The Pioneer Theatres executive makes out a good case for other than the conventional black and white in newspaper display. Theatremen interested in "streamlining" their advertising should be encouraged by the results obtained by the Iowa showmen to give the subject more serious thought.

LESSON IN SHOWMANSHIP

Question: The Louis - Braddock championship fight pictures have been booked in for immediate showing at two of the theatres you are publicizing. Due to a citywide newspaper strike going on during the time of the bout, no papers are being published, thus eliminating the most vital source of advertising necessary for the success of the engagement.

What would you do to publicize the date?

Hoel conceived the idea of a special "Sport News" extra and arranged to publish a four-page tabloid with the results, round-by-round details, theatre ads, feature stories and other material used by dailies covering important sports events. 50,000 of the tabs were distributed all over the city, the stunt proving its value at both houses.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Upside Down

To check up on the intensity of readership and its advertising value, some of the copy on the New York Capitol Theatre's running sign on "Day at the Races" was planted upside down. Veritable avalanche of telephone calls resulted—at least it was so reported.

Star Photos

Harold Armistead, Lyric, Easley, N. C., uses the reverse side of star photos for copy on this week's program. To insure the copy being read, Armistead offers four tickets each week to any reader contributing an oddity item good enough to reproduce on the program. One of the winning ideas recently forwarded had to do with local school teacher finishing her 13th year in the Easley schools, during which time she was never late nor missed a single day.

"Slim" Tieup

Joe Feldman, Warner Pittsburgh zone advertising and publicity director, effectively sold "Slim" by contacting public utilities, telephone companies, manufacturers of electrical equipment, etc., who tied in. In every case employers were reported to have posted stories on bulletin boards plugging the picture and in several instances organized theatre parties.

Historical

For the "Parnell" date in Washington, Ray Bell, Loew's district publicity manager dug up what was reported to be the only document of its kind in existence, a scroll commemorating the reception of the U. S. Congress to Parnell on the occasion of his visit to this country. Ray tied in newspaper by having the Minister of the Irish Free State photographed with the historic scroll.

Bell also discovered six local residents who had known Parnell and from them obtained sufficient material to be converted into a number of newsworthy feature stories.

Telescope Stunt

Found effective by Morris Rosenthal at the Majestic, Bridgeport, Conn., was a practical giant telescope used for a street stunt on "Hit Parade." Telescope was pointed to giant sign on building fully a block away, sign carrying "see" copy on picture.

KEN HOEL BEATS NEWSPAPER STRIKE

With the Louis - Braddock fight pictures already booked for showing at the Alvin and Liberty Theatres, in Pittsburgh, coincident with the recent newspaper strike, Ken Hoel, Harris-Pittsburgh adman, worked out the problems of advertising the important date by publishing 50,000 four-page tabloids containing all the news and results.

"Gun" Stories

Featured newspaper buildup on "They Gave Him a Gun" at the Lyric, Tupelo, Miss., was a contest arranged by Manager J. A. Grower. Dealers were invited to send in their experiences when they were first given a gun ostensibly based on happenings during the World War. Contest clicked for four days, gaining plenty of word-of-mouth comment.

"Star" Stunt

To show how stars are born for buildup on picture of that name, Les Pollock, Loew's Rochester promoted daily on special feature which had department store completely transforming girl with proper coiffure, clothes, makeup, etc. Pollock awoke further interests with ten day color screen contest for Gaynor doubles. Eastman Kodak cooperated by offering three Kodachrome screen tests to winners. Specially promoted trailer furnished by local department store to resemble star dressing room was also found effective for street bally. (See photo in Round Table picture section.)

Premiere

For the world premiere of "The Singing Marine" at the Aldine, Wilmington, Del. the theatre was decorated with a large valance allowed by the City Council for the first time in the history of the town. Just prior to the opening a parade was held with local American Legion band leading a delegation of U. S. Marines who had been invited to attend the show. Band gave a half-hour concert at the theatre. Guest of honor was Estelle Taylor, a native of Wilmington.

Credit for the campaign goes to Lew Black, manager of the Aldine, Everett Callow, district manager and Douglas George, Warner zone publicity director. (See photo in Round Table picture section.)

Impersonations

Parade headed by 70-piece high school band afternoon before opening with local dance team dressed as stars spotted prominently in the procession was one of the featured stunts in W. Clyde Smith's drive for "Shall We Dance" at the Paramount, Hot Springs, Ark. Parade wound up at theatre, where on specially constructed platform dance team gave impersonations of stars.

Dance contest was held at the theatre four days ahead and Clyde inaugurated the showing with a typical Hollywood opening attended by the Mayor and other local celebrities.

Endurance

For advance on "Wake Up and Live," it was Charlie Gibson's idea to publicize the picture at the Gibson Theatre, Greenville, Mich., by tying in with professional driving stunt. Driver was at the wheel for 100 hours without sleep and through tiein with merchants and newspaper obtained plenty of publicity locally.

Gibson made much of the hookin and at the conclusion of the 100-hour period had the driver catch up on his sleep in prominent window, giant banner about sleeper tying in with copy on the picture.

Slot Machines

Graphically illustrating the difficulties of slot machine winning, manager K. K. King, Melba Theatre, Batesville, Ark., created a lobby on "King of the Gamblers," featuring a series of the machines themselves. To each machine was tied card with copy such as "10 to 1 you can't beat this machine," etc.

King's idea was followed up by local newspaper which devoted lead editorial to the picture and slot machine racket.

Dog Show

Tying into international dog show held in Windsor, Ontario, at the time he had booked in "After the Thin Man," manager Ed Lamoureux, Empire Theatre, hooked into the show publicity by offering a cup for the fox terrier entry which best resembled the pouch in the picture. In exchange show officials plugged the picture on p.a. system and newspapers carried shot of presentation of cup to the winner and her mistress.

At the theatre, Lamoureux wore complete full dress, as did his assistant, Don Williams and ushers for further atmosphere and similar idea was carried out with man in tails on street leading pooch.

TOP STUNTS OF LATE CAMPAIGNS

Parade

Parade led by oldest and most active cowboy of the Southwest was one of the features of George Dowdle's "Plainsman" date at the Luna Theatre, Deming, N. M., given further attention as part of local "Trades Day" which drew folks to town from all over the drawing area. Oldtime residents were given preview of the picture and comments used in advertising. Tiein was also made with paper to run pictures of pioneers and scenes of early days in the county. Dowdle also tied in with local scouts to put up a stockade front with lumber promoted locally. Scouts planted camp equipment around the stockade and also in the lobby.

Covered wagon was utilized by having scout troops in Indian costumes travel in it from various points in the drawing area distributing heralds on the picture and arriving in Deming in time for the big parade which was routed up the main street and wound up in front of the theatre. (See photo in Round Table photo section.)

Women's Clubs

The Better Films Council of Moberly, Mo., aided Ted Davis, Fox Grand, on "Romeo and Juliet" by sponsoring the date, each member personally writing letters of endorsement to various clubwomen and teachers in that territory, enclosing tickets to be sold. To put further pressure on the tiein, the Council president telephoned heads of all women's clubs asking they get behind the drive. Tying in with instructor of high school public speaking class, Ted was allowed the services of prize students to speak at all clubs and civic gatherings ten days ahead.

Trailer Bally

Tieup with local trailer dealer in Amarillo, Tex. produced de luxe model with "Star Is Born" banners on each side used for bally ahead by J. P. Harrison at the Paramount. Local girl wearing original Gaynor costume acted as hostess and inside of trailer was decorated with special stills and art from picture.

Harrison also used girl dressed as nurse to parade streets with an eight-foot white cutout stork from whose mouth was hung a basket containing baby doll. Cutout letters on either side of basket plugged the title. Check from the Selznick Studios said to be a gift from Janet Gaynor was presented to the first baby girl born after the first showing.

CALDWELL TERMS IT DOUBLE - BILL WINDOW

For "Hit Parade" at Loew's Valentine, Toledo, Wally Caldwell promoted McCrory's for main window showing scenes from the picture to hook with copy on picture and store merchandise. Tiein plugged the week's "two sensational hits", first, the date, and second, a special sundae named after the attraction. Lucky number idea for patrons was added.

Beauty Pageant

Springer-Cocalis Circuit of New York through publicity director Al Moley, has arranged bathing beauty contests in the circuit's Bronx theatres to select girl to compete for title of Miss America in the annual Atlantic City competition. Winner is to be known as Miss New York City and prizes will be given to the finalists in each week's eliminations.

Poster Exhibit

The New York Roxy has arranged an exhibit of posters created by the famous French artist, A. Moron Cassandre. Exhibit includes some of the outstanding examples of the celebrated artist's work, among which are the figures used in the Dubonnet advertising throughout the world.

Beauty Tiein

For local representation in sectional beauty pageant held in nearby Florida city on July 4th, manager Clarke Gurley, Ritz, Bainbridge, Ga., promoted tiein with some 36 girls competing for the local honors. Each girl represented some Bainbridge business establishment which advertised the judging at the theatre, where girls were viewed in special stage setting designed by Samuel Gibson, house artist.

Old Couples

For buildup on his recent coronation pictures Walter Davis tied in with leading service clubs and churches, inviting each to send over some old British couples who were not able to pay, to be guests of the Capitol, Regina, for the showing. Some of the oldsters had never seen a talking picture, which Walter utilized for extra publicity.

Sea Lion Bally

Important part of Tano Fama's campaign on "Champagne Waltz" at the State Theatre, Dunedin, New Zealand was a carnival dance tied in to a contest with local radio stations. At the dance, prizes of promoted champagne were given and advertised widely, one of the typical advertisements appearing in layout on following page.

Appearance of stray sea lion in local waters and his capture was utilized by Fama as a bally with lion taken about town and carrying a theatre banner tied to his neck. The history of champagne was used in a series of radio talks, prominent wine dealers' windows obtained to plug the beverage and the date and for further atmosphere, the theatreman had man in Viennese military costume standing out front. (See photo in Round Table picture section.)

Safety Drive

Opening gun of Ewell Bingham's "You Only Live Once" campaign at the Howard, Taylor, Texas, was a safety first week drive conducted with cooperation of local newspaper. Cards with traffic rules were distributed, cross-crossings-carefully signs tacked on all lampposts, signal lights and railroad crossings and ambulance tiein copy stationed in front of theatre.

Using the title for an institutional plug, Bingham sent letters to his mailing list reading "You only live once, so why not enjoy some of the pleasures and comforts of life? The Howard offers you the best sound and pictures," etc.

Mayor Greets

Wally Caldwell, Loew's Valentine, Toledo was able to plant stories and cuts of Mayor Roy Smart greeting MGM's Chinese water buffalo in connection with the animal's "personal appearance" in advance of "Good Earth." Eight-by-four foot compo board book with playdates was carried about town by two boys, tagged Chinese coins were given to patrons by cashiers and doorknob hangers in form of lanterns were planted in selected neighborhoods.

Imprinted bags containing samples of incense were distributed to customers in chain drug stores located in all sections of the city; "good morning" cards with picture copy inserted in hotel guest key boxes and special cotton dress goods fashion window was planted in leading department store, featuring cotton from "The Good Earth."

TEMPLE DOLL HOUSE FEATURES PREMIERE

20th Century-Fox Studios Effect Ace Exploitation on "Willie Winkie" Date

Included in Harry Brand's extensive campaign for the world premiere of "Wee Willie Winkie" at the Carthay Circle, Hollywood, were a number of outstanding exploitations found to be highly effective. Publicity head of 20th Century-Fox Studio and his staff tied in numerously with leading merchants, featured being children's show at Bullock's department store on Saturday preceding premiere. Photos of Shirley were given to those attending, oil paintings of the starlet were placed around the auditorium and main windows. Signs were spotted throughout the children's department and store announced show on radio program well in advance.

Other department stores also contributed window displays; one of Shirley in kilts and window was obtained in Cook's Travel Tours calling attention to the summer vacation attractions of Scotland as well as northern India, locale of the picture. Fox West Coast cooperated, advertising the premiere in all its theatres in western states by means of trailers which also plugged subsequent runs.

Bamboo house was especially constructed by the studio production staff and placed in forecourt of theatre. In the house were placed the thousands of dolls Shirley has received from children of 87 different countries as well as hundreds of valuable gifts sent by her admirers. In addition Shirley's own personal playthings and mementos were placed on display behind a huge glass window which covered the front of the bamboo house. Spectators mounted the steps of the house and passed along a long and wide porch viewing the exhibit through glass.

Also interesting at the premiere was a giant illuminated statue of Shirley and McLaglen planted on the concourse leading to theatre. Statue 14 feet high was made of bronze hydrocal and two tons of materials were used in its construction. Design showed McLaglen in a sitting pose in wartime uniform of the Seventh Scotch Highlanders with little Shirley standing beside him also in kilts.

For circulation outside of Los Angeles, 100,000 de luxe postcards eight to a set were printed for mailing by patrons desiring to acquaint their friends with the picture.

Particularly effective was tieup made with big chain of drug stores, their newspaper with a circulation of 480,000 featuring the picture all over southern California. In addition the stores sponsored a Wee Willie Winkie sundae contest, with 400 employees at soda fountains competing for prizes. All clerks wore buttons advertising the picture, window streamers were placed in all stores, ad taken in papers and large windows also plugged the date.

In a tieup with the Order of Scottish Clans prizes were given to the 5,000 members for their Tenth Annual Highland games. A Scottish night was arranged for an after-premiere night at the theatre. Giant blowups of Shirley and McLaglen in kilts were made for lobby decorations to celebrate the occasion.

Another Opinion On Pass Question

Among the members who have taken a leading part in the Club discussion on cash instead of passes for certain services, are the theatremen of the Indiana-Illinois circuit. John Burhorn, manager, Gayety Theatre, Chicago, and recent Silver Plaque winner, is the latest of the Manta-men to give his views on the subject, as follows:

DEAR MIKE:

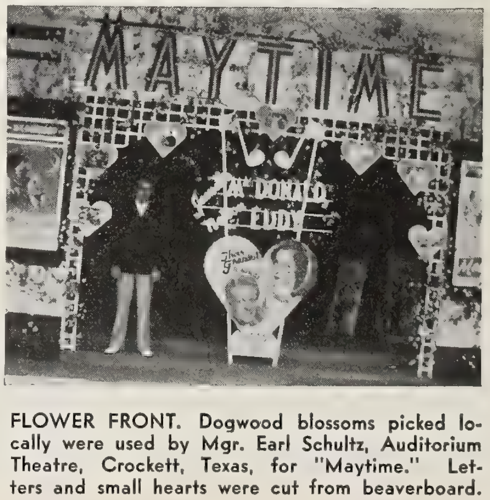
Since the appearance of your editorial on the "Pass Evil" a few weeks ago, the managers of our circuit discussed this interesting topic pro and con at a recent meeting. A lot of ground has already been covered on this subject by your different contributors in recent issues of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD and I am wondering if I can add much of interest.

If I were to open a new theatre in a location with little or no competition, I would not have a pass in my house. That's how much I am sold on the idea. I would pay cash for any and all privileges and advantages extended to my theatre. Alas, that is not the case at present. I am in a competitive spot. Season and advertising passes—although limited and only issued for actual value received—are in vogue.

Unless all theatres could agree to discontinue the use of passes, the complete plan would not only be a failure, but prove bad medicine for many exhibitors who would attempt it.

The pass "evil" is only such, if passes are issued without any thought or consideration for the actual value or expense involved. Unfortunately this is done in many spots to the financial disadvantage of the theatre owner. But that evil is controllable. Everybody in the business can become more pass saving minded without appearing to become "stingy." If we all tighten up in the issuing of passes it will mean a great saving of money and grief. No doubt your introduction of this subject and the many fine replies which you have received will accomplish at least that much. But beyond this, I should like to see a new theatre with no strings and old associated customs, ties and obligations, try this new idea out.

It is a radical change from what we have been used to, but—it should work in part, at least, if not altogether and—prove healthy for the box office.—JOHN F. BURHORN.



FLOWER FRONT. Dogwood blossoms picked locally were used by Mgr. Earl Schultz, Auditorium Theatre, Crockett, Texas, for "Maytime." Letters and small hearts were cut from beaverboard.

SOME REPRESENTATIVE PATCHEN ADS

Another in the Round Table individual admen series, this layout calling attention to different ideas created for recent use by Pat Patchen, who skippers the Main Theatre, Pueblo, Colo., for the Cooper Enterprises. Interesting is the composition of the displays featuring head and figure star cuts in the deep one-columns as well as the four and five column spreads.

L. W. SHUPPERT

publicist for the Paramount Theatre, Cushing, Okla., started with the Griffith Amusement Company as usher and has worked for them in several positions. Shuppert was out of showbusiness for over a year and returned to go with the Dickinson Circuit in Kansas, worked for a short time for Fox West Coast and then returned to Consolidated Theatres, of which the Paramount is one.

GORDON E. CARSON

is the assistant, secretary and treasurer of the Lyceum Theatre, Port Arthur, Can., and has only worked for Famous Players Canadian in their two Ft. William houses and the two in Port Arthur. Gordon outlines his experience as usher at the first house, bookkeeper at the second, advertising director at the third and then to his present assignment, from which spot he promises to keep in touch.

JOSEPH FEENEY

manages the Orpheum Theatre in Clarksburg, West Va., and started in showbusiness in 1922 selling popcorn and ushering at the house he is now managing. In 1927 his boss built the Ritz Theatre there and Joe was transferred there as usher. Later Warners took over the house and he stayed on as assistant, working under Round Tabler Lee Byers, and remained at that spot until his transfer last year to the Orpheum.

CHARLES H. GIBSON

says he is the proprietor, manager, advertising director, bill poster, sign writer and projectionist of the Gibson Theatre, Greenville, Mich., which ought to keep any one of a few men busy. Charlie started by presenting picture and stage shows in the basement to kids of the neighborhood, took time out to do summer stock work and now has his own house, from which point we expect to hear from him frequently.

GENE BASLE

manages the Temple Theatre in Kane, Pa., and started in the game after leaving West Virginia University, where he was given the annual Press Club award as best newspaperman of the year. After other newspaper experience, Basle finally gravitated to showbusiness and ultimately his present job, from which spot we expect to hear from him at not too infrequent intervals.

ED LAMOUREUX

is another Famous Players Canadian manager to join the club from Empire Theatre in Windsor, Ontario. Lamoureux started as an usher at the Tivoli Theatre, was then transferred to the Capitol as assistant manager and from there to Empire, where he has been since last year. As doubtless you know, Ed, the Famous Players boys are very active in our pages and so we shall look forward to hearing from Windsor shortly.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Creston, Iowa

Dear Herald:

If you have not traveled Iowa this season you ought to do it; in fact, it wouldn't hurt very much to travel it any season, but right now it seems like the garden spot of the universe. Wheat is immense, rye and oats ditto, and the corn, well, out here is "where the tall corn grows." You know, we feel kinda sorry for these Iowa folks because they are being broken of their rest, for, "believe it or not" (mostly not), the corn grows so fast and makes so much noise they can't sleep. Personally we never speculate on the Board of Trade, and we would advise you not to, but if we did speculate we'd sell a whole lot of December corn this morning. But then maybe we are a whole lot like Uncle Ralph Persons was when we were driving the Clearwater valley once, through grass knee high. He said to us, "Say, Colonel, do you know I have lost a million dollars?" And we asked him how he did that and he replied, "By not having enough cattle to eat this grass." He reminded us of a fellow who said he would hate to own a railroad because the conductors stole so much money. Well, anyhow, we are not going to speculate on the Board because that's a gambler's job, and we are just an ordinary bass fisher.

Were you ever in Council Bluffs? You ought to go there some time. Council Bluffs is probably one of the reasons why Omaha, Neb., is such a good town, and Omaha might have been a better town if the Missouri river didn't run between 'em, and the reason why Council Bluffs is such a good town is probably because Morey Coen, Ben Harding and E. W. Kerr operate the three theatres there.

We didn't get to see Morey or Ben, but we did see E. W., and we had a dandy visit with him, just as we always do. E. W. operates the Broadway theatre and the Council Bluffs folks have come to know that they can always see a good show at the Broadway, and for that matter they can see a good one at either of the others, for they all run good shows.

E. W. used to live at Denver, Col., and he is very well acquainted with our good friend, Henry Fredell, the branch manager for MGM, and it is probably through Henry that E. W. learned not to swallow the peach pits. Well, anyhow, we had a good visit with him and we hope to have a lot more of 'em.

We wish that boy Brown at Neola, Iowa, would stay at home when we come to see him. We have met him in Omaha a number of times and he always kicked because we didn't come and call on him. We called at Neola this time and he was gone; we couldn't find him.

Over in Omaha the boys all call him "Brownie," but in Neola they call him "Mr. Brown," and that's probably because he and his mother operate one of the most popular play houses in that section. Doggone it, Brownie, why don't you stay at home?

Avoca is located on the edge of the Nishnabottna river valley, and the Nishnabottna valley, next to the Logan valley in Nebraska, is about the best country on earth, and we don't care whose earth it is, either. At Avoca is where A. H. Lehman operates the Harris theatre, and to the Harris is where the Nishnabottna folks come to have a good time. A. H. is strong for the HERALD and that is probably why he always has such a good show.

H. S. Smith operates the Dreamland theatre at Carson (also on the edge of the Nishnabottna) and we came very near driving right past Carson and didn't know it, for it is just off the highway, but we are glad we went in to Carson because we met some mighty swell folks. You know that "Smith" is a very unusual name. Our name used to be Smith back in Indiana until a Smith family moved into our town and the folks started losing their chickens and watermelons, and they laid it to the Smiths and so we changed our name. But that wasn't this Smith family. They have made the Dreamland the principal gathering place of the Nishnabottna valley.

We had a very pleasant visit with Mrs. Mabel Hockenberry, who presides at the Liberty at Oakland, and Oakland is also on the edge of the Nishnabottna valley and just across the Missouri river from Oakland, Neb., and Oakland is where our friend Mickey Larson operates the theatre.

Mrs. Hockenberry is certainly a delightful person to meet. She makes you feel just like you were one of the family. We have put Oakland, both Iowa and Nebraska, on our visiting list and we hope to go back to both places.

But going back to that boy Kerr of the Broadway at Council Bluffs. He gave us a theatre pass for Gertrude Merriam, of the "Round Table" department of the HERALD. A lota boys have given us passes for Miss Merriam's collection, and we are taking the liberty of thanking them for her.

But speaking of dinners. You never had dinner at Ralph Hossle's house in Sidney, Iowa, did you? That's just too bad. We did and we disobeyed the doctor's orders, too. We ate cherry pie 'n' everything, and Mrs. Hassel knows how to make 'em, too. Ralph is a pretty busy man. He not only operates the Strand theatre, but he is on the city council, and anyone who does things on a city council has to be pretty strong from the neck up, and that's where Ralph shines. It's worth anyone's trouble to go to Sidney and meet this boy.

This town of Creston was, at one time, one of the principal towns of southwest Iowa. It has something like 6,000 folks, the most of whom were born under the Stars and Stripes and still believe in 'em. It is on the main line of the Burlington railroad and it used to be the feeding place for the stockmen who were shipping stock from the ranges to Chicago, but that was back when 20 cars made up a train and they ran about 30 miles an hour. Today the engines pull a train of 80 cars and they run 50 miles an hour and go through here just like it was only a whistling post. Creston has two theatres, one owned by Glen Dickinson of Lawrence, Kan., and the other by the Commonwealth of Kansas City, Mo. The Dickinson house is operated by Robert Marchbank and the other by Mr. Hilbers and our judgment is that both houses are very well managed.

Shenendoah has three theatres, the Mayfare operated by Mr. Stewart, and the other two by Mr. Holeridge. Mr. Stewart had gone to New York with his daughter, who, we understand, has a contract from some producer to go into the movies, and we did not get to meet him. We did have an excellent visit with Mr. and Mrs. Holeridge, just like everyone else does who goes there. Shenendoah, you know, has two broadcasting stations, mostly for advertising, and both of 'em play jazz noises (some people call it music), but we will skip the jazz, for, with us, jazz and grasshoppers are in the same class. But speaking of grasshoppers reminds us that we want to hurry back home to see if the goshdingedgrasshoppers have started to work on our cement sidewalk after cleaning up our garden.

But we didn't tell you about Red Oak, did we? Red Oak has two theatres. C. N. Johnson operates one and Frank Good the other, both doing good business and both well managed.

With Alan Mowbray • Teddy Hart • Directed by William McGann

DAILY VARIETY DAILY

Nutty, nonsensical, nit-witty, 'Marry the Girl' is just the sort of haywire farce that hits right down the middle alley of the current vogue for slap-bang comedy.

Picture is spontaneous, peppered with hokum and loaded with hilarious slapstick. Well produced, acted with zest, and directed with a breezy manner, it should find favor in most any territory.

Hugh Herbert as the eccentric chief of the feature syndicate, gives one of his funniest portrayals. But in this one he has more footage and his material produces lustier laughter. Entire cast is a nifty roster of capable comics who contribute to the daffy and dizzy business.

Associate producer Bryan Foy placed this list of comedy players in the hands of William McGann, for a fine job of comedy direction.

'Marry the Girl' has all the earmarks of being one of those 'surprise' pictures and looks like the money!

LADY HOLLYWOOD DEMANDS

LOVELY Lady Hollywood, mistress of the amusement world, slaving at her art between the turquoise, palm rimmed, pools of Beverly and the refrigerated stages of the great studio caverns of sound-proofed magic, is pouting her ruby lips again and tapping impatiently with jeweled sandals on the marquetry floor of the boudoir.

She wants money, damit, money.

Word has come across mountain and desert to the austere offices and counting houses along the canyons of New York to say our pretty Hollywood just can not get along on her present allowance. She suggests, by transcontinental telephone by the hour and by courier borne messages across the sky, that she can put up with a pittance no longer. And with a flash of business acumen, calculated to impress the cold-eyed check writers of Manhattan with a notion of what a smart girl she is, she suggests that "admission prices must be increased."

APPARENTLY the lady suffers no excessive modesty in estimating just how entertaining she is. To be sure, if she ever heard of modesty she thought it was a sales device.

We defer to no man, and that includes Mr. Will Hays, her friend and attorney, in a capacity for appreciation of Lovely Hollywood. She has been a constant, or if not constant, persistent, companion of our growth from the humble nickelodeon to the great world industry of now. Our industry would have been able to get nowhere without her and the help she so unstintingly gave, even when she had to do her own cooking. Of course we are not unmindful that the willful lady has been a bit of trouble now and then—and it might be just a shade ungallant to recall that sometimes her misconduct has cost many the pretty penny. Still and all, say what you will, she's still Lovely Hollywood and the best in the world.

Sometimes, and just now, fumbling in her jewelled gold-meshed bag and looking darkly, she seems more than a little unreasonable. She has been out there isolated in the golden oasis a long time, surrounded by her eunuchs wafting fans over her while she has played solitaire before a mirror, raising the stakes at every turn of the cards. She has won a lot from herself. She has ever wanted all she could get—and she has always got it—the pretty thing!

OUT in the crass matter of fact world of Elsewhere, product is made for the market. Prices are set by consumer demand and acceptance. Every other machine-age product, evolving along with the motion picture and using the repetitive machine reproduction processes, has prospered by increasing its volume while raising quality and lowering unit price. The next development in the amusement art following the motion picture, the radio, gives itself away to the customer, if only he will lend an ear for a moment's mention of soap or pickles. Meanwhile from the art of printing, the customer for pennies, nickel or dime gets bigger and better than ever before, sensation, smut, excitement, information, misinformation, fiction and foible. Ever more for less. That's competition. Also it is precedent.

Certainly no one might properly begrudge Lady Hollywood her due and more, much more. But her sweet and expensive unreasonableness is not to be permitted to hang any signs in the box office that will send the customers away. Marie Antoinette was a pretty lady too, but when she said "Why don't they eat cake?" she was about through. And if lovely Lady Hollywood insists that it is more money—or else, the public may overhear and say "O.K. it'll be else."

It may be true enough that there will be indicated, with the progress of inflationary processes, if when and as, a commensurate adjustment of box office prices. It will, however, always be necessary to make the motion picture the world's best amusement buy if it is to retain its position of dominance in the amusement industry.

Hollywood, pretty pouting Hollywood, makes no argument in that direction, however. She is above, beyond and remote from the dollar facts of life and work and living in the world of Elsewhere. She says she must have more money because "production costs have gone up, and are going up more." She knows because she makes the costs, bidding against herself.

There are about twelve thousand exhibitor showmen in the United States. If they do not know how much they can get from the public and how to get it, one fears that Lady Hollywood will not be able to tell them. Generally speaking it is usually better not to let the lady with the pouting ruby lips into the office because commonly she can't tell the difference between gross receipts and net profits, if she cares.

Anyway, maybe somebody might tell the lady that even if she can not bother her pretty head with arithmetic—there is a limit.

OLD ART, NEW SKIRT

NEW YORK'S burlesque has had its face lifted, dressed in a new kimono, its publicity de-Minskied, its name changed and a committee appointed to make it be good.

The shows are now, opened under new licenses this week, all "variety revues."

Publicity announcements and sympathetic news stories in the metropolitan press proclaimed on Sunday, July 11, substantially a new art, resulting, they would imply, from a collaboration of Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia and Mr. Gene Buck. Mr. Buck, invoking the glories of yester-year, brought in mention of "a new form of old vaudeville" and such names of attainment as Cantor, Brice and Wynn. The publicity press was seemingly tremendous and Mr. Buck made promises of a great contribution to all our arts, saying: "You don't develop talent before a mike or a camera. Variety revue, if properly operated, will give us new blood in the theatre and allied fields."

But Monday night when the reviewers went to the shows

This Week

Up to Americans

The ultimate destiny of the International Film Chamber, which closed its Congress in Paris on Saturday, rests squarely upon the industry in the United States and Great Britain, writes Pierre Autre, summing up the results of the conveniton, at which Georges Lourau of France was named president for the next two years. If America and Great Britain do not join, collapse is forecast for the Chamber, which adopted resolutions calling for three months of free importation of motion pictures to all countries, establishment of an international film court, and restriction of new theatre construction to avoid overseating.

Mr. Autre's article starts on page 13.

ASCAP Battles Legislation

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers continued its fight against adverse state legislation, with indications that the American Federation of Musicians will cooperate in the campaign. Test cases are being made of unfavorable enactments in three states. The Society this week started its drive for the enlistment of public opinion by instructing members in methods of propaganda.

Tactics are outlined on page 42.

Condor Personnel

M. H. Hoffman, a veteran of 20 years' experience in the industry, has assumed supervision of all production for Condor Pictures and will immediately start the shooting of two new season features and a musical short subject for the company in Hollywood. Other personnel changes included the election of Edwin N. Clark to the executive chairmanship to succeed George A. Hirliman, resigned.

Condor's plans are reviewed on page 76.

Wages and Hours

Two cities were added to the list of exchange centers for which wage and hour agreements have been concluded between the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and distributors, making the total 16 to date. Exchange employees in Dallas and Milwaukee enjoyed the benefits of union affiliation beginning last Monday.

Progress of the IATSE drive for unionization is reported on page 55.

Republic Stock

Walter Vincent is president of the reorganized Republic Pictures Corporation of Delaware, which this week filed plans wth the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington for the issuance of 1,316,000 shares of capital stock of $1 par value.

Republic's plans are reported in detail on page 41.

More Incomes Disclosed

In another salary report filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission, the earnings of Warner Baxter for the past year were revealed as $284,384, placing him among the highest paid actors in Hollywood. Also disclosed were the incomes of Gary Cooper at $265,454; George Raft, $202,666; Darryl F. Zanuck, $260,000; Roy Del Ruth, $283,333, and Wesley Ruggles, $188,808.

Chance Games

Bank Night officials in Chicago are planning for the reinstatement of chance games by September despite the recent adoption by the state legislature of an anti-Bank Night bill. The action followed a jury's ruling in Rock Island County that a theatre manager was not guilty of conducting a lottery because his house took part in a Bank Night drawing.

Details of the chance game controversy throughout the country are on page 55.

14 on Hand

United Artists home office executives, after taking stock of the product on hand, announced with not a little pride that 14 features are ready or nearly ready for release. Contrasting with previous years when the company distributed not more than 15 during a whole season, one picture a week will be released from now until November.

The quiet boasting of George J. Schaefer, general sales manager, on the subject is recorded on page 72.

Previews

Warner Brothers, in an attempt to obtain suggestions from the public as to the type of productions to be undertaken in the future, will preview eight films in 31 key cities August 9th and 10th. Invitations to the showings will be sent to city and state officials, film critics, civic and church leaders and prominent exhibitors. In this way the company hopes to obtain audience reactions from a representative cross-section of the public.

The plan, in detail, is reported on page 51.

Signed for Season

Loew circuit officials are proceeding apace with the acquisition of franchises for the new product. Agreements were signed this week with United Artists and Columbia, one was pending with Paramount, and contracts were previously concluded with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Universal. Loew's will take the entire United Artists product and the Columbia agreement provides for 40 features. Both are for a period of one year.

¶ "It is no wonder to me that you have 16,182 subscribers who are willing to pay coin of the realm for your publication."
—P. J. WOOD, Secretary of The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio.

Firm Basis

A product list for the 1937-'38 season of 12 major pictures was announced at the Gaumont British convention by Arthur A. Lee, vice-president, who also told the delegates the company would continue to release through Twentieth Century-Fox exchanges, that a new, elastic selling policy meant greater concentration on fewer films but no diminution of quality, and that George Weeks, general sales manager would remain with the company. As background for these pronouncements he said the parent company, Gaumont, rested on a firm financial basis, "as strong and as big as it ever was."

The GB product is listed and the convention further reported on page 77.

George Gershwin

George Gershwin, noted composer of modern music, died in Hollywood after an emergency operation to remove a brain tumor. He was 38 years old and at the time he became ill he was working on musical scores for the "Goldwyn Follies." Mr. Gershwin, who achieved his greatest success with "Rhapsody in Blue," rose from a job of $15 a week song plugger to become one of America's most outstanding composers of jazz.

Liberalism

Opponents of censorship report, through the American Civil Liberties Union, encouraging signs toward liberalism in censorship in the United States. The Union's annual survey of censorship, published on Thursday, observes a decrease in "all kinds of censorship," and reports no further restrictive legislation was passed during the year.

The Union's analysis of censorship in motion pictures, radio, stage, books and the mail, appears on page 35.

Relief from Regulation

Neither producers nor exhibitors of motion pictures are likely to be affected by federal labor regulations, as a result of the rewriting this week of the Administration's pending labor legislation by the Labor Committee in the Senate at Washington.

The new texture of the regulations is described on page 76.

Dutch Censorship

A reduction of two and a half cents per meter in censorship fees for newsreels in Holland has been announced by the Board of Censorship and admission taxes, also on newsreels, have been reduced by 15 per cent.

Philip de Schaap reports the news from Amsterdam on page 71.

they seemed to find, again, burlesque, with no strip tease, more costumes, more kicking, more colored lights, more banal humor, smut-lines toned-down, hushed—with the word burlesque and the name Minsky cancelled out of any mention.

In fact it seems a new art has not been revealed.

That is not surprising. It is rather difficult to compose while running away from the police.

Meanwhile among the abundant claims of the reopening movement was that a "code" had been adopted. That was Sunday. Monday there was no code. Tuesday there was talk of a "code" again. Someway there was an assumption there might be magic in the word "code"—even if unsupported by documents. The contents of the code, if any were not revealed, although, while there was no code, there was an agreement and pact, with $1,000 bonds, to pay a fine of $500 for infracting the code if there was one.

It was also claimed that the code and plan was the first of its kind "in the history of the theatre in the United States." That presumably was an anticipatory denial of imitation of the motion picture industry's procedure in public relations.

Unlike the motion picture industry, however, burlesque has made its supervisory function external, a function of censorship, not self-regulation. The "Board of Governors" for burlesque includes a Brooklvn lawyer, an official of a Brooklyn society for the prevention of cruelty to children, a department store executive, a dentist who is a priest's brother, a Y.M.C.A. program director and the head of a clothing manufacturers organization.

The relevancy of these worthy gentlemen to the conduct of the new art of "variety revue" or any other art of expression has not been made as clear as the implications of an effort of political expediency.

Burlesque and its manipulators have seen the motion picture industry at work, but they do not know what it is doing or how it has done it.

Minsky or not—burlesque is back, as a gift to art.

Quota's Troubled Waters

The path of Britain's proposed Quota is revealing more and more obstacles. The Board of Trade now has in hand the proposals of all large segments of the industry. Exhibitors and distributors dislike the new scale and differ on the quality and cost clauses, while the American companies want "fewer and better" rules. The smaller producers and distributors are pleading for a Quota based upon bookings, with special treatment for the independents. Wardour Street believes the quality clause already is doomed.

Developments in Britain's most important trade question of the day, and a summarization of the protests and proposals of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, are recorded on page 57.

No Strip, No Tease

Seven former burlesque houses, closed by the license commissioner several months ago, reopened in New York City. Under a unique agreement, labeled voluntary by city officials, there will be no strip, no tease or any combination of them, no burlesque and not even any Minsky. In their stead, it is hoped, there will be a revival of variety shows and talent. The only concession won by the threatre owners was something to be called "clothed nudity."

The story on page 64 outlines provisions of the new code.

Sino-Japanese

Japan's ingrained habit of pursuing her wilful way in China without apparent regard for Chinese face was exemplified in the showing of the German-directed Japanese film, "The New Earth" in a Japanese theatre in Shanghai's International Settlement without the formality of securing a license from the Municipal Police Censor Board and in defiance of a demand, from the Chinese officials, that certain scenes involving Manchoukuo be deleted.

The incident is reported with all its implications on page 86.

Shorts as Assets

Short subjects, long regarded as fillers and only rarely given any exploitation attention, have been made a valuable box office asset by the Interstate circuit in Texas. A special department handles the buying and booking of the subjects and devotes time and attention to building programs with them. Advertising, publicity and exploitation have had results which justify the department.

The circuit's operations in this field as a possible answer to the problem of double features are explained on page 36.

This Week in Pictures

REFLECTING the confidence which Arthur A. Lee, vice-president, made the keynote of his talks to the delegates at the Gaumont British Convention in New York's St. Moritz Hotel, officials of the company and guests discuss the rosy future which was outlined for them and plans for selling the 12 major features which were announced. Standing on a terrace of the hotel on one of the city's hottest days are, left to right, Alf Perry, general sales manager of Empire Films; Clinton M. White, GB assistant sales manager; Budd Rogers, American representative for British International Pictures; Mr. Lee, and George W. Weeks, general sales manager.

Surrendering to the gun play which has been prevalent in the industry in the last few weeks Tom Keene, western star, signed with Monogram for a series of four pictures, the first of which will be the slightly repetitive, "God's Country and the Man." Holding the gun while the actor smiles acceptance is Scott R. Dunlap, vice-president in charge of production.

MAX REINHARDT, center, his wife and Jacob Wilk, head of the Warner Brothers story department sailed together for Europe on the Ile de France on various errands in the interests of the company. The director, whose greatest fame accrued from his productions of religious pageants, will attend the Salzburg Festival and, on his return in the fall, will direct Dostoievski's "The Gamblers" for Warner Brothers. Mr. Wilk is bound for England where he will discuss plans for the financing of several plays in London.

Anita Loos who began writing motion picture scenarios in 1909 but who is remembered by the public chiefly for her social philosophizing in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," has returned to the Hollywood fold. She is shown leaving New York for the Coast where she will work for Samuel Goldwyn under a long term contract.

Arthur Menken, Paramount News cameraman, received the Headliners' Club award for the best newsreel coverage of the year at a banquet in Atlantic City. Earl Johnson, right, presented the emblem to Mr. Menken after praising his work in filming scenes of the civil war in Spain.

Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Houppert of the Jennings theatre, North Vernon, Ind., anually find surcease from exhibition troubles in Florida fishing for big ones. This year they were rewarded with a 135 pound tarpon which was captured after a 30 minute battle. Mr. Houppert modestly let his wife take the pictorial credit for the feat.

A. Rowland-Jones and N. C. Laharry were elected recently president and vice-president of the Kinematograph Renters Society of India, Burma and Ceylon, Ltd. The veterans of the far east service in the picture are: sitting; R. Armour, RKO; Charles Ballance, Paramount; Mr. Rowland-Jones, MGM; A. A. WORLD CONGRESS ASKS TRIAL OF FREE IMPORTS

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

Free importation of motion pictures for three months to all countries, establishment of an international film court and limitation of construction of new theatres to avoid overseating are among the resolutions adopted by the International Film Congress, which closed its much-discussed convention in Paris on Saturday.

The fate of the Chamber is distinctly in the hands of the United States and Great Britain, and will be decided within the next two years, developments showed. If they can be persuaded to join under the two-year sponsorship of France, with a change of attitude within the organization, the Chamber may become highly important. If Germany and Italy continue to dominate with their Nazi-Fascist ideology, it is expected that the Chamber would collapse, as France and Belgium undoubtedly would withdraw.

France, that is, the French Cinema Confederation, will make every attempt to liberalize the attitude of the Chamber, provided that Germany and Italy, which with their supporters constitute a majority of the organization, are to forget political activity.

The eight resolutions adopted were:

(1) Free trade in cultural and educational films.

(2) Three months of free importations of films to all countries, under a temporary arrangement, to facilitate the exchange of entertainment films.

(3) Creation of an international court to adjudicate film questions.

(4) Creation of international film archives and an office of statistics.

(5) Collaboration with the Venice Biennial and Olympic Games Committee.

(6) Accepted the principle of limitation of film theatres.

(7) Limitation of competition in substandard films by issuing a license for the transformation of 35 mm. film to substandard only after three years of exhibition in the standard form.

(8) Creation in all countries of film archives for the best educational and artistic pictures.

In addition the congress decided that color films would attain real success commercially only when the cost would not exceed that of black and white pictures.

The Congress ended with a general meeting at the Cinema Pavilion at the Paris Exposition, which was presided over by Jean Zay, French Minister of National Education. Dr. Oswald Lehnich, of Germany, president for the past two years while the headquarters of the Chamber were in Berlin, turned over the president's post to Georges Lourau, who will head the Chamber until 1939, when Italy will take over.

M. Lourau, in an energetic speech, attempted to show the full independence of the French Cinema Confederation with respect to Germany and Italy, and declared emphatically that his position as manager of the French branch of the Germany Tobis company will not influence him as president of the Chamber, even if there should be pressure from Berlin.

DR. OSWALD LEHNICH

Minister of State in Berlin and President of the International Film Chamber and the Reichs Film Chamber.

M. Lourau made emphatic allusion to an incident, just made known, concerning the opening in Berlin of an anti-French Nazi film, "My Son, Mr. Minister," in which the French Government and democracy are ridiculed. The film was adapted from a French play by Andre Birabeau, but was completely altered in the German adaptation into a sharp attack on the Popular Front, the dominant French party. The German authorities said the film was meant only to be humorous.

The new president of the Chamber insisted that one of the most important objectives of the Chamber will be the suppression of all films potentially injurious to the prestige of any country, and declared that an investigation of the Berlin incident will be conducted by the Chamber.

Articles on this Congress and on the Chamber, published in the June 5th and 12th issues of Motion Picture Herald, caused a sensation in official circles in Paris, and especially in the Confederation of the French Cinema. It also is reported that the Reichsfilmkammer (German Film Chamber) has not been indifferent to these articles.

The French Confederation seemed to be particularly annoyed to hear that the "Nazis contradicted the French, and claimed control of Europe's Film Congress."

A Confederation spokesman said:

"It is absolutely wrong to say that the International Film Chamber is the possession of any one country. The Chamber is an independent organ, the aim of which is to render cinematographic exchanges and relations easier between all countries.

"We do not agree with the American and British point of view, when they said that they would not participate in the Chamber and would not attend the Congress, because it is led by Germany. Yet we must admit that this point of view is understandable.

"This comes from the fact that, for the first two years of its existence, headquarters of the Chamber were in Berlin, and had a German president. The fact that he (Dr. Oswald Lehnich) is also the president of the Reichsfilmkammer (Reich Film Chamber), a Governmental organ under the direct control of the Nazi Minister of Propaganda, caused people to believe that the International Film Chamber was under the orders of the Nazi Government. We never believed that and would never have accepted such a status.

"Anyhow, there will be no more arguments on that question, as the International Film Chamber will, for the next two years, have its headquarters in Paris. Its president, for the same two years, will be of French nationality (M. Georges Lourau).

"American and British Film Industries say that the International Chamber is directed against American pictures. We do not think it has ever been, but, should it have been, it would be impossible now, as all American companies belong through their French branches to the Confederation.

"It is possible that some German individuals have pretended that they were leading the Congress, but this has nothing to do with the spirit which exists, and now more than ever.

"For instance, the most important section of the Film Chamber is the Economics Committee, aiming to facilitate all film exchanges between all countries and to avoid production of films of hate."

At the Confederation there was a certain amount of anxiety over the fact that the Italian and German delegations were for the most part Governmental representatives, which means Fascist for Italy, Nazi for Germany. On the other hand, France, Belgium, and Luxembourg had only trade organizations and delegates, with no political interference.

It was only through Motion Picture Herald's article June 12th, the Confederation said, that it was informed of the article by Dr. Fritz Olimsky, published in "Foreign Film News," an official pamphlet of the German Film Industry, that is to say of the German government. The French Confederation protested against this article.

Henri Clerc, a French deputy and "general commissioner" of the Congress, under private title, insisted in his opening speech of the Congress on the liberal character that France wants to see at the International Chamber.

Mr. Clerc did not represent the French Government, but the Government followed the progress of the Congress with considerable attention.

Resignation of Jules Demeria as president of the Confederation, on the eve of the Congress, was a new problem.

Besides the French delegation to the Congress, consisting of the members of the directorates of the four branches of the French Cinema Confederation, headed by M. Lourau, there were 81 other delegates representing 18 nations, 16 European and 2 Asiatic, as shown in the following tabulation:

Germany, 17
Belgium, 14
Italy, 12
Austria, 10

Kearney Explains

In a letter in the French trade publication, La Cinématographie Française, Neville Kearney, secretary of the Film Producers' Group of the Federation of British Industries, who accepted an invitation to the Congress and to meetings of the Authors' Rights Commission, explained why British producers had declined to participate in the Chamber.

"The chief and outstanding reason," Mr. Kearney was quoted, "was that the industry of the United States was not taking part. British producers felt that, while always anxious to maintain most friendly relations with their colleagues of the industries of Continental countries, their associations and interests were more closely connected with those of the American industry.

"I give it as my personal opinion that if the United States industry were to decide to join the International Film Chamber the British Industry would unhesitatingly follow suit. . . ."

Before the opening of the Congress the French press was invited to a gala performance at the Cinema Pavilion of the Paris Exposition, for the first showing outside Germany of "behind the scenes of the film concerning the Olympic Games of 1936." This outstanding film shows how Miss Leni Rienfenstahl made her picture of the Olympic Games in Berlin. This performance was presided over by Dr. Lehnich, who told the press that the "films shown in the German Pavilion are real pictures of German life, of the culture of the German people, of their mentality," and added, "in case your opinion on Germany would not conform to the impression already received, please be so kind as to correct your ideas a little."

Next day was shown "Triumph of Willing," a typical documentary film on the Nazi Congress at Nuremberg in 1934.

Lourau Named President

The Congress opened on Monday, July 5th, at the headquarters of the French Cinema Confederation, 39 avenue Victor Hugo, Paris, under the presidency of Dr. Lehnich.

At the opening general meeting of the executive committee, Georges Lourau, vice-president of the French Confederation, was appointed the new president of the International Film Chamber for the next two years.

The French Confederation invited Harold L. Smith, Continental representative of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America to attend, as guest, all meetings of the Congress. He also was an observer at the meeting of the Authors' Rights Commission.

The Congress of the International Film Press (Fipresci) met in Paris at the same time.

This Congress is being organized by the French section of the Fipresci, the French Professional Association of the Cinema Press (A. P. P. C.) presided over by Jean Chataigner, president of the Fipresci.

America and England are not members of the Fipresci.

On the eve of the Congress of the International Film Chamber, France and Germany renewed their film agreement, extending for another year the pact of May 12, 1936.

For the last 12 months the reciprocal agreement has seemed to exist only on paper, as in 1936 German films made more than 12,000,000 francs in France while French films brought no more than 700,000 francs in Germany. French producers demanded creation of a "clearing fund" to save that difference of 11,300,000 francs in receipts. The fund would have remained at the disposal of French producers to make in French studios German speaking versions of French films.

This suggestion was not adopted, but the French Government, to satisfy French producers, inserted a clause providing for termination of the new agreement at the end of the year if so desired.

As a result, it is to be expected that for a time the German Government will increase the number of French films allowed in Germany. There will be also more German speaking versions produced in French studios.

Censorship in Action

Many French films have been banned in Germany because the author, director, or actors were "non-Aryan."

The best French success, "La Grande Illusion," concerning the life of French officers in Germany during the Great War, was barred because it had been reported that the film would be anti-German. All agree in France that there is nothing against Germany in this film, but the director, Jean Renoir, is known for his communistic ideas, and in the film there is a Jewish character who is shown on a very favorable way. These are the real reasons for the ban.

On the other hand, with the exception of Emil Jannings' "The Master," and Leni Riefenstahl's pictures, the quality of the German productions has declined these last three years, and for the first six months of 1937 the number of German films imported into France fell from 25 in 1936 to 14.

The French speaking films produced in the Berlin studios, generally French versions of German talkers, are now of a poor quality, and only four were shown in France in the first half of 1937, half as many as for the same period in 1933, 1934, 1935 and 1936. Five German speaking films were shown in Paris in six months of 1937 as against 14 for the first half year of 1936. The decline of quality was the reason for the reduced quantity shown.

Film Bloc Confirmed

The article in MOTION PICTURE HERALD concerning establishment of Nazi-Italy-Japan film bloc had been taken as a "fairy tale" in France until the ban in Italy of French films which previously had been barred in Germany opened the eyes of executives.

Two French films barred recently in Italy are "Marthe Richard Espionne," a French film of unjust treatment of Germans, and "Les Bas Fonds," directed by Jean Renoir. It is also reported that Renoir's "La Grande Illusion" also will be rejected in Italy.

Americans' Problem

American personalities recently in Italy report that from the cinema point of view there is no doubt that Italy acts apparently exactly as if in close alliance with Germany. The origin of this apparent agreement was in the visit to Berlin a few months ago by Luigi Freddi, chief of the Italian Cinema. Mr. Freddi was received in Berlin with much enthusiasm by Dr. Lehnich, State Minister and president of the Reich Film Chamber. Many think that a secret treaty was signed.

Besides the facts that the number of foreign pictures allowed in Italy is strictly limited, that the foreign speaking films must be shown only in dubbed version except for one cinema in Rome, and that the dubbing must be done in Italy, distributors of foreign films must pay a special tax on dubbed pictures, and the tax has just been increased.

Besides the importation rights, dubbed films of over 1,000 meters must pay a tax of 50,000 lires if their gross receipts in Italy do not exceed 2,500,000 lires. In addition there is a tax of 15,000 lires more for each 500,000 lires of extra gross. The dubbing tax must not exceed 110,000 lires.

Pictures under 500 meters do not pay any tax. Films from 500 to 1,000 meters pay a dubbing tax of 25,000 lires.

Payment of this dubbing tax theoretically allows the distributor a license for showing the picture throughout the Italian territory.

Distributors of foreign films show their films to the censor board before starting the dubbing work, but it has happened lately that films admitted by the censorship and then dubbed and released, have been banned afterwards. Despite the license, the Police of each Italian town have the right to ban a film, which means that projection of foreign films in Italy, just as in Germany, is left arbitrarily to the Government.

Pictures Barred in Italy

Here is a list of American films banned in Italy in the last few months:

Lives of a Bengal Lancer
The Charge of the Light Brigade
Clive of India
Lloyds of London
A Tale of Two Cities
A Woman Rebels
The General Died at Dawn
Modern Times
Star of Midnight
Plough and the Stars
The Beloved Enemy
Top Hat
Gay Divorcee
These Three Garden of Allah Dodsworth
Last Days of Pompeii
Fury
So Red the Rose
Give Us This Night
Charlie Chan series

There is only one organization of newsreels, the official newsreels produced and released by the Government film concern LUCE, which has at its head the Marquis Giacomo Peulucci di Carboli, who is also the chief of the ENIC (National Italian Enterprise of Cinema), another official cinema organ of the Government. It is through this organization that UFA and Tobis German films will be now distributed in Italy.

Deny Foreign Film Target

Americans who have been in Italy recently, say it is very difficult to learn anything officially. Officials of the Italian Government deny that anything is being done against foreign films and deny also that there is any connection with Germany.

While American, British and even French films are being banned in Italy, for political and other reasons, the number of German films shown in Italy is steadily increasing, though the Italian people are said to prefer American and French films.

A film agreement between France and Italy, signed Jan. 29th and effective from Feb. 1st to Dec. 31st, concerns films over 900 meters. For each three months twelve French films may be imported into Italy while eight Italian films may be imported into France. French speaking films made in Italy and Italian speaking films made in France are not included in the Quota and are imported freely. But with an arbitrary censorship it is impossible in Italy as in Germany to rely upon any definite business.

This report on the film situation in Italy seems to be a complete confirmation of the articles issued previously in the HERALD on the Nazi-Italian understanding.

Why waste expensive space in elaborating our list. The cold type tells the story.

Instead, the following pages are devoted to helping you exploit one of the BIG M-G-M PICTURES you are about to play—and watch for the next M-G-M Exploitation Supplement on "The Firefly"

"THE GOOD EARTH"

UNLIKE many big pictures, you have certain advantageous pre-sold qualities on "The Good Earth".

1st. The book with its highest literary award; its best-seller history; its vast number of readers who have a genuine interest in its screen presentation.

2nd. The substantial assets springing from its many Coast-to-Coast Road Show engagements which were notable for two things—the extraordinary amount of superlatives used by critics in their reviews and the story of its entertainment greatness spread by reserved seat patrons among their friends.

There have been but few occasions when popular price showings have had such valuable factors in their favor before running even a line of exploitation or advertising. However, it would be a grave mistake to curtail your activities because of them. Rather you should set out to make "The Good Earth" the biggest attraction of all time at your theatre!

ON first thought you might think this type of picture eliminates many potentially valuable window tie-ups. Such is far from the truth.

Even women's fashions are not exempt from this promotion category. Nor make-up accessories. For instance: On the former it is very easy to state that a particular color is a Mandarin red or that any other shade of red is of Chinese origin—and similarly that certain fabrics and styles show Chinese influence. With perfumes and cosmetics you can make tie-ups with Lentheric's Shanghai scent or any other brand having a Chinese name; a red color in lipstick or face powder can be given a Chinese designation and tied-up to "The Good Earth". Show some ingenuity!

NEWSPAPER contests were the RULE and not the exception on "The Good Earth." This applies equally to news columns and classified ad sections. Surprisingly, this picture received easily three times more contest space than either "The Great Ziegfield" or "Romeo and Juliet" two-a-day showings.

Biggest of all was the one initiated by Chicago (upper right hand corner). It was called "Trip Around the Good Earth" and picked up by many subsequent showings. The other was a Film Review contest sponsored by Boston engagement. Mats and proofs of the former are available—but not of the latter!

WHAT is the first thing which strikes your eye on this page? That's easy! It is the prevalence of Chinese pagoda effects in many types of lobbies.

Then you become aware of the decorative and lighting possibilites of Chinese lanterns; the displays of Chinese art, pottery, vases and other objects sold locally by big department stores and interior decorators; the conversion of box-offices into more pagoda designs and another surrounded on 3 sides by Giant 7-Foot Standees; the Oil Painting Accessories announced elsewhere in this section.

Top center is a massive panoramic view of a Chinese hillside. The closed doors open into the Astor Theatre, N.Y., orchestra.

But you can, in a comparative sense, get just as good results as Road-Show engagements. The layout here is merely a working basis.

If you cannot secure a double truck of local ads, try for a single page. If that amount of free space isn't forthcoming, see if it's possible to get some merchants to run separate advertisements in conjunction with your picture.

What we've attempted here is merely to show the many various kinds of stores which are contacts for cooperative merchandising. Change the layout in any shape or manner to conform to local requirements.

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR SCHOOL CO-OPERATION

SMASH went all school records for co-operation on "Good Earth" Road-Shows! This does not except the great literary classic, "Romeo and Juliet"—and when you've topped that in educational promotion you've something to brag about!

In some cities educational support was 100% in coverage, including every public, private and parochial institution of learning.

AND EDUCATIONAL VALUE IS DOMINANT IN THIS 60" x 40" SEPIA DISPLAY 3 for $1.00

ONE of the methods which helped to secure this co-operation and their picture endorsement was this 60" x 40" Display. Printed in a strong, attractive sepia color, it stressed the educational aspects of the picture over its entertainment qualities.

No other producing company ever gave you better material for this kind of invaluable cooperation.

Examine the scenes. Read the captions. Then you'll know we're not boasting about its value to your showing.

Sometimes the most obvious promotion stunt is the best For instance, the many jinrikshas which were pulled through "Good Earth" key cities Some were simple, others quite elaborate. Some theatres were fortunate in securing the services of real Chinese while others dressed up an American girl and man in Chinese costumes Stops were made frequently and the girl passed out Lucky Chinese Coins, Rice Packages, heralds, etc

A bevy of Chinese girls acted as hostesses on Opening Night at the Colonial Theatre, Boston. Arriving patrons were delighted with the innovation and the stunt broke the local newspapers. Chinese music in your lobby or mezzanine provides another unusual method of creating word-of-mouth advertising. Quite a few engagements were partial to the idea of sending 2, 4 or 6 girls around their business districts to pass out novelties or circular matter on the picture. Everybody likes to see pretty girls—but the stunt goes over biggest when the girls are actually Chinese!

AWAY over at left of this page, you will see reproductions from a four-page section of a regular Houston, Texas, newspaper. IN some of these pages you probably have noticed that we have repeated similar ideas conceived by different engagements. This has been done purposely. If several exhibitors think along the same lines then such exploitation is good for any house. Many placed signs on every building lot in town; others crashed the real estate classified ads; others proposed to realtors that they run half-page, single or double-truck cooperative ads—and they did it! The whole Good Earth is yours for exploitation.

OX STREET BALLYHOO

HII, the Water Buffalo in the picture, gave some engagements the idea of employing oxen in a street ballyhoo. In this day, when even horses are almost an oddity, oxen attract more than the usual attention

TO THE EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS of PHILADELPHIA and VICINITY

Believing that all that is good and fine in literature can be successfully transferred to the talking-picture screen without sacrificing the genuine flavor and truth of the original, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has produced a picturization of Pearl Buck's internationally honored novel, "THE GOOD EARTH," starring Paul Muni and Luise Rainer.

This production of "The Good Earth" is offered as an example of the degree to which the arts of literature and the photoplay can be welded. It is intended, like this company's production of "Romeo and Juliet," as a specimen of the power and opportunity of talking pictures as a cultural medium for the introduction and presentation of great literary works in their exact manner and spirit.

The Philadelphia presentation of "The Good Earth" will take place next Sunday evening, at eight thirty o'clock, at the Locust St Theatre, with a matinee and evening performance for a limited period each day thereafter.

We hope that in "The Good Earth" we have contributed somewhat to the advancement and refinement of an industry that is still young and groping, and ask you to judge of our efforts.

AMERICAN LIBERTIES UNION SEES LIBERALISM SIGNS IN CENSORSHIP

Only "Scattering Instances" Noted of Censors' Restrictions and Court Decisions Are Called "Encouraging"

Censorship's trend in the United States is encouragingly toward liberalism, according to the American Civil Liberties Union, which reports that "censorship of all kinds decreased in the past year," and that only "scattering instances" of censorship of books, plays, radio and motion pictures and the mails were noted. At the same time, "no further restrictive legislation was passed and court decisions were on the whole encouraging." The report was in the form of the "annual survey of the state of civil rights," conducted by the Union.

The American Civil Liberties Union was formed in New York in 1920, for the general purpose of "defending Americans' civil liberties." It is definitely set against censorship of all kinds, and for this purpose established an affiliate, the National Council on Freedom from Censorship, of which Hatcher Hughes, professor of Columbia University, in New York, is chairman.

Some 5,000 "civil liberties champions" belong to the Union. Chairman is Harry F. Ward, author of social service and religious studies, and a professor at Union Theological Seminary. Vice chairmen are Lloyd K. Garrison, law dean of Wisconsin Law School; Right Reverend Edward L. Parsons, Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, California; and Mary E. Woolley, author of educational literature, college president and church and sociological leader. The Union's treasurer is B. W. Huebsch, of Viking Press, New York book publishers. Counsel are Arthur Garfield Hays and Morris L. Ernst, both well known "liberal" lawyers.

The Union takes credit, on its "Balance Sheet of Civil Liberties," for the veto some few months ago, by Herbert L. Lehman, Governor of New York, of the bill to establish a one-man censorship of the theatre in New York; the decision of the Michigan Supreme Court denying the right of the police to censor films on political grounds (March of Time's pictures alleged to be derogatory to the President's Supreme Court plan); the decision of the New York Court of Appeals permitting medical agencies to import birth control material; and, the decision of Magistrate Curran, in New York, rejecting the charge of obscenity brought against James T. Farrell's "A World I Never Made."

Condemned by the Union is the ban on the film "Spain in Flames," by state censors in Pennsylvania and Ohio and by local censors in a dozen cities; and the ban by Mayor Wilson, of Philadelphia, of Langston Hughes' play, "Mulatto," on the ground that it incited to race prejudice.

The Union's report, released Thursday, on motion picture censorship, and censorship of theatre, books, radio, the mails and customs, for the year ending July 1, 1937, follows, in part:

"Salutary effects not only in Michigan but elsewhere marked the decision of Michigan's Supreme Court on motion picture censorship. Most dangerous of all instances of censorship was the widespread banning of 'Spain in Flames,' a pro-loyalist film, part of which was taken by Soviet cameramen.

"The only cases of censorship in the theatre arose in Philadelphia, where the Mayor charged that the play 'Mulatto' was 'an outrageous affront to decency.'

"The only prosecution of a book reported to the Union was that brought by the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice against 'A World I Never Made.' In Boston, however, the Union reports that 'the voluntary censorship imposed by booksellers continues to keep off the market books likely to be regarded as offensive by the prosecuting authorities.'

"The most significant victory scored by the forces against censorship during the year was the New York Court of Appeals decision last December legalizing importing of contraceptive materials.

"The Union suffered a defeat in the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia when it upheld the Post Office Department's ban on envelope stickers reading 'I Don't Read Hearst.' The court held that the sticker was 'a reflection on Mr. Hearst.'

"In radio, the issues which arose during the year, affected chiefly political campaigns.

"Chief anti-censorship issues of national importance which the Union is pressing during the coming year are: a bill recently introduced in Congress by Representative Henry Ellenbogen and sponsored by the Union, which would require trial by jury of matter excluded from the mails in place of the present one-man Post Office censorship; bills pending in Congress, introduced by Representative Byron Scott, which would extend freedom on radio by setting aside time for public discussion free of station managers' control and requiring equal facilities for all sides of controversial subjects. On the program, also, is abolition of the movie censorship boards in seven states, leaving sole control of movies to public opinion and, in extreme cases, criminal prosecution."

WORLD DISTRIBUTION SET FOR "NEW EARTH"

Nagamasa Kawakita, head of the Japanese production company, Towa Shoji-Kaisha, brought prints of "The New Earth," with him on a visit to the United States where it will be distributed by Modern Films. In a recent interview in New York the producer said the film was designed for distribution in the world market as an example of Japanese production and that further production of similar features would depend on its reception.

Charles Hart Is Head of BPOE

Charles S. Hart of New York was elected Grand Exalted Ruler of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks at its convention in Denver, on Tuesday. He succeeds David Scholtz of Jacksonville, former Florida Governor. Mr. Hart was elected unanimously.

The new leader said that one of his first moves would be to start a national safety program endorsed by the order.

Mr. Hart was a wartime figure of some importance in the motion picture industry by reason of his post as head of the Division of Films of George Creel's Department of Public Information. Under Mr. Hart's administration of the government's film office the motion-picture industry distributed and exhibited a weekly "Allied War Review" and a number of feature length documentary pictures including "Pershing's Answer," "America's Bridge of Ships" and "Under Four Flags."

Major Hart, who lives in Westchester's Bronxville, is the former managing editor of The Elks Magazine. He retired a few months ago, after serving for about ten years in that position, to devote his full time to other activities of the order.

He is a veteran of the World War, has had several stories and books published. His last book appeared in February, entitled "General Washington's Son of Israel and Other Forgotten Heroes of History."

For years Mr. Hart has been active in the affairs of the Grand Lodge. He has served as Exalted Ruler of his home lodge in Mount Vernon, N. Y., and as district deputy for his district, which comprises the lodges of Westchester County.

Four Exhibitor Units Join Product "Strike"

The product strike called by the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners against Paramount Pictures on charge of failure to deliver six pictures sold to them during the 1937-38 season was joined by the Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest this week. The Independent Exhibitors of Boston will also lend support, meeting July 20th.

At the same time, in Philadelphia, a breach of contract suit against Paramount was threatened by George P. Aarons, secretary of the theatre owners group, if elaborate picketing and parade demonstration plans prove ineffective.

At a meeting presided over by Dave Barrist, 100 pledged $5,000 in support of the drive.

Independent and circuit theatres were warned that they, too, will be subject to picket lines if they book Paramount features, short subjects or newsreels.

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, which joined the attack, has advised ten producers that its exhibitor members should be approached at this time

INTERSTATE CLAIMS SOLUTION FOR DUALS BY "BALANCING" OF SHORTS

O'Donnell and Hoblitzelle, in Texas, Explain Details of "Specialization" of Short Subjects Treatment

A unique and efficient plan for incorporating short subjects in balanced programs for its theatres, put into operation three years ago by R. J. O'Donnell and Karl Hoblitzelle of the Interstate circuit in Texas, has proven successful in terms of both box office returns and audience reaction, and, in the opinion of the operators, is a highly effective answer to the problem of double bills.

The booking of shorts and the building of programs are the work of a highly specialized department of the circuit and the pictures themselves are treated as units of entertainment that have definite sales value and box office appeal, according to a manual explaining the plan recently issued for the guidance of theatre managers by the company.

When the department was established the most pressing need of the circuit was to clean up commitments, determine the exact standing on buys and to discover the exact future needs. "But these were preliminaries to the determined end of building more successful complete shows and to carry out our conviction that lengthy shows were not wanted by the public," the introduction to the manual explains. "The only way this could be proved was to operate shows from one hour and 45 minutes to two hours over a given length of time."

In reporting the success of the department's operation to date the introduction says, "The box office value (of shorts) has been established not only through the value of the short itself, but through intelligent handling all along the line and the original intention of reducing the length of programs has been firmly established. This results in greater turn-over when turn-over is needed; more satisfied patrons who do not become wearied by sitting through extremely long shows and more patrons pleased through the process of booking suitable short subjects with features they complement, thus satisfying the sort of patron who has been drawn in by the feature and, to a large degree on innumerable occasions, the short subjects themselves. . . .

"We feel that we have positive proof of the value of short subjects through the specialized handling of their buying, booking and building programs. In addition, we feel that this fashion of handling this particular product is one of the most effective ammunitions obtainable with which the evil of double features can be defeated."

Prejudices Overcome

The mechanics of the plan itself are relatively simple, but, as the booklet points out, the establishment of the department was a difficult task because of the prejudices which had to be overcome. Managers had always regarded shorts as fillers and bookers found it hard to understand why the circuit wanted selections of shorts by titles and requested screenings in advance.

Mrs. Besa Short, who was placed in charge of the department at its inception and has remained in that position, "had to gain the coopertion of every manager through gaining their confidence and making her services wanted. She had to convince them that shorts could be sold and personalized. She had to win faith and override tradition on all sides. All of this had to be done with the product as it existed—the product in which no one else seemed to see much value, the product that, traditionally, meant little or nothing at the box office but which has been made to mean something there."

FEW THEATRE FIRES IN CANADA DURING YEAR

Only eight of the 1,025 theatres in Canada suffered any kind of fire during the past calendar year, according to a report from J. Grove Smith, Fire Commissioner of the Dominion Government, before the annual convention of the Dominion Fire Prevention Association in Toronto this week.

The total loss incurred in the eight fires was only $3,176, making the theatres of the country the lowest fire risk of any branch of business. The commissioner referred to the railways of Canada as having made an excellent showing in ratio to capital investment, but in the rail service there were 482 recorded fires.

The operation of the department, and its success, according to the manual, revolves around 14 points:

Each subject is previewed immediately upon release. This includes feature films.

Detailed, unopinionated advance reviews on each short subject are furnished managers.

Special programs are built upon the request of a manager.

Prompt service is given and adjustments made.

Special publicity and mat service, not obtainable through the distributor, are furnished.

Costs are kept at a minimum.

Program balance and variety are maintained.

Duplication of cast in short and features or in the subject matter of either is avoided.

Weak features are supported by strong shorts of known value.

Records and scrap books are kept for each town.

Weekly short subjects reports are carefully checked and used.

Close contact with the circuit publicity department is maintained.

Support and cooperation from all exchange bookers has been established.

Ideas are exchanged and credits given in the weekly bulletin which goes to all managers.

The Interstate staff includes, in addition to Mrs. Short as department head, three booker-secretaries, each of whom handles a group of towns. In all a total of more than 130 theatres are served.

In building the programs for each theatre a definite effort is made to keep the total running time within one hour and 45 minutes. With feature films that run 100 minutes or more nothing more than a newsreel and a cartoon is booked, particularly for the preferred time dates, while the mid-week changes include a comedy or two reel musical with an additional one reel subject, depending on the length of the feature and the type. Weak features are given name short subjects that can be sold to make the whole program look better and bigger. Heavy, dramatic features are lightened with musicals or novelties and comedy features are given surrounding shorts of a more serious nature. An effort is made to keep subjects that appeal mostly to children away from sophisticated features.

Managers' Report

A short subjects report is sent in each week by each manager, listing notes, suggestions, and audience reaction to the programs. These together with the weekly bulletin prepared at the home office keep the theatres and the department in close contact. The bulletin includes descriptive reviews of all subjects screened. A "Distinctions" column is used for the managers who send in campaigns on shorts and there is a "Dog House" for the manager who overlooks selling a short or fails to send in his weekly report. The bulletins are checked by the advertising department and advance trailers, mats and aids to go out to aid the managers in selling the programs.

Interstate, according to the manual, was the first to introduce the "Perfect Program" idea. An average feature, or one that was decidedly weak, was surrounded by outstanding short subjects, the whole show advertised as a "Perfect Program" and each unit on the bill sold heavily. Other programs given special exploitation attention included "All Band," "Jam Session," "All Mickey Mouse," "All Donald Duck," "All Cartoon" and "All Vaudeville" shows. Outstanding also were the successes achieved by several "All Color" programs in which a color feature was accompanied by shorts also in color, and by the use in several theatres of special "All Short Subjects" programs.

One of the important factors in the success of the circuit's department has been the practice of selling the shorts on an equal basis with the features. Newspaper space, lobby set pieces and even special trailers are liberally used in exploiting the shows and these methods have proven so successful that a short subject advertising, publicity and exploitation department recently has been added to the department.

Emmett Dalton Dies; Last of Outlaw Clan

Emmett Dalton, 66 years old and last survivor of the famous outlaw clan of the "Dalton Brothers," died in Los Angeles Tuesday. About twenty years ago Dalton, at liberty on a pardon from a life sentence to the Kansas State Pennitentiary, had a short lived career as a producer of wild west outlaw pictures for the state's rights market. Dalton won his pardon as a result of the friendship of the late Dan Anthony, Jr., publisher of the Leavenworth Times, and a series of editorials and articles in the outlaw's behalf written by Terry Ramsaye.

Buy Kromo-Color Englewood Laboratory

Interests said to be close to William Fox, American representative for British Chemicolor, purchased the Kromo-Color Laboratories, in Englewood, N. J. at a reported price of $50,000 this week.

Ted Altman and Joseph Driscoll made the purchase, reputedly for the British company.

The mid-West convention of the Imperial Distributing Corporation, formerly scheduled for July 11-12 at the Hotel Congress, Chicago, was indefinitely postponed.

CALIFORNIA PREVIEW ASSURES SENSATIONAL HIT!

"'TOPPER' could scarcely be topped as the film entertainment novelty of the year. It is farce comedy of the highest order, smart in production, captivating as diversion. Direction, playing, adaptation of the Thorne Smith fantasy with sure fire audience incitements, all groove the piece for impressive box-office. It has name strength, is certain to get plenty word-of-mouthing and has unusual exploitation possibilities." Daily Variety

"'TOPPER' will blaze the trail for novelties. That this amazing comedy is box-office is undebatable. It is packed with superior entertainment, thanks to the captivating performance of its cast, headed by Constance Bennett, Roland Young and Cary Grant, and to the smooth direction of Norman Z. McLeod. A brand new amusement package. Practically without precedent. An extremely fine job of comedy construction with every situation a sock. The song by Hoagy Carmichael, called 'Old Man Moon' is due for popularity." Hollywood Reporter

"The most novel picture made in a long time. Using trick photography to furnish an uproarious comedy, this production is so unorthodox in technique that it will cause a lot of comment and it should be a box-office smash. HAVE YOU HEARD ABOUT

"TOPPER"?

After months of secrecy, M-G-M revealed at a coast preview its amazing comedy "TOPPER"! The reception was sensational. Nothing like it ever before! . . . Why the secrecy? Because M-G-M (often first with new ideas) now brings to the screen things you have never witnessed before in unbelievable tricks of the camera that are screamingly funny. These tricks are used to tell the story (from the best-selling novel by Thorne Smith) of a gay, romantic young couple (Constance Bennett and Cary Grant) who decide to change the dull life of a banker henpecked by his wife, (Roland Young and Billie Burke) and show him it's fun to be alive, fun to flirt and dance and go gay! Eric Hatch who did "My Man Godfrey" was one of the dialogue writers!

This picture is a sure-cure for the blues! It's a worry-destroyer! You'll go out of the theatre feeling like painting the town (if you've got enough strength left after your laughing spree). Universal Denies Hitler Instigated Change in 'Road'

Hollywood Daily Variety, in its issue of Friday, July 9th, reported the following "by cable from London":

"J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of Universal board and Gus Schaeffer, foreign head, have returned (to London) from Germany, where they interviewed General Josef Goebbels, minister of propaganda.

"Following the talk, Goebbels agreed to license showing of 'The Road Back' on condition Universal change the ending to glorify Hitler, which it is understood will be done."

R. H. Cochrane, president of Universal Pictures, in New York, on Tuesday, July 13th, sent the following telegram to Terry Ramsaye, editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD:

"A recently published story to the effect that our company changed the ending of 'The Road Back' for the purpose of 'glorifying Hitler' is a complete falsehood from start to finish. Nothing but malice could have created it. I am in receipt of a cablegram from Mr. J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of our board of directors, who is now in Europe with our foreign sales manager, Mr. Gustav Schaeffer, in which he says: 'Neither Schaeffer nor I ever met Dr. Goebbels in the first place, and in the second place we have never discussed 'The Road Back' with any official in Germany at any time. Both of us hope you will use this denial as emphatically as you can.'

"The simple truth is that after showing the picture to the public (at the Globe theatre, on Broadway, New York), we decided to add several romantic scenes. Those who have seen both versions say the new one is immeasurably better. Politics and fear had nothing whatever to do with it."

Later, on the telephone, Mr. Cochrane charged that the story was originally given circulation by an ex-employee of Universal who had been discharged.

"We have never gone in for 'politics,' international or otherwise, in our motion pictures," Universal's president added. "We made 'The Road Back' because we thought it was damn good entertainment. If a motion picture story aimed against war is political propaganda, then 'The Road Back' is political propaganda."

Some weeks ago, at the conclusion of production on "The Road Back," at Universal City, the State Department at Washington took official action against Dr. George Gyssling, German consul at Los Angeles, for sending threatening letters to Universal's players in the Erich Maria Remarque war story.

Actuated by strenuous protests from the State Department, the German Government in Berlin approved instructions of rebuke sent by the German Ambassador Diekhoff, in Washington, to the Los Angeles consul. The United States was given assurances that Germany's diplomatic officers in this country will no longer harass with threats of "blacklist" in Germany any Hollywood players or producers who engage in the production of motion pictures which may turn out to be undesirable under Nazi policy. (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, June 19th, page 16.)

J. Cheever Cowdin sails from England Saturday for New York, and will return to Europe later.

LIGHTING STRESSED AS REMODELING MEASURE

Modern methods of illumination especially applicable to remodeling are emphasized in another issue of Better Theatres to feature theatre lighting—the issue of July 24. Special attention was given architectural light in the May 29th issue. The July 24th issue, which will appear with next week's MOTION PICTURE HERALD, will be largely devoted to modern lighting fixtures and to marquees and signs.

In addition, Francis M. Falge, well known specialist in theatre lighting, will discuss "down-lighting" and allied methods of controlled, directional auditorium illumination.

Modern lighting fixtures will be dealt with in a profusely illustrated article by Eugene Clute, contributing editor of the publication, Lighting and Lamps.

J. T. Knight, Jr., will discuss electrical and mechanical provisions for remodeling existing lighting schemes and fronts.

Selected examples of recent marquee and front designs will be displayed in a pictorial section of many pages.

Two new theatres are described in the July 24th issue, while C. C. Potwin continues his notable series, "Theatre Acoustics Today," with a discussion of the influence of decorative treatments and furnishings on sound.

Quigley Plaque Winner Honored

John Burhorn, manager of the Gayety Theatre in South Chicago and first Chicago theatreman to win a Quigley award, was honored Tuesday when the Chicago Amusement Publicists Association presented him with a scroll, signifying congratulations from officers and members of the organization. Mr. Burhorn won the Quigley Silver Plaque for May.

The presentation was made by Louis Abramson, president. Guests at the event, which was held in the association's clubrooms at Hotel Sherman, included Alex Manta, president of the Illinois-Indiana Theatres, and Aaron Saperstein, president of Allied Theatres.

"Lynton" Playwrights Win Capitol Decree

Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes, playwrights, obtained an interlocutory decree against the Mordall Realty Corp., owner of the Capitol Theatre, New York, requiring the theatre to furnish them with an accounting of profits enjoyed from the showing of "Letty Lynton," which they allege was plagiarized from their Broadway play, "Dishonored Lady."

The step developed from the suit which the collaborators successfully brought against M-G-M and co-defendants some time ago. Federal Judge Robert P. Patterson said he would appoint a qualified person to determine damages.

Republic Plans Stock Issuance; Vincent President

The reorganized Republic Pictures Corporation has been formed at Dover, Del., listing Walter Vincent as president. Mildred Benjamin and Emma Maio of Brooklyn and Mollie Waller of Mount Vernon, N. Y., were the incorporators and the capital was listed at $1,500,000.

Moe J. Siegel is vice-president, Grover C. Schaefer, treasurer, and three directors, besides the officers, are: H. J. Yates, F. R. Ryan, president of Setay Corporation, and F. W. Smith, head of British Lion Films of England.

In discussing the new corporation, Mr. Vincent declared Republic's business is considerably improved as compared to last year at this time. He said the Delaware corporation has been formed as a new parent company for Republic. Mr. Vincent continues as chairman of Republic in addition to being president of Republic of Delaware. Formation of the new company, Mr. Vincent said, entails no changes in the executive setup of the organization. Republic Pictures Corporation, Mr. Vincent continued, remains an active corporation and will continue as the distributing company for pictures produced by Republic Productions.

W. Ray Johnston had been the president of Republic, but he retired to take over his own old company, Monogram Pictures.

Plans for the issuance of 1,316,000 shares of $1 par value capital stock, including 261,000 shares of stock reserved for warrants and warrants entitling holders to purchase the 261,000 shares, were filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington.

The company expects to realize a net of $3,000,000 for 600,000 shares of the stock which are to be sold through Hammons and Company, Inc., of New York, the underwriter.

The proceeds will be used for repayment of loans to Consolidated Films Industries, Setay Company, and Francis J. Levine, and certain outstanding notes. Of the balance of the total, $1,010,250 will be used for working capital for production and distribution purposes.

Of the total offering, aside from the 600,000 shares to be sold, 225,000 shares have been issued to Cajo Company, Inc.; 150,000 shares to Consolidated Film Industries; 80,000 shares to Setay Company, and the balance of 261,000 shares will be reserved for the exercise of the warrants, which may be issued to Hammons and Company if it elects to exercise all or part of the warrants.

The company was incorporated on July 6th and acquired, as of April 30th, last, Cajo Company, which owned all the issued and outstanding capital stock of Republic Products, Inc., Republic Pictures Corporation and the Arthur Realty Corporation.

The prospectus filed with the SEC stated the shares to be sold will be offered to the public at $6.25, the issuer to receive $5.

Selznick To Film Story Of Associated Press

"Freedom of the Press" was added to Selznick International's 1937-38 schedule this week, by David O. Selznick, president, in an arrangement with Associated Press, which will make available "hitherto unpublished records" of that news service, as the basis of the story. "AP's" history will be traced, from its beginning, in 1848.

ASCAP IN NEW OFFENSIVE AGAINST STATE LAWS; FEDERATION MAY HELP

Musicians' Union Executive Committee Meets This Month to Plan Joint Protest Against Measures Outlawing Society

The campaign of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers against adverse state legislation increased in intensity on a number of fronts last week. Counterbalancing outside bitterness, however, is the new internal harmony indicated between the Society and the American Federation of Musicians.

Closer cooperation between the two groups is suggested in the plan of the Federation's executive committee to meet in New York around July 20th to consider joining ASCAP in its defense against unfavorable state enactments, or new legislative proposals. Moreover, peace overtures were seen in the assurance of George B. Henderson, Federation vice-president, that the Society's application for membership in the Federation would be accepted.

Continuing its attack single-handed for the present, the Society, in a circular letter sent to members, made its first attempt to marshal public sympathy by suggesting methods of winning favorable public opinion. Members were advised to make the public "ASCAP-conscious" and conversant with the "distinction" attending membership in the Society. The various means suggested for achievement of this aim were for members to request that the ASCAP emblem follow their names on published sheet music and on screen credits, and to impress the name of the Society in their press and radio interviews.

Meanwhile, counter offensives continued in those state capitols which have enacted or are considering anti-ASCAP measures. Five states have passed such bills. Those passed in Washington, Nebraska and Montana are being made test cases.

In Tacoma, Wash., arguments were completed on the federal court action brought by the Society classifying the recently enacted state measure as unconstitutional and "class legislation." Three Federal judges, E. E. Cushman, Bert E. Haney and John C. Bowen, have the case under advisement. The Washington law would compel filing of copyrighted compositions with the Secretary of State, together with the price at which they are available. ASCAP was represented by two New York attorneys, Herman Finkelstein and Louis D. Frohlich, while counsel defending the measure, on behalf of the Washington State Broadcasters Association, was Clarence C. Dill.

A recently enacted bill in Michigan, which would compel stations to pay royalties on the basis of frequency of rendition rather than by blanket fee, is awaiting the signature of Governor Frank Murphy. The bill was personally opposed by Gene Buck, president of ASCAP, before hearings of the state legislative committee in Lansing recently.

The Society's action challenging the validity of Nebraska's legislation will begin in Lincoln, September 11th, before Judges T. C. Munger, J. A. Donohue, and Archibald K. Gardner. The measure is already in technical operation, but Attorney General Hunter was reported to have expressed doubt of its enforceability shortly after its enactment. The bill provides for a $5,000 violation penalty.

Other states which have legislated against ASCAP are Wisconsin, Florida and Montana. Decision on the Montana case is expected soon, arguments having been completed on it some months ago. Those states which have introduced restrictive ASCAP bills, without acting upon them, are Iowa, Texas, Minnesota, Ohio, Indiana and Tennessee.

According to reports here, ASCAP's second quarterly distribution will be in excess of $1,000,000. Music Publishers Holding Company, a Warners subsidiary, received $122,000 as its dividend for the second quarter. Warners first dividend, following reconciliation with ASCAP last October, was $39,000, causing protest. Since then, adjustment has been made.

Pulitzer Prizes for Cinema Sought by Columbia's Dean Ackerman

Pulitzer prizes for motion pictures will be sought this year by Dean Carl W. Ackerman, of the Graduate School of Journalism at Columbia University. Dean Ackerman, in an article in the July issue of "Cinema Arts," asserted, "Pulitzer prizes should be established for the cinema to recognize the outstanding and distinguished achievements in this latest of the arts.

"The literally stupendous influence of motion pictures throughout the world as a medium of education merits a series of awards comparable to the world-famous Nobel prizes in science and letters and to the Pulitzer prizes in literature and journalism," he added.

"I believe the time has come for serious consideration of the practical aspects of this proposal."

Mr. Ackerman points out that when Joseph Pulitzer established a fund for the Pulitzer prizes, films were "not the dominant factor in education that they are today, and it was natural that he should think only in terms of the printed word and the stage."

Today, however, motion pictures are an influence on public thought vast enough to "justify one of the leading educational institutions in giving them official recognition," Dean Ackerman contends.

Because of the important effect motion pictures have had on the habits, customs, and even the thinking of people in every civilized country, and because they are primarily American in conception and achievement, the cinema deserves the highest possible recognition, he believes.

Dean Ackerman's plan would provide for a "series of prizes that would be awarded by Columbia University on the recommendation of the Graduate School of Journalism."

He urges complete cooperation between actors, producers, directors, and technicians of the movie world, just as there is between newspapers, book publishers, authors, producers and the University each year when nominations are received for the Pulitzer prizes in letters.

"Surely," he writes, "the motion picture world, which combines so many creative arts, with their imagination and daring, could join with us in establishing a series of prizes worthy of the truly important status of the modern motion picture."

$3,000,000 Suit Filed in Oklahoma

The $3,000,000 action of A. B. Momand, Oklahoma exhibitor, against eight major producers for alleged conspiracy and violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, was filed in Boston First U. S. District Court this week. The suit charges monopolistic practices in the Oklahoma towns of Clinton, Wewoka, Pawhuska, Alva, Hartshorne, and Holdenville. George S. Ryan, attorney who represented Mr. Momand in the original $4,500,000 suit, is again acting as counsel for the plaintiff.

Harry Arthur, Fanchon and Marco executive, denied the charges accusing the circuit of attempting to injure the business of local exhibitors in St. Louis. "It is our purpose to be helpful in the general exhibition situation here and to work in harmony with others in the showing of motion pictures," said Mr. Arthur.

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

That busy-as-a-bee Cecil B. DeMille now comes forth with his version of the origin of the expressions, "son-of-a-gun," "Dixie," and "two bits," dug up while researching for his "Buccaneer," for Paramount.

In the early 19th Century, the period of "The Buccaneer," Mr. DeMille reports that women often fought side-by-side with gunners, and children born prematurely from the shock and concussion among the guns were known as "sons of guns."

Mr. DeMille next discovered that a $10 bill became known in the south by the French word of ten, "dix," and later was called a "dixie." Thus known only in the Southland, that part of the country soon became known to travelers as "Dixie Land," and, so, "Dixie."

The expression "two bits," according to Mr. DeMille, came into the language when Spanish dollars were cut up into pieces to make change. A quarter of a dollar, when split, produced two bits, so-called because when they were placed point to point they resembled a "bitte" or bit-head on the foredeck of a boat, to which hawsers were made fast.

The case of the "sawed house" moved up to federal court in Oklahoma City last week with Mrs. Fern Chadwick asking $35,000 from the local Standard Theatres, Inc., and three film companies.

Food for thought, from A. C. (theatre and film broker) Blumenthal: "The British public is panting for hamburgers and hot dogs."

Frank Lloyd, Paramount director, has just returned to the Hollywood studio from San Francisco, where he had been making notes for his "cavalcade of the west," "Wells Fargo." He was in the curio room of the Wells-Fargo Bank, in 'Frisco, when an austere, well-dressed woman came in. She looked at the stage-coach, nuggets, early mining tools, old prints, messengers' shot-guns and other relics and then pored over a photograph album open under a glass case.

A daguerrotype fascinated her. It depicted a full-bearded man of open countenance and fearless, innocent eyes. With dicky, string-tie and frock-coat, he looked the respectable pioneer. "Why, that's grandfather!" she exclaimed. "I could tell his picture anywhere! How wonderful that he should be here!"

She chatted animatedly with the guard, announced she was going to bring in her children to have a look at their great-grandfather and sailed out with the grand air of a matron of the Daughters of the American Revolution, if not of a Back-Bay-Boston Cabot. The guard looked a little unhappy, though. He told Director Lloyd he wished she wouldn't come.

"That album," he said, "is the kind Wells-Fargo supplied to every driver, to warn them of the most dangerous road-agents on the Hangtown route. And 'Grandfather,' you might say, was the worst of the lot. There'll be hell popping when they find that out."

On Again—Off Again

(RKO-Radio)

Comedy

According to FAME, managers think well enough of the Wheeler-Woolsey drawing power to rate the pair as Blue Ribbon stars. Continued perusal of "What the Picture Did for Me" further denotes that exhibitors find the brand of entertainment of the comedians pleasing to their patrons.

Many potential theatre goers, when they see Wheeler and Woolsey in the marquee, hurry on by and look for their entertainment elsewhere, but the record also proves that they attract a lot of customers. This is particularly true in smaller theatres and smaller cities. Consequently the producers are shrewd enough to make and the stars are wise enough to play the pictures for this class of audience. Therein rests the basic showmanship of this or any other Wheeler and Woolsey picture. The job simply is to bring the film to the attention of those who have demonstrated they like the funmakers. Of course nobody is barred from doing a little missionary work and trying to break down the resistance of those not commonly interested in them.

There isn't much rhyme or reason to the story. Just about everything that is done is done to erect situations on which Wheeler and Woolsey can hang another gag in dialogue, action or characterization. The pair can't get along in business. As much as they harry each other, they harry all who come in contact with them more. Finally Wheeler, loser in a comedy wrestling match, becomes Woolsey's valet. Things get worse and worse for both of them as domestic, romantic and business complications ensue. But all is done, even to the inclusion of a garden party musical number in which Wheeler repeats an old stage bit, to amuse audiences. The finale isn't any more sensible than the start or body of the story. However, it is hilarious amusement.

Previewed in Dome Theatre, Ocean Park, Cal. The Bank Night crowd which usually rushes out of the theatres en masse when nobody among it has won a small fortune didn't rush out so madly this time. In fact, many who had started to try their luck at the various innocent gambling games on the adjacent amusement pier, returned to reclaim their seats when they heard those who were content to remain laughing heartily.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Super Sleuth

(RKO-Radio)

Comedy

The names of Jack Oakie and Edgar Kennedy, which convey automatically the information that this is a forthright comedy, are the showmen's top card in this deck of exploitation tricks. That of Ann Sothern suggests the indispensable romantic interest, which has little but enough to do with what goes on. Possibly the liveliest sales copy may be derived from the fact that the scene of the picture is Hollywood and most of the characters are motion picture people, the hero a none too bright screen hero, the heroine a studio publicity director and the lesser figures engaged one way or another in the making of films. All promotion, to be accurate, will emphasize that the story is utterly humorous and that what goes on probably wouldn't happen but just possibly would.

The story develops out of a conceited screen star's public criticism of the local police force and his studio's attempt to appease the wrath of the enraged commissioner. He and his men are invited to act in a picture and in the making of same a bullet fired from concealment kills one of the actors. Simultaneously the star receives a series of threatening letters. Only the audience knows these are being written by a demented criminologist who takes occasional pot shots at the hero, whose pictures he doesn't like anyway. After a lot of strictly comic confusion the maniac takes the star to his trick door museum, the girl follows, and a happy ending is worked out in a mad succession of terrifying incidents reminiscent of "Over the River, Charlie," "The Bat" and the Marx brothers.

The tempo is brisk, the staging more than adequate, and no loose ends are left dangling. Messrs. Oakie and Kennedy have the sort of assignments they are expected to have and give them all they've got. Incidental action reveals details of studio procedure possibly interesting in themselves to many.

War Lord

(Warner)

Melodrama

The parent idea of this production was Porter Emerson Browne's "The Bad Man." A few lineage characteristics are discernible in this differently conceived adaptation; nevertheless so much has been changed in characterizations and atmospheric detail that "War Lord" is thrill action as well as dramatic entertainment in its own right. However, the basic plot is similar. Even so it does not seem that it would be good showmanship to identify this attraction as kin to "The Bad Man." It is quite likely that persons who see the film will readily discover the relationship, without any efforts on the part of the exhibitor to call the fact to the attention of the customers.

Interior China is the locale and bandit activity constitutes the background. Though the theme is melodrama, there is sufficient comedy contrast. En route to an oil field, discovered by "Hallet," "Creed" and "Galt" encounter the first of a series of bizarre adventures. Temporarily charged with murder, they are freed and proceed to their destination. In a bandit menaced village, "Creed" discovers that his estranged wife "Jane" is in love with "Hallet." "General Wu Yen Fang" raids and captures the place and suspense prevails as he decides to keep "Jane" for himself. But when "Wu" remembers that "Hallet" is an old friend of his and "Creed" demonstrates that he is a worthless individual, the "General" changes his tactics. Putting down a rebellion in his own army, inspired by "Creed" for the purpose of getting rid of "Hallett," "Wu," personally, kills "Creed." Shortly after, regular Chinese troops arrive and execute "Wu," and with all menaces removed, there is only room for love and happiness for "Jane" and "Hallet."

An average thrill action adventure film, the picture lists among its showmanship qualities good acting on the part of the principals, an interesting locale for a lively story and a lot of excitement.

Previewed in Warner Beverly Theatre. A fair portion of the audience was satisfied with what it saw. There was a tendency on the part of those who remembered "The Bad Man" to indulge in comparisons. But those to whom the idea was new appeared to think that the preview was fair entertainment.—G. M.

Zamboanga

(Filippine Films)

Melodrama

Enacted by a native cast and lacking marquee names, "Zamboanga" is a distinct novelty. Its setting is that portion of the Malay Archipelago which is unfamiliar to American audiences, the smaller islands in the Sulu Sea between British North Borneo and the Philippines. It shows, woven into the story, the strange customs, the dances and the habits of the natives, portrayed by the inhabitants themselves. It shows, too, the practice of strong tribes raiding weaker ones to seize women for themselves. Although cast names are said in a foreword to be fictitious, there is an actual island of Zamboanga in the Sulu Sea and it is on this and a neighborboring isle, inhabited by Moro sea gypsies, that the story is laid.

Danao, head of the pearl divers of Zamboanga, which is ruled by Datu Tanbuong, is in love with the chief's daughter, Minda. Hadji Razul, the sea gypsies' ruler, and other chieftains of the neighboring isles, are invited to a celebration held because of the success of the fleet of vintas, the pearl boats. Hadji covets Minda and, while the Zamboanga divers are away on their next trip, comes with his men and kidnaps all the women, including Minda. Danao's divers, seeing an eclipse of the sun, believe that it is an ill omen, and hurry home. They speed to the neighboring island and overcome the gypsies, Danao overpowering Hadji in a fight on a high cliff overlooking a crocodile infested lagoon. Danao flings him to his death.

Strewn throughout the story are underwater shots of pearl diving, the seizure of a diver by a giant mollusk, and his rescue, a fight with a shark, as well as feast scenes in which two fighting carabeos (bulls) battle and natives dance in a style which resembles the Javanese.

In a prologue a narrator recites, in English, a poem about the island's allure, while scenes of native life appear in single montage shots. Then, before the story starts, about five minutes of added establishing scenes are given. Most of the dialogue is in English, and that which is in native tongue is interpreted by subtitles.

Hot Water

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy

The purpose of the "Jones Family" series is to provide operators playing to family audiences such entertainment as will satisfy that patron classification. The sponsors probably don't care a farthing if the pictures never are included in a deluxe or first run theatre program. They probably care less whether the smart upper strata, modern minded or intelligentsia, pay any attention to them. The record shows that the previous numbers in the series have been eminently satisfactory in the socalled family houses. Business office figures undoubtedly reveal that the films, in ratio to cost, are more profitable than many more expensively produced star-studded features. Consequently the showmanship of the series is its reputation.

Analyzed any way, "Hot Water" is average family entertainment. It contains much to engage the attention of average adults, adolescents and youngsters. This one is funnier, it seems, than any of its predecessors. Homey natural humor crops out in characterizations, situations, dialogue and action.

In initial theme, happy contentment is all "John Jones" desires for his family. But when he becomes a reformer mayoralty candidate what ensues is anything but peace and tranquility. By printing damning news, amateur publisher "Roger" adds fuel to the fury of an opposition that does not want to be reformed. Consequently gambler "Lynch" and minion "Mayor Roberts" frame thoughtless "Jack" into a fake scandal. All "Jones" wants to do is protect his boy and get out of the mess, no matter what happens to the civic virtue of the community, until "Roger" works a typical boy trick on shamming paralytic "Whittaker" to reveal "Lynch" and "Roberts" as the scoundrels they are, to have the voters hurl "Jones" into office by acclamation.

Previewed in the Uptown Theatre, Los Angeles, a theatre patronized by average family audiences. The reaction indicated that similar gatherings should not be disappointed in "Hot Water."—G. M.

The Toast of New York

(RKO Radio)

Historical Drama

Showmen directing their sales appeal primarily to the mature have opportunity here to remind customers of the mixed glory that was Jim Fisk's in the period following the Civil War and of the day, recalled again and again in 1929, that was written down in the financial history of the nation as Black Friday. "The Toast of New York" is the story of Jim Fisk, his rise from tin horn sport to Wall Street Titan, his market battle with Cornelius Vanderbilt and his attempt to corner the country's gold supply. It is also the story of his partners and the actress he sought to marry, and it is a painstaking reproduction of the New York of the period.

Edward Arnold, Cary Grant, Jack Oakie, Frances Farmer and Donald Meek have the principal roles. Although essentially melodrama dealing with tremendous national factors, the picture contains a good deal of incidental comedy. At no point is attempt made to underscore vices or virtues of the characters and no conclusions are drawn.

Jim Fisk is introduced as a medicine show impresario in the South at the outbreak of the Civil War. Sending one of his two partners North to open an office, he takes the other with him into the South and for four years smuggles cotton at an immense profit, which vanishes when the Northern partner invests it in Confederate bonds. Bluffing with these, he contrives to obtain a controlling interest in the Erie railroad and dispose of it at a profit of a half million dollars. Operating in the market with this stake, he becomes famous as a financial wizard and his wealth multiplies. He falls in love with an actress, who accepts his gifts and his backing in a show, although in love with and loved by his partner, and when his depredations bring poverty to small investors the press attacks him. At the opening of the show he is publicly denounced and determines forthwith to corner the country's gold supply and raise himself beyond the reach of criticism. His partner joins forces with Vanderbilt and opposes him in this move, but only the intervention of the federal government thwarts him. A mob marches on his house and he is killed by an assassin's bullet.

The Edward Small production is based on "Book of Daniel Drew," by Bouck White, and "Robber Barons," by Matthew Josephson, sources no doubt accountable for much of the veracious setting, costuming, deportment and impedimenta which are outstanding qualifications of the picture. Early New York scenes, the stock exchange, the Astor Hotel and a hideout resort in New Jersey are especially notable in this regard.

Topper

(MGM-Roach)

Comedy

Names and novelty are self-evident sales assets of "Topper." On the first count there are those of Roland Young, Constance Bennett, Cary Grant, Billie Burke, Eugene Pallette, Arthur Lake and J. Farrell MacDonald. That of Hal Roach, who has given the picture a setting lavish far in excess of his wont, also commands marquee consideration. On the novelty count there are the frankly fantastic story, the extraordinarily effective uses of lens legerdemain and the total disregard of such commonly accredited finalities as life, death and time. To the widely read, mention of Thorne Smith's name as author of the book will be amply enlightening in this connection.

The picture employs for altogether comic purposes certain supernaturalities dealt with profitably and otherwise in previous productions of more serious intent. Some of these were "Earthbound," "Berkeley Square," "The Return of Peter Grimm" and, in a technical sense, "The Invisible Man." The primary premise, identical with that of "Earthbound," is that the dead are granted a brief period in which to do on earth whatever good deeds they may have overlooked doing in life and that their ultimate destiny is conditioned by their success or lack of it in these undertakings. This essentially somber thesis is attacked gleefully by all hands and the picture is without a serious moment, the devices of humor ranging from scintillating dialogue to resounding slapstick.

The story sets up the name character as a wealthy, but henpecked banker whose principal stockholder and his wife are wild young sophisticates living from drink to drink. They die in a motor wreck and return, in the flesh or invisibly at will, to accomplish as their redeeming deed the domestic emancipation of Topper. Their appearances and disappearances in hotels, restaurants, streets, automobiles, elevators, with and without the more or less consenting objective of their ministrations, creates fights, panics and general consternation. When they have ac-

Roland Young's assignment as the bank president is tailored to his measure. Cary Grant and Constance Bennett portray the abandoned young stockholders, before and after death, with great gusto. Billie Burke plays a society wife characteristically. Alan Mowbray disposes of a butler assignment artfully and Eugene Pallette enacts a house detective with the throttle wide open. The scene is New York, the time the present, the tempo brisk, the manner swank, the purpose first, last and always, to amuse.

Silver Blaze

(Twickenham - Associated British)

Detective Melodrama

One of the "Sherlock Holmes" stories of the late Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, there is the specialized appeal indicated by that fact. It is faithful to the atmosphere of the original and there is a really remarkable portrait of Holmes by Arthur Wontner, whose physical resemblance to the traditional figure is almost uncanny. The special—and sometimes, perhaps, specious—methods of deduction employed by the famous detective are presented cleverly and amusingly, and that "Elementary, my dear Watson" is heard frequently, sometimes with unconscious irony.

For the many admirers of the Doyle character there are obvious entertainment values and equally obvious ways of exploiting them through book tieups. In the great sleuth's fondness for tobacco and his addiction to a deer-stalker cap are other suggestions and the racing scenes, turning on the disguise of a horse by paint, also appear to be good exploitation opportunities. It is, in fact, a showman's picture in any place where the character is popular, and the English accent of the dialogue is not a drawback.

Holmes and Dr. Watson, on a week's visit to Sir Henry Baskerville, in Devon, are interested by the mysterious disappearance of the horse "Silver Blaze," a few days before the big race for which he is favorite. The stable-boy, sleeping in his box, has been poisoned. The trainer is found killed on the moor. Suspected is Trevor, nephew of Sir Henry, who is known to be in debt and to have backed another horse. Holmes establishes that the trainer poisoned the stable-lad and was himself killed by a kick from the horse while attempting to lame it. Holmes finds "Silver Blaze" hidden in the near-by stable in which the second favorite is sheltered; it has been found wandering on the moor.

From other clues Holmes realizes that the chief mover in the crime has been Moriarty, the master-criminal who is his chief enemy. Moriarty scores the next point; one of his men shoots Silver Blaze with a silent air-gun just when it is winning its race. That saves the money of the big layer who, standing to lose £100,000 on the horse, has employed Moriarty to stop it, but it leads to Moriarty's downfall. Dr. Watson follows the gang's car to London, is captured and carried to their lair in a disused "Tube" station. When Moriarty is about to throw him down the elevator shaft, the doors open to reveal Holmes and the police waiting in the elevator, put in order by the railway company.

Apart from Wontner, there is a good picture of Dr. Watson from Ian Fleming, but the rest of the support is moderate, Lyn Harding's Moriarty being very melodramatic.

The Shadow Strikes

(Grand National)

Murder Mystery

A trail at least has been opened for the exhibitor by the development of the character, The Shadow, in printer's ink and radio voice, through the Street and Smith publishing house. Readers and hearers of the magazine and radio character, created by Maxwell Grant, must number in the six rows of figures.

For names there are Rod LaRoque and Kenneth Harlan. LaRocque, who first appeared upon the screen in 1919, according to Motion Picture Almanac, has also several bulky scrapbooks of notices from stage performances, if he keeps such things. Recently he completed a series of pictures in London. Harlan came to the screen even before LaRocque, in 1917, with Constance Talmadge in "Betsy's Burglar," and was on the stage at 7 in "More Than Queen," starring Julia Arthur.

A newcomer in "The Shadow Strikes" is Lynn Anders, fittingly brunette of feature as is the title character of the film feature. Other names are Walter McGrail, James Blakely, Norman Ainsley and John Carnavale.

"The Shadow's" one ambition is to discover the identity of the slayers of his father. After that cue to the theme he proceeds to interrupt a pair of safecrackers in an attorney's room and assumes the name of the attorney when the captain of detectives (Harlan) arrives. A call for the attorney's services leads him into the unraveling of the mystery of two murders and a brush with gangsters. While the story dashes this way and that, at times smoothly connected, sometimes shifting abruptly, in the climax a fresh note is achieved when the plotting caretaker and the vengeful mobster shoot it out in the Shadow's apartment. The bullet from the gangster's pistol matches the one with which the Shadow started out.

The romantic element, slight in footage and slighter in exposition, is taken care of by Miss Anders.

The sparse comment in any direction after the New York pre-showing in a projection room indicated acceptability without enthusiasm.—E. A. R.

The Thirteen

(Amkino)

Outdoor Adventure

With a plot reminiscent of that of the "The Lost Patrol," "The Thirteen" is a well photographed film depicting the endurance, presence of mind, and all-sacrificing loyalty of 11 members of the Red Army, and as such falls into the groove of Soviet propaganda pictures.

Ten of the 11 men are en route home, having completed their service in the Army. A prefactory note explains they are joined by a post commander, on a leave of absence, his wife, and an old geologist.

The picture opens with shots of the 13 plying their way on horseback over the Soviet deserts of Central Asia. Their water supply is low, super-imposed subtitles in English relate, and their immediate objective is a nearby water hole. Upon arrival there, though, the 13 find the well has been filled with sand. The post commander takes charge and decides the travelers must attempt to reach the next well rather than turn back.

Trouble arises almost immediately. An Afghanistan sandstorm whips about them. They stumble onward until they find refuge in an old oasis, but the well there is almost dry and in it are stored two machine guns "of foreign make." The oasis, it turns out, is the haven of desert bandits whose leader has been sought by the Red Army for more than a year.

When the chief returns to the oasis to obtain water for his men and horses he is met by the machine gun fire of the soldiers. Their plan is to hold the bandit leader at the oasis by making him believe water is plentiful and, in the meantime, dispatch one of their members to the nearest outpost for aid.

By the time the help arrives all but one of the oasis defenders have been shot.

The picture is a lively adventure film which might hold audiences that are willing to disregard injections of Soviet propaganda.

Reviewed at the Cameo Theatre, the chief New York home of similar Soviet pictures, in the late afternoon. The small audience, mostly men, accepted the showing without audible enthusiasm or comment.—Ray Barnett.

"...Said O'Reilly to McNab"

(Gainsborough-G.-B.)

Farce Comedy

Comedy, expressed in situation, in dialogue, and in most diverting characterization, here is all the time on the edge of farce without once falling over into absurdity. If American audiences can savor the full richness of Will Fyffe's picture of a canny Scottish business man, up against the alien but equal cuteness of Will Mahoney's American "con" man, it is a first-class booking for any American exhibitor. As they liked Lauder your side, there seems no reason why Fyffe, similar but much more subtle, should not go over. That apart, there is much humor of plot and incident which is independent of dialogue, and William Beaudine has directed it with American speed.

It has something of the "Cohens and Kellys" appeal in the picture of the two men, of different nationality and mentality, waging a battle of wits without quarter given or taken, but all the time building up a mutual liking which is shown to be very strong indeed when the test comes. The interplay of Scottish "pawkiness" and American shrewdness is the essence of the piece, but it is not all verbal. A golf match between the couple, each concealing championship form at the first hole, until the big bet is on, is a very funny piece of action comedy, as universally understandable as Chaplin.

Timothy O'Reilly, an Irish-American confidence man, thinks it wise to get out of New York before the police pick him up in connection with shady deals in land, mines, and some other things. He sails for England, with his secretary, and looks up his son, Terry, who, in Scotland, has fallen in love with Mary, daughter of Malcomb McNab, wealthy retired business man, and incidentally has talked about his rich American father.

O'Reilly, aided by fortunate accident, succeeds in impressing McNab with his financial resources, which actually are on the point of exhaustion. By faking a weighing machine he persuades Mrs. McNab that he has reduced her five pounds overnight by means of a pill which he has invented. The pill is actually a candy stolen from McNab's schoolboy son, who thereafter blackmails the American on the strength of his knowledge of the truth, but by means of pretended offers from America, O'Reilly persuades McNab to back a company to market the pill.

It is a huge commercial success and when, at a New Year's party, McNab formally announces the engagement of his daughter to O'Reilly's son, the adventurer thinks his schemes have succeeded to perfection. At this stage, the young McNab blurts out the truth and simultaneously two police officers arrive from Washington to collect O'Reilly, revealing that he was the promoter of a fake mine in which McNab lost $5,000. On the liner, a cable message secures his release; McNab has paid off all the claims—making it plain that the cash is to be deducted from O'Reilly's share of the pill business.

Will Fyffe's characterization is the big talking point. Mahoney is a ready-made value; he wisecracks crisply and puts over his comedy dance, at the New Year's party, in great form. All the support is adequate and Beaudine's direction hasn't missed a point.

Viewed at the Harrogate CEA Conference and at the Adelphi Theatre preview in London. It was a riot at both places.—B. A.

Warners to Hold Test Previews In 31 Key Cities

Warner Brothers will hold a series of test previews August 9th and 10th in 31 key cities.

Motion picture exhibitors will attend the preview showings but in addition representatives of civic, church and educational agencies will be invited to sit in and to answer questionnaires, indicating the type of entertainment they prefer.

"In a sense, the exhibitions are an advance display of product comparable to the annual automobile shows or the trade shows of national manufacturers," Gradwell L. Sears, executive in charge of distribution, said. "But more than that we hope that our first step into a field never before explored by the film industry will result in a scientific answer to the question which always plagues producers, 'what sort of picture does the public want'."

Eight pictures have been selected for the series. According to Mr. Sears they include one biographical, two musicals, one tragedy, two comedies and two melodramas.

Various short subjects to be released during the 1937-'38 season also will be previewed with the feature films.

The eight features are "The Story of Emile Zola," "They Won't Forget," "It's Love I'm After," "That Certain Woman," "Mr. Dodd Takes the Air," "Varsity Show," "The Perfect Specimen," and "Confession."

The cities are Albany, Boston, Buffalo, New Haven, New York, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Washington, Chicago, Des Moines, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Omaha, St. Louis, Atlanta, Charlotte, Dallas, Kansas City, Memphis, New Orleans, Oklahoma City, Denver, Los Angeles, Portland, Salt Lake City, San Francisco and Seattle.

LABOR ASKED TO STRIKE AT U.S. THEATRES SHOWING NAZI PICTURES

American Jewish Congress Requests American Federation to Aid in Boycott of Films Made by Nazis in Europe

As a climactic touch to its drive against film companies connected or considered by the organization to be connected in any way with the German government, the Joint Boycott Council of the American Jewish Congress and the Jewish Labor Committee has appealed to the American Federation of Labor for cooperation.

In a communication to William Green, president of the Federation, the council asked that strikes be called among projectionists employed in houses where boycotted films are shown.

The action followed the council charge that it had come into possession of documentary evidence that 50 per cent of the Tobis Sascha Company of Vienna is under Nazi control.

Although no direct reply has been received from Mr. Green, Dr. Robert Marcus, assistant to the chairman of the council, Dr. Joseph Tenenbaum, said he has been advised through the council's actions committee that Mr. Green is considering the request. A reply is expected within the next few days, Dr. Marcus added.

Dr. Marcus also said: "We have reason to believe" French Tobis is associated with German Tobis and the German government, but to date, Dr. Marcus said, no documentary evidence has been obtained. However, French Tobis productions are on the boycott list, he said, because they are distributed by American Tobis.

All films handled by American Tobis, he continued, are boycotted on the ground it distributes pictures from Tobis Sascha.

W. J. Van Beveren, head of American Tobis, said he has apprised officers of International Tobis of the council's action. In a letter to MOTION PICTURE HERALD he explained his stand as follows:

"In reply to your request to make a statement re the accusations of the Jewish Boycott Committee, I beg to inform you that I have cables from my head office in Amsterdam proving to me that their accusations are false.

"As the Jewish Boycott Committee does not believe statements made by me and by my office in Amsterdam, I am now awaiting official documentary proofs from Europe; as those proofs have to be supplied by the French, Austrian and Dutch governments, it is obvious that this takes time.

"For this reason, I have no further statements to make at this time."

Mr. Van Beveren released one of the cablegrams he stated he received from Amsterdam. The message:

"Your yesterday's cable we state emphatically that Films Sonores (French Tobis) has no connection with German Tobis relative to profits or dividends stop we will approach American attache in Paris and will draw up all documents in agreement with him."

Dr. Marcus said investigators have been instructed to determine whether the Holland organization is "just a paper concern."

While awaiting a reply from Mr. Green, the council has forwarded letters to distributors of foreign films, asking they cooperate by not handling pictures that carry the "Nazi stigma." Dr. Marcus said similar letters will be sent to exhibitors in whose theatres foreign films are shown.

Among the distributors who have pledged their support, Dr. Marcus said, are Du World, European, Garrison Films, Franco American, J. H. Hoffberg, Inter-Continent, Kinematrade, Jean Lenauer and Metropolis.

"Daily mass picketing will be organized in front of movie houses which exhibit boycotted pictures," Dr. Marcus said.

The council used its announcement of a boycott against Tobis film companies as the main story in the latest issue of its official publication.

"According to information contained in a letter received from the United States Department of Commerce by Mr. Matty Radin, chairman of the Film Trade of the Joint Boycott Council, 50 per cent of the Tobis Sascha organization of Vienna is under the control of the German Government," the article stated. "In its communication, the Department of Commerce states that the source of its information is a report received from its commercial attache in Vienna, Mr. Gardiner Richardson.

"For the past several months, representatives of the American Tobis Corp. had contended that Tobis Sascha and German Tobis were subsidiaries of the International Tobis of Amsterdam, Holland, and that all profits resulting from the distribution of their productions by American Tobis accrued to the benefit of the parent organization in Holland.

"This statement was at variance with reports published in the daily press that German Tobis as well as all other German companies are under the control of the German Government, and that the UFA and Tobis organizations have been combined into a single coordinating group.

"Upon being apprised by the Council of its action concerning the Tobis organizations, the management of the Roosevelt Theatre, Houston Street, New York City, immediately "pulled" La Kermesse Heroique (Carnival in Flanders)."

The Berlin dispatch mentioned in the article in connection with French Tobis, Dr. Marcus said, was published in the New York Times March 22nd.

REWRITING IN SOVIET CALLED CAPITALISTIC

Alexi Tolstoy, Soviet playwright and novelist, has attacked the practice of Mosfilm, largest studio in Russia, "of insisting on rewriting scenarios, like any capitalistic firm, without the author's consent," according to a copyrighted dispatch from Moscow in the New York Herald Tribune.

Fourteen Soviet playwrights, film writers and composers, according to the dispatch, earned more than 10,000 rubles a month during 1936, while the average wage of all workers in Russia has been estimated officially at 230 rubles a month.

German Consular Offices Profess Ignorance of Move to Bring Nazi Pictures to Circuit of U. S. German Houses

The German Consular's office in New York was silent this week about published reports that the Nazis are already working on the establishment of a circuit of theatres in this country to show German films, which now are virtually ostracized, except in the few remote old German residential sections as of New York, Chicago, Milwaukee.

That the Nazi Government, from the National Socialist Party headquarters in Berlin, is now establishing a chain of motion picture theatres in the United States to show their films exclusively, was reported by Ludwig Lore in an article titled, "What Are American Nazis Doing?" which appears in The Nation.

Describing what he calls "Nazi propaganda at large" in this country, Mr. Lore asserted, "Nazi films picturing the Third Reich in its various activities are released to German societies for a purely nominal fee. Hans Munz, who is a member both of the American Nazi group and of the German National Socialist Party, directs the German theatre 'Deutsche Schauspielbuehne,' which is to conduct German cultural (Nazi) propaganda in various parts of the United States. Josef Danner in Pittsburgh is engaged in similar work."

An "assistant" at the German Consul office in New York this week refused to comment on the report that his Government was launching, or already had inaugurated, a chain of motion picture theatres in American key cities as reported by Mr. Lore. The consulate did admit, however, that Herr Munz had arrived in America, but "for a lecture tour." His headquarters were said to be at an address on 86th Street in the heart of New York's German quarter, Yorkville, by the legation officer, who also suggested that all attempts at communication with Herr Munz be made through the mails. Subsequent visits to the Yorkville address also confirmed the Consul's statement that Herr Munz "only went there for his mail," with the last call getting the reply that "Herr Munz is out of town."

More than 20 schools for German children have also been reported founded in America recently in several states, including New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Texas and California, where, it is said, German motion pictures will be an important part of the curriculum of each institution.

When the proposed circuit of German theatres is completed, it is expected that the theatres, now said to number 19 in all, will be located in such towns as New York, Chicago, Detroit, Milwaukee, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Philadelphia, Washington, Boston, Kansas City, San Francisco, Newark and Houston.

Former Partners Bid for Springer's Share in 22 Houses

Activity in New York theatres this week was confined to former partners' negotiations for the late Jack W. Springer's interest in 22 Springer & Cocalis theatres and acquisitions by Loew's of a 15-year lease for the Dyckman, Washington Heights theatre.

Several partners, including Sam Cocalis, are understood to be interested in the purchase of Mr. Springer's share in the circuit, but successful negotiation by Mr. Cocalis would give him control. George P. Skouras recently completed conferences leading to acquisition of the 77th Street, Carlton, Olympia, Stoddard, Thalia, and Symphony theatres from the Springer estate, although the date when he will assume management has not been announced.

The Dyckman, which falls into Loew hands Friday, having been purchased from Sam Silver, will be closed until Labor Day to permit alterations and remodeling of the interior. Loew's new theatre on Boston Road also will open Labor Day. In Brooklyn, the circuit recently gave Randforce a seven-year extension of operating agreement on the Alhambra.

Consolidated Films Lists $335,483 Earnings

Consolidated Film Industries has announced earnings of $335,483 for the first five months of this year, yielding a dividend of 83 cents per share on preferred stock outstanding. Declaration of preferred dividends has been withheld, however, pending approval by the chancellor of Delaware on the proposed recapitalization plan.

Further hearings on the plan will be opened shortly, it was explained in a letter to stockholders. In earlier hearings, issuance of certificates of amendment had been denied on the ground that the recapitalization plan was invalid.

Chicago Press Agents Elect Louis Abramson

Louis L. Abramson was elected president of Chicago Amusement Publicists Association last week at a summer meeting.

United Theatres Has New House

United Theatres has just completed construction of a new 1,100-seat house at Caguos, West Indies, and is building a 1,000-seat house at Guayamá, David Gould, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer manager in Puerto Rico, said when he arrived in New York for medical treatment.

In addition, United is contemplating a number of other houses to add to the 18 which it now operates.

Other building activity in the West Indies, Mr. Gould reported, includes four new units just built by the Marti interests.

CHANCE GAME RETURN DEBATED IN CHICAGO

Illinois Manager Absolved of Lottery Charge; "Guarantee Clubs" Facing Inquiry

Controversies over chance games continued throughout the country this week with special attention being directed toward Chicago, where Bank Night officials, taking advantage of a ruling in Rock Island County, Ill., have begun conferences for the return of the games by September.

The Rock Island ruling was a jury's decision that Isadore Brotman, manager of the Paradise in Moline, Ill., was not guilty of operating a lottery when his theatre took part in a chance game drawing. The action was a test case brought by F. C. King, state attorney, after adoption of an anti-Bank Night law by the Illinois legislature.

In New York, the question of independent theatres eliminating chance games arose again when executives of Loew's and RKO admitted they were prepared to halt the practice if independent theatres in competing situations would follow their lead. Loew's and RKO recently reinstated the games with the announcement that the action resulted from "insistent demands" of patrons.

A new turn to the Bank Night question came in Oklahoma when Owen J. Watt, assistant attorney general, was ordered to determine whether "guarantee clubs" are a violation of the lottery laws. The club guarantees, for a 25 cent fee, that it will pay the amount of the Bank Night award to any patron who is not present at the theatre when his name is called. Each guarantee also includes a ticket to the theatre.

Although the Iowa legislature failed to adopt a bill to eliminate Bank Night, the game may yet be banned under a measure intended for control of pin ball and slot machines. The attorney general's office has not yet issued an opinion as to whether the word "device" in the bill will include "something worked out for exhibition or show."

A blow to proponents of chance games was delivered in Montgomery, Ala., when the state court of appeals held operation of "jackpots" in Alabama is illegal. The decision affirmed a $200 fine imposed upon Cecil B. Grimes, exhibitor, of Tuscaloosa, after he was convicted of operating a lottery.

Franklin E. Reagan, assistant attorney general in Jefferson City, Mo., ruled the game "Win-O," conducted in a Crocker theatre, is a lottery.

Promoters of Buck-Nite, a variation of Bank Night, were refused application for trade mark registration in Wisconsin.

Tri-State Theatres Corporation closed the Majestic theatre in Fairbury, Neb., as a result of a supreme court injunction granted against Bank Night. Meanwhile, Everett Cummings, Tri-State Theatres Manager, visited Denver in an attempt to find a substitute for Bank Night.

O. C. Wybrandt, district judge at Woodward, Okla., ruled in favor of the Woodward Amusement Company, defendant in an action brought by Mrs. E. M. Morrison to collect $100 she claimed was due her at a Bank Night drawing.

STAGE NAMES UNDER ATTACK

Public performers having assumed names will be barred from appearing in Massachusetts, if a bill planned for introduction in the state legislature becomes reality.

State Representative Francis X. Coyne intends to sponsor a measure compelling "movie people as well" to use their real names "and not phoney ones to deceive the public." "If my bill is passed," said Coyne, "we won't have any more of the entertainers who come to us in the names of nobility to hide the fact that they were born in Brooklyn or in sight of the New York elevated."

Two Cities Added To List of Union Exchange Centers

Wage and hour agreements went into effect in exchanges in Dallas and Milwaukee this week following the conclusion of negotiations between officials of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and representatives of distributing companies in New York last Saturday. A total of 16 exchange centers are now operating under union agreements.

John Gatelee and Richard Walsh represented the IATSE at the distributor meetings. Cities for which agreements were concluded previously are Kansas City, Indianapolis, Denver, Des Moines, Albany, Oklahoma City, Cincinnati, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Boston, New Haven, Cleveland, Charlotte and Washington.

Felix Snow, IATSE representative in Kansas City, was in New York this week to discuss a revision of the exchange employees' agreement set for the territory some weeks ago.

When negotiations are completed with all exchange unions distribution representatives are expected to discuss contract terms with newly organized unions representing white collar workers in exchanges, including bookers, stenographers, clerks and cashiers. Members of the United Office and Professional Workers of America have made several attempts to organize such employees.

A sitdown strike of office workers in the Universal exchange in Philadelphia was settled on Tuesday by home office representatives. Raises were granted and the matter of union recognition was referred to a board of arbitration.

IN COURTS

Claim Against RKO Reduced by Court

The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals further reduced the $507,500 claim of the Fort Worth Property, Inc., against the Irving Trust Company, trustees of RKO in reorganization, to $3,737. The court ruled that Fort Worth's failure to give RKO formal notice before renting the theatre to another tenant invalidated the plaintiff's claim.

The claim, which is based upon RKO's guarantee of a 25-year lease to the RKO Southern Corporation, was allowed in U. S. District Court at $17,139, but both sides appealed.

Paramount Defers Reply

Mutual agreement resulted in the postponement of Paramount's reply to the action brought by A. Ella Heyan, a stockholder, demanding enjoinment of the new employment contract for Adolph Zukor.

Paramount will file its answer some time in August.

Sues Twentieth Century-Fox

Charging that "The Road to Glory" was plagiarized from a play which he had written and submitted to the company in 1935, Robert H. Sheets of Jackson, Tenn., brought suit against Twentieth Century-Fox in District of Columbia Federal Court last week, demanding $1,000,000 in damages.

Miss Bennett's Suit Begins

Opening arguments on Constance Bennett's suit against Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, playwrights, for damages suffered from alleged breach of contract were heard in the Supreme Court this week. Miss Bennett charges that the playwrights' failure to deliver a script, allegedly contracted for, prevented her from doing other work and entitles her to damages to $62,500.

Defer Sherman Hearing

Hearings on a petition urging confirmation of a referee's report advocating that Harry Sherman, former president of Local 306, return $150,960 which allegedly belonged to the union were adjourned.

Consolidated Hearings Deferred

The suit brought against Consolidated Film Industries by N. I. Johnson, a stockholder, who demanded injunction against wiping out of dividends on preferred stock, will have its final hearings in September in Chancery Court, Wilmington, Del. A preliminary injunction has been granted and upheld by the Supreme Court.

Pathe Tax Suit Withdrawn

The Government's suit against Pathe Exchange, Inc., for 1927 income tax deficiency of $13,781 was withdrawn on settlement by the contestants. The amount of the settlement was not disclosed.

Colombia favored the U. S. heavily in motion picture imports last year, having purchased 86 per cent of its equipment and 75 per cent of its film from this country.

Court Dismisses Terry-Toon Suit

The complaint brought by Frank Moser against Paul Terry, Terry-Toons, Inc., E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Films, William Weiss and others was dismissed by Judge Aldrich in the supreme court in White Plains. The action requested cancellation of the contract under which Mr. Moser sold to Mr. Terry his interest in Terry-Toons and charged Mr. Hammons with fraud.

In February, 1936, Mr. Hammons notified Terry and Moser that their contract for the distribution of Terry-Toons would not be renewed on its expiration that summer. Mr. Moser then sold his interest to Mr. Terry and brought action, charging conspiracy, when Hammons later decided to renew the contract with Terry. Mr. Weiss was accused of being a party to the conspiracy alleged.

In his decision, Judge Aldrich said that the charge was not sustained by evidence. "(Hammons') statement . . . that the contract would not be renewed represented an honest expression of his then existing belief. . . . The mere fact that later, through altered circumstances, he reached a different conclusion about it does not change the fact that he made no fraudulent representation. . . ."

Speaking of the signatories to the contract, the judge said: "Each accomplished what he desired to accomplish. . . . Each of these parties made his bargain in good faith and at arm's length and with full knowledge of the situation as it then appeared to exist."

Roxy Plan Endangered

The proposed reorganization plan of the Roxy was threatened this week when it was revealed at hearings before Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey in U. S. district court that the required two-thirds consent of the second-mortgage bondholders, measured in terms of holdings, fell short by $50,000.

Carlos Israel, attorney for the Pound Bondholders Protective Committee, pointed out that first-mortgage bondholders holding $2,405,941 of the bonds had consented and that this was $9,000 in excess of the two-thirds required. Mr. Carlos intimated that failure of sufficient consent by next week will encourage him to foreclose on first mortgages, thus destroying the equity of bondholders and subordinate creditors.

Judge Caffey denied as premature the petition of Roemer-Kenny Company and George M. Garsson for recognition of the brokers who effected the sale of the Roxy to 20th Century-Fox. The brokers' motion was for $50,952 which they allege is due them for brokerage fees.

If 20th Century-Fox management should be approved, it is expected that Harry Arthur will continue to operate the Roxy, with the Skouras interests assisting in some managerial role.

The Animal Films act, a measure aiming to restrict the manner in which animals may be treated on the British screen, passed a second reading in Parliament last week.

QUALITY CLAUSE REPORTED DOOMED AS BRITISH SENTIMENT CRYSTALIZES

Exhibitors and Distributors Object to Quota Scale; American Companies Want "Fewer and Better" Rules

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

The Board of Trade has now received from all sections of the British industry the comments which it invited on its draft scheme of a new Films Act. The Government proposals were given in detail in the June 26th issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

No official statements have been issued either by the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries (producers) or by the Kinematograph Renters Society (distributors) as to the exact form of their memoranda. The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association has published in full its letter to the Board of Trade. Similar publicity has been given to the statement submitted by the informal association of Independent Producers and Distributors, which came into being to deal with this matter.

It is known that the Film Group is generally in favor of the Board of Trade suggestions, and that it also sponsors the inclusion of a scheme of optional reciprocity, giving American companies the opportunity of contracting out of quota by buying British films for United States release.

The KRS, which is understood to have made verbal representations, adheres in chief to the policy which it submitted to the Moyne Committee. The essence of this suggestion is that American companies should be free to make a few big pictures in England, in place of the many demanded by a footage quota, so long as the total amount expended would be the same in each instance.

KRS Proposals

The KRS criticizes the suggested commencing quota of 20 per cent distributors and 15 per cent exhibitors, and suggests it should be 10 and 5 percent. It also objects to the "double quota" provision in its present form, which ranks a picture costing £45,000 ($225,000) as of twice the quota value of one costing £15,000 ($75,000). It believes the concession of increased quota value should be in proportion to cost. Assuming a minimum £15,000 cost, a £45,000 picture should count as three for quota and there should be no top limit. A distributor should be free to spend up to £100,000, if necessary, and to get quota concession to the full amount, the KRS holds.

Recognizing that general adoption of a better picture policy would affect output, the KRS is understood to assent to the CEA demand that any "double quota" or greater exemption applied to any picture shall also extend to the exhibitor showing it.

The CEA's Reaction

The KRS and the CEA are in agreement as to the necessity for a lower quota, the exhibitor body asking for a commencing figure of 15/10 per cent, but are in opposition in regard to the basic principle on which the quota should be based. The KRS accepts the minimum cost principle put forward by the Board of Trade. So does the Film Group. The C.E.A. reiterates its demand for a quality test or viewing committee. The Independent Producers and Distributors advocate an entirely new form of quota, described later, based on the relative bookings obtained on British and on imported films.

In all the foregoing references it should be understood that the KRS speaks only for its American members, that the Film Group represents the distributors of British films ordinarily classed with the KRS, as well as its own members, and that the big circuits are in dissent from the CEA policy and, generally, in accord with the KRS.

In its letter to the Board of Trade, the CEA makes no comment on the official proposal for a separate Quota on short subjects or on the suggestion that the present Advisory Committee should be continued; it may be assumed to accept these clauses of the Draft. It criticizes practically every other suggestion adversely, beginning with an expression of regret that the association's evidence to the Moyne Committee, "and that committee's recommendation in favor of a quality test," has been disregarded.

"Your proposals for a cost test," says the letter, "have been again very fully considered at the Summer Conference of this association, where they have aroused the keenest apprehension as to restriction of our imported supplies.

"Exhibitors rely upon a considerable number of imported films which gross for the renters sums varying from £2,000 to £8,000. [$10,000 to $40,000]. It is common knowledge that a renter likes to work upon a 10 per cent profit basis. Under your proposals, a renter, in order to import four films which may gross £10,000 [$50,000] in all (a profit of £1,000) must acquire one British film costing a minimum of £15,000. . . . Renters will not regard such a proposition as business-like and will limit their imports to those films which gross larger sums."

Fear Cost Clause

The letter proceeds that exhibitors are compelled to offer most strenuous opposition to the cost clause, because they fear for their livelihood. "It is important that you should realize that this is the basis of the opposition from members of this association," it says.

Criticism is next offered of the suggested initial quota of 20 per cent distributors and 15 exhibitors. It is urged that "the present resources of personnel and organization of British film studios" are inadequate to this scale and that "American renters would inevitably default."

"We would reiterate our view that the commencing figure should be 15/10, which is further confirmed by the prospective reduction in supplies consequent upon a cost clause," says the CEA.

Further urged is that "the basis of legislation should be to provide a sufficiency of supply for the competitive centres in large areas of population, where there are at least five, and in many instances six or seven, cinemas competing for films. It is in these large centres that the main business of the cinema industry is done. . . . Legislation is going to be successful according to how it meets the conditions of the large and competitive centres."

Fear Reduced Film Supplies

The objection is made to the "double quota" provision that it would still further reduce available film supplies and make the distributors' quota 10 per cent while that on exhibitors remained at 15 per cent. It is suggested that any film counted twice for distributors' quota should also count twice for exhibitors' quota "or that the reduction of available supplies inevitably ensuing should be taken into account when the figure of exhibitors' quota is finally calculated."

On the proposal that the quota should rise to 30/25 per cent in ten years, the CEA comment is:

"The ratio of 3 to 2 should be followed in any ascending scale. We have no reason to suppose that any scale imposed upon producers and renters will produce more than a minimum of films.

"The original idea was that once a British film industry was given a start it would go ahead upon its own momentum and sweep foreign films before it. The present sad plight of British production leaves us to be exploited and we do not want a repetition."

Optional Reciprocity Proposed

The following comment is made on the possible provision for a scheme of reciprocity on an optional basis:

"If a practical scheme can be evolved which encourages British production we are in sympathy with those objects. We cannot, however, recognize in the scheme which was outlined to us briefly by your officials any real reciprocity on this basis; it appeared to us to be rather a scheme whereby foreign renters would be able to purchase certificates exempting them from the necessity of acquiring British quota.

"We think also another serious objection to

LAUGHTON, POMMER QUIT KORDA AND UA

Erich Pommer and Charles Laughton have broken with Alexander Korda and United Artists. It was officially revealed today that Associated British Pictures has made a substantial investment in Mayflower Pictures Corporation, and that John Maxwell had joined Pommer and Laughton on the board of directors. Under the arrangement, both of the latter will share in the profits.

Associated British, the Maxwell company, will handle all distribution for the new company, which will produce at Elstree in whatever space is available at that studio.

Three pictures already are set for production, and planned for world release. They are Somerset Maugham's "The Vessel of Wrath," Clemence Dane's original, "St. Martin's Lane," and "Jamaica" by Daphne Du Maurier. Shooting will start the first week in August. Mr. Laughton will star in each of the three films and Mr. Pommer will be the producer.

In a speech at a press reception at the Savoy, Mr. Maxwell emphasized Mr. Pommer's value in helping to build up British production.

ASK SPECIAL AID FOR INDEPENDENTS

that scheme is the difficulty of avoiding collussion.

"Until something more practical is evolved we shall continue to object."

The association criticizes the provision for three-yearly revision of the quota and cost clause, arguing for yearly revision, and it devotes extended consideration to the proposal that films costing less than the statutory minimum shall be eligible for quota registration on the ground of "special exhibition value."

It suggests that the proposal is workable if the Board of Trade policy is to refuse an American distributor the right to submit "cheap" British films as cover for his imports while allowing a British producer registration for a reasonably entertaining film "which he needs in order to import a number of cheaper American pictures which so many of our cinemas need." Otherwise, it says, safeguards will be necessary for small British producers and independent renters of foreign films of low earning capacity, who would be put out of business by the £15,000 minimum.

"The expensive American films are handled by the major companies. The safeguards available for the smaller firms must not provide a loophole for the larger companies, otherwise the whole scheme will break down once more."

Dominion Film Problem

The CEA also expresses disquiet at the fact that films made in the British Dominions automatically rank for British quota. "We do not think the operation of a cost clause provides any safeguard," says the statement. Danger also is seen in "the very decided possibility of American companies producing in the Dominion of Canada," and the suggestion is made that "all Dominion and Colonial films should be required to be submitted to the Advisory Committee if they are to rank for renter's quota."

On the proposal that all films except newsreels and commercial advertisements shall be eligible for quota, it is suggested that it should apply only to shorts and that scenic films or films with an "undue proportion" of scenic elements should be excluded. "Scenics are of no use to our studios and would provide an easy way of evasion."

Wants Overbuilding Solved

Finally, the CEA emphasizes that the Board of Trade draft proposals deal only with certain aspects of legislation and do not express the Government's views on other matters referred to in the so-called Moyne Report.

"The protection and establishment of a flourishing British film industry not only calls for legislation in favor of producers but correspondingly for the continuation of a flourishing exhibition side," it says, in an argument for the necessity of embodying provisions against overbuilding in the new Films Act.

"Your new Bill should be logical throughout . . . the percentage of quota, the question of quality and cost and the ultimate supplies of all films available should be considered in conjunction with proposals which would bring a check to redundancy expansion and overbuilding," says the statement, which adds that Dr. Leslie Burgin's expectation that this problem would be dealt with within the trade had been disappointed," in view of divergent interests and nationalities, which would make enforcement impossible without statutory means.

"We should be happy for such enforcement to be under the control of your department, and other sections of the trade have expressed similar views. . . . We have asked for an arbitrator with effective executive powers under statute, who would be appointed by yourselves."

The CEA letter concludes with a statement that the association is asked to comment on "sections of a problem of which relevant and all-important parts are missing." We wish to remember both yourself and your new legislation with appreciation, rather than to be left with a legacy increasing the chaotic conditions from which we already suffer," say the association. Its final recommendation is that the importation of sub-standard films of other than educational and scientific value should be prohibited. "British films should be used in British homes."

The memorandum submitted by the Independent Producers and Distributors (an ad hoc body) follows a previous communication formally protesting against the introduction of a £15,000 minimum cost clause, on the ground that it would eliminate small concerns and cause widespread unemployment. The positive suggestions of this group are as follows:

1—The distributors' quota to be based on the financial returns of his bookings of British films in relation to the returns of his bookings of non-British films in the same period. The footage basis to be abolished.

2—The distributor to be allowed, for the purpose of computing his quota obligation, to add to the amount received for the British bookings of British films any sums received from the sale of these subjects abroad.

In practice this suggestion would mean that, assuming the quota figure to be 20 per cent, a distributor with a British booking total, on foreign films, of £1,000,000 would be required to handle British films booking to £200,000. If he sold foreign rights for £50,000, he would be required to obtain British bookings to a total of £150,000.

How the Plan Would Work

Explaining the practical workings of the plan, the statement to the Board of Trade suggests that in the first year a footage quota would be retained. In the second year the distributor would be required to prove to the Board of Trade that the British films acquired on this initial footage basis had been booked to the statutory percentage, in cash.

Any deficiency revealed, it is suggested, should be carried forward to the next year, but any surplus would be similarly credited.

An example is that an American distributor, with a £1,000,000 maturity, in England, on his American output, would, if his British pictures booked only to £100,000, have to show £300,000 of British business in the next year. If his first year's trading showed a British maturity, including export receipts, of £300,000, his following year's quota would be only £100,000. (These figures are based on a 20 per cent quota, under which the cash quota on a £1,000,000 turnover would be £200,000.)

The Independent committee suggests that this plan would eliminate "quickies," protect the British industry, and encourage foreign companies to distribute British films in their own markets. If it is not adopted, it suggests an alternative method by which to protect small British companies, by the following enactments:

Distributors to be classified in any new legislation according to the scale of their product. A "Small" distributor to be one who does not handle more than 20 foreign films in the year.

Small distributors to be permitted to cover their feature quota by means of British shorts, and therefore to be exempt from the £15,000 minimum.

That, if a footage quota is retained, the small distributor shall be asked to carry only 10 per cent.

With the receipt of the statements here summarized the Board of Trade is in possession of the opinions of all sections of the trade. From the diversity of the suggestions made it may be seen that the Government's hopes of an agreed trade policy have been very badly disappointed. To a certain extent the latest statements of producers, distributors and exhibitors show a more fundamental divergence on vital points than appeared to exist after the Moyne Report was issued. There also have been statements from "Documentary" producers, from trade unions, and from owners of British sound system (who want a quota preference on films with British recording) which have raised various other issues, but it may be assumed that the clashing views of the KRS, CEA and Film Group on Quota provide the major problem which faces the Government.

The CEA is so firm in its opposition to the cost clause that steps have already been taken to educate Members of Parliament on the points of principle involved, with the object of insuring reasoned criticism of and opposition to any measure which may be introduced by the Cabinet on the lines of the Board of Trade's draft proposals. Every member of every branch of the CEA is being asked to approach his Member of Parliament, for this purpose. It is known that the Federation of British Industries, of which the Film Group is a panel, already has a strong Parliamentary bloc, on the other side, so that the CEA's anxiety to have its view adequately expressed is understandable. It is expected that the Independents will also find spokesmen in the House of Commons. Whether there will be a comparable presentation of the American point of view may be doubted.

In Wardour Street today the prevailing view is that the quality clause is lost. The Board of Trade is known to think it impracticable, and will want a deal of convincing to the contrary. Some sort of minimum cost clause is also a general expectation, but it is thought that the similar representations of the CEA and the KRS in regard to the scale may have effect in bringing about a starting figure lower than the 20 per cent suggested in the draft. It is more likely to be the 15/10 of the CEA than the 10/5 of the KRS, in the general view, but it is thought probable that the CEA's plea for a consistent 3/2 ratio will be regarded as reasonable. The validity of the KRS criticism of the present "double quota" suggestion may also be accepted, in the opinion of insiders. Possibly the £45,000 limit will be either abolished or extended, and the proportion between cost and exemption made arithmetical.

That some special provision will be made to protect the small producer and distributor is regarded as certain. It is not generally known that, even under the present Act, minor distributors have been given exemption from quota by the Board of Trade, on account of "special circumstances." It is unlikely that it is intended to penalize them under a new Act.

Fined in Quota Default

Associated British Pictures, the John Maxwell company, this week was fined £50 and costs of £5, five shillings for a quota default at the Regal theatre in London, in the year ended last September. It was charged that he showed 15.55 per cent on features.

GEORGE GERSHWIN DIES IN HOLLYWOOD AT 38

GEORGE GERSHWIN and GINGER ROGERS at the time he composed the music for "Shall We Dance," RKO-Radio production in which Miss Rogers starred with Fred Astaire.

Writing Music for "Goldwyn Follies" When Taken Ill; Began as "Song Plugger"

George Gershwin, who brought to motion pictures the same versatile musical talent that carried him from a $15-a-week "song plugger's" job to top rank of the composers of modern music, is dead.

Engaged in composing scores for "Goldwyn Follies," United Artists, at the time he became ill, Mr. Gershwin died at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, Hollywood, at 10:35 A. M. Sunday—five hours after Drs. Carl Rand, Eugene Ziskind and Howard Naffziger, professor of surgery at the University of California, performed an emergency operation to remove a brain tumor.

At his bedside was Mr. Gershwin's brother, Ira, who was collaborating with the composer on the songs for the Samuel Goldwyn picture. Five of the nine planned numbers had been completed when Mr. Gershwin collapsed at the studio two weeks ago.

He was hurried to the hospital for observation and was released last week in an extremely nervous condition. Saturday he lapsed into a coma and was rushed back to the hospital. His ailment was diagnosed as a brain tumor. Dr. Walter Dandy, Baltimore brain surgeon, was summoned, but before he could leave for Hollywood Mr. Gershwin's condition had become critical and the California surgeons operated.

Wrote Modern Opera

Mr. Gershwin, whose "Rhapsody in Blue" and opera "Porgy and Bess" were considered his most notable works, was called one of the most prominent recruits claimed by Hollywood after the advent of sound.

His body was transported to New York and funeral services were held at Temple Emanu-El Thursday afternoon. When the body arrived in Grand Central Station Thursday morning a large group of the composer's friends were present.

Gene Buck, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, delivered the eulogy.

Memorial services also were held in Hollywood on Thursday. The memorial committee was headed by Irving Berlin, Moss Hart and L. Wolfe Gilbert, and included Adolph Zukor, Edward G. Robinson, Darryl Zanuck, Jerome Kern, Marc Connelly, Robert Montgomery, Samuel Goldwyn, Fred Astaire, David Selznick, Ernest Lubitsch, Frank Capra, Jack Warner, Buddy de Silva, Edgar Selwyn, Eddie Cantor and Charles Chaplin.

Mr. Gershwin left no will. Ira Gershwin received special letters of administration to manage the estate which, it is understood, approximates $200,000.

First a "Song Plugger"

Mr. Gershwin was born in Brooklyn, September 26, 1898, and attended the public schools of New York and Commerce High School. He studied piano with Charles Hambitzer and took harmony from Edward Kilenyi.

He left his position as a "song plugger" for a music publishing house to become rehearsal pianist for "Miss 1917," by Victor Herbert and Jerome Kern. Later he was on the stage as accompanist for Louise Dresser and Nora Bayes. He also was soloist with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, New York Symphony Orchestra, Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, Boston Symphony Orchestra and others.

He wrote the music for George White's "Scandals" during the years 1920 to 1924.

In addition to "Rhapsody in Blue," Mr. Gershwin wrote "Preludes," "Cuban Overture," "An American in Paris," "Second Rhapsody," "Concerto in F," and composed such songs as "La La Lucille," "Our Nell," "Sweet Little Devil," "Lady Be Good," "Primrose," "Tip Toes," "Song of the Flame," "Oh Kay," "Strike Up the Band," "Funny Face," "Shake Your Feet," "Rosolie," "Treasure Girl," "Show Girl," "Girl Crazy," "Of Thee I Sing," "Pardon My English" and "Let 'Em Eat Cake."

Mr. Gershwin's most ambitious work was considered to be the opera, "Porgy and Bess," based on the dramatized novel of Dubose Heyward. It was described as "something between grand opera and musical comedy."

Mr. Gershwin's first motion picture contract was with Fox on the production of "Delicious." Last year he turned out the music for the Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers picture, "Shall We Dance."

In addition to Ira, he is survived by his mother, a brother, Arthur, and a sister, Mrs. Frances Godowsky, wife of Leopold Godowsky, Jr., son of the noted pianist.

Selznick Signs Janet Gaynor

Janet Gaynor has signed an exclusive, long-term contract with David O. Selznick. Her first assignment will be "Angel on Broadway," to be filmed in Technicolor from the original story of Robert J. Birdwell, publicity director for Selznick International, and the screen play of Ben Hecht.

Miss Gaynor's last appearance was in "A Star Is Born," also for Selznick.

Photophone Installations Increase 300 Per Cent

Installations of RCA Photophone systems increased almost 300 per cent in the six months ending June 30th as compared to the same period last year.

A new record for the company was established last month when more than five times as many installations were contracted for as in June, 1936.

Films Outside New York Are Ruled Tax-Exempt

New York City's two per cent sales tax does not apply on New York-shipped films designed for exhibition outside the city, a ruling says. Herman Goldman, of the city's tax department, said that the recent decision of the State Court of Appeals declaring their exemption will not be re-appealed, and it is understood that the matter is now finally settled.

At the same time the distributors have abandoned their plan to appeal the decision of the Appellate Division in the United Artists case holding that films designed for exhibition within the city are taxable. Tax collections which the distributors have made from exhibitors will now be released from escrow and deposited with the comptroller's office.

As a result of the two decisions, operation of the tax on motion pictures is now clearly defined on the lines of jurisdictional destination.

Leonard, Greenthal Go to Coast

Charles A. Leonard, new advertising representative of United Artists on the west coast, left for Hollywood last week. He will work in close cooperation with Samuel Goldwyn, Walter Wanger, and other U. A. producers. Monroe Greenthal, advertising and publicity head for United Artists, also left for the west coast.

STRIP TEASE—BURLESQUE DE-MINSKIED, REOPENED

'Clothed Nudity' Featured in Supervised Shows in New York; Revival of Vaudeville Seen

The name of Minsky, long synonymous with the type of entertainment which blossomed to its fullest flower in the late strip-tease, will not be permitted in connection with any future theatrical venture in New York City, either variety, vaudeville or motion picture.

Seven former burlesque houses in New York City of the 14 closed by the city license commissioner several months ago reopened this week under a unique code of operation concocted under the vigilant supervision of the mayor and administered by a board none of the members of which are connected directly or indirectly with the theatre.

The agreement which the operators signed before receiving licenses to reopen their houses as variety theatres was labeled by Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia as voluntary in every respect. It prohibits reference to or advertising of the theatres as burlesque houses, specifically bans the name of Minsky because of its previous associations and contains detailed sections prohibiting various stage practices which might be offensive to public morals. Under it there will be no "strip," no "tease" and no "strip-tease" but the operators won one concession when they held out for nude tableaux. These, however, they promised will feature "clothed nudity," or something.

Several of the houses, it was reported, will feature motion pictures in the intervals between the vaudeville shows, pointing the way to a revival of the combined film and variety entertainment which reached its peak before the development of talking pictures.

The new plan which received wide attention in the news and editorial columns of the New York press was for the most part viewed with hope as an opportunity for a real revival of the variety stage. The New York Times, editorially, hailed the code as "a flexible form of voluntary censorship and control, in some respects similar to that in the motion picture industry."

Board to Determine Standards

Gene Buck, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, who collaborated with the mayor in developing the agreement, said, "I believe that a wholesome forward step has been taken toward bringing back a new form of old vaudeville and making possible the development of talent which is sorely lacking today. Look at the headliners of today, where did they come from? Look at Eddie Cantor, Fanny Brice, Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Walter Huston, Ed Wynn, Leon Errol, Bobby Clark and a host of others, including the late Will Rogers and Marilyn Miller. Where did they come from? Vaudeville! Only in vaudeville can a young performer get the feel of a live audience which brings out the real talent in them. You can't develop talent before a mike or a camera Variety revue, if properly operated, will give us new blood in the theatre and allied fields."

Under the new code the board is authorized to determine the "standards of common decency and ethical practice" for the industry and the members must abide by the rulings. A second violation calls for the expulsion of a member and for the filing of formal reasons for such a step with the city license commissioner. Decisions of the board, the members agreed, shall be final and non-appealable.

Sam A. Scribner, treasurer of the Actors' Fund of America and a former burlesque producer, was named executive secretary to the board. One of his duties will be regular inspection of the shows.

The theatre owners, before they signed the agreement in the office of John F. Masterson, Brooklyn attorney and chairman of the board, posted bonds of $1,000 each as pledges of good faith. The agreement provides that a single infraction of the good taste sections renders an association member liable to a $500 fine.

Use of the word "burlesque" in connection with the new variety shows is banned specifically in the agreement because of "the ignominy into which it had recently been brought by the type of performances associated with it" but it was reported that a verbal condition provided also for the elimination of the Minsky name. The mayor was said to feel that the name was so inextricably interwoven with the now banned burlesque that he would not permit the houses to reopen until the name which had become an international byword had been removed from the theatres with which the various living Minskys were associated.

Same Pattern Without Nudity

Members of the board in addition to Mr. Masterson are Charles Warner, superintendent and attorney of the Brooklyn Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children; Harry Zeitz, vice-president of Martin's department store and active in the Federation of Jewish Charities; Dr. Francis McCaffrey, brother of the Rev. Joseph McCaffrey, police department chaplain; Jerome H. Bentley, educational and program director of the YMCA, and Charles D. Jaffe, president of the New York Clothing Manufacturers Exchange.

The theatres which received licenses this week were the Eltinge, Republic, Werber, Apollo, Fulton, Gaiety and Oriental. Two others, the Star and the Century, in Brooklyn, agreed to the code but will not seek licenses until the fall. Both houses have always closed during the summer.

The Eltinge, Gaiety and Republic opened on Tuesday afternoon immediately after receiving their licenses with shows which the the newspaper reports said were built on the burleque pattern but without the nudity and with the jokes and skits well cleansed. At the former Billy Minsky's Republic on 42nd Street, now Billy's Republic, the only adversion to the outlawed "strip-tease" was a reverse of the former routine. Scantily dressed chorus girls stood on pedestals while a modiste clothed them with elaborate drapes which eventually became evening gowns.

FILM PLAYERS PLAN BENEFIT BALL GAME

The cry of "play ball" will ring out in Wrigley Field, Los Angeles, July 17th, and Hugh Herbert, Victor Moore, Charles Murray, Fred Stone and Ned Sparks will take their places as umpires. Jack Benny will seize a microphone and broadcast a play-by-play description of the contest which will be between motion picture dramatic players and comedians.

On the straight players' team will be Clark Gable, Nelson Eddy, Don Ameche, George Raft, Dick Arlen, Walter Abel, Bob Armstrong, Tyrone Power, Tony Martin, Lee Tracy, Randolph Scott and Jimmy Gleason.

Their opponents will be the Marx Brothers, Joe E. Brown, George Jessel, Buster Keaton, Lucian Littlefield, Charles Winniger, Joe Penner, Man Mountain Dean, Sid Silvers, the Ritz Brothers, Sam Briskin and Jack Warner.

Arthur Treacher will be water boy and proceeds of the game will go, with most of the participants, to Mount Sinai Hospital.

Urges Reduction Of Income Tax Rate for Stars

Declaring that motion picture stars should be entitled to a reduction in their income tax rates owing to the transience and depreciation of their earning power, Rogers Marchetti, Hollywood attorney, last week announced intention of going to Washington to seek a "sympathetic hearing" on the proposal before the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Mr. Marchetti said that he was making the trip in the interests of the Artists Protective Association, which he says he represents, but whose members he was loath to disclose. The attorney said that his precedent for requesting the tax reduction is based upon the government's recognition of a 27½ per cent depreciation allowance on income taxes paid on oil wells and other mineral holdings. "It is my theory that due to the comparatively short period of high earnings of a star, some similar deductions should be allowed on the income tax returns of stars," said Mr. Marchetti.

The lawyer explained that a player earning $50,000 a year pays Federal and State taxes of $11,804, or 23.61 per cent of total income. A star earning $400,000—as Mae West does—pays $284,000 or 71.01 per cent.

The opening of "Salute to Valor" in Toronto last week was attended with the biggest ceremonial tie-up in years. Participating with Columbia Pictures of Canada, Ltd., were the Canadian government, Canadian Broadcasting Corp., the Famous Players Canadian Corp., and the Canadian Legion.

THE CUTTING ROOM

The Awful Truth

(Columbia)

Comedy Melodrama

About six months ago Irene Dunne gave exhibitors and the theatregoing public one of the greatest surprises in years with "Theodora Goes Wild." Columbia made that picture and anyone should realize that that picture is a tip off on what to expect, both in entertainment and commercial prospects, from this one.

In theme it's matrimonial trouble—a divorce, an ex-wife trying to show an ex-husband that she doesn't give a hoot for him, doing and saying all the things in such a way that it really looks as though everything is on the level. But she is terribly in love with the ex-husband, who says and does exactly the same things. Complications ensue. Innocent bystanders are injured; unexpected things such as featured "Theodora Goes Wild" occur, and great and amusing excitement ensues before the wife recaptures her willing-to-be-recaptured husband.

Miss Dunne's husband in this picture is Cary Grant, currently in "Topper" and "The Toast of New York." Practically all the action revolves about them, but in one way or another Ralph Bellamy, Esther Dale, Alexander D'Arcy, Joyce Compton, Cecil Cunningham, Wyn Cahoon and Scott Colton are involved in the goings-on.

The story which is the basis for the production is credited to Arthur Richmond and Dwight Taylor, and Vina Delmar prepared the screenplay. As a matter of showmanship, the director of a film is not very often given the commercial importance he merits. In this case it seems that he should, for Leo McCarey, who handled "Make Way For Tomorrow," was the director of this subject.

52nd Street

(United Artists-Wanger)

Romantic Melodrama

Although this picture will tell a human interest story of romance and melodrama and will present a cast of capable and favorably known players, it looks, at this time, as if the modern semi-historical background and atmosphere will be the chief sources of audience and exhibitor interest. It concerns a series of events, with 52nd Street, New York, serving as the locale, happenings of the years 1912 to 1933, a period which future historians may refer to as marking the end of what is known as modern history and the beginning of a new era.

Much to the chagrin of his relatives, the scion of a respectable old fashioned 52nd Street family marries beneath his station. Come the war years. Social strictures, codes of respectability, begin to unravel. 52nd Street and all the dignity it represented begin to change. A child is born to the man who married, and his wife dies; follows prohibition, then the post war prosperity and 52nd Street becomes America's Montmarte. The respectable mansions are speakeasies. A new order is born, a new mode and manner of life emerges for everyone. The man who married is in the van of changing conditions. Ensue the dark days of 1929; fortunes are swept away and the standards of other years crumble. The man's daughter, reared in the refinement of an English finishing school, returns to be fascinated by a new life. Like her father, she falls in love with a boy whom he considers beneath her station, although he is the son of one of his best friends. Yet she will not be denied the adventure of following in the same footprints her father trod a generation earlier.

As modern topical American history is paraded, the personalities bringing the story to screen realism are Ian Hunter, Leo Carrillo, Pat Paterson, Ella Logan, Sid Silvers, Zasu Pitts, Marla Shelton, Dorothy Peterson, Collette Lyons and Kenny Baker. Specialty characters, signifying the passing parade which made the metamorphosis of 52nd Street a chapter in late American life, include Jack White, Rocco and Saulter, Georgie Tapps, Cooke and Brown, Jerry Colonna, Al Norman and the "52nd Street Girls."

The production is based on an original screenplay by Grover Jones, as qualified as anyone to write the record of 52nd Street and similar streets in other communities. Music and lyrics were prepared by Walter Bullock and Harold Spina. Dances were staged by Danny Dare and Harold Young was the director in charge.

Release date: September 26.

(United Artists-Goldwyn)

Melodrama

As a stage play "Dead End" enjoyed remarkable success. Critics and the public acclaimed it as one of the theatre's finest accomplishments in recent years. Samuel Goldwyn bought the picture rights for a large sum of money.

In theme and atmosphere the story is grim melodrama dealing with incidents and experiences in the lives of men and women and boys who live in the East River slums of New York, where the backdoors of fashionable apartments are faced by river front tenements. The principal characters are a vicious gangster, a girl who wants to get away from the seamy dangerous environment and take her younger brother with her; an ambitious young architect fighting his way up the ladder to respectability, a kept woman, a prostitute and a mobster henchman. Primarily intended to be entertainment of a very different classification, the kind that ignores all present trends towards sweetness and light, it is also educational as it details the forces, circumstances and influences that bring a boy face to face with the law.

Conceding the acting ability of the players chosen for the principal roles, a shrewdness in selecting extraordinary character types also is noted. Humphrey Bogart is the gangster; Sylvia Sydney the girl, and Billy Halop, who played the role on the stage, her brother; Joel McCrea is the architect, Wendy Barrie the kept woman, and Claire Trevor the woman of the streets. Allan Jenkins is the henchman. Other important characters are Marjorie Main, Charles Peck, Minor Watson, Charles Halton, James Burke, Ward Bond, Elisabeth Risdon and Esther Dale.

The picture is based on the play by Sidney Kingsley as produced by Norman Bel Geddes with screen play by Lillian Hellman. William Wyler is directing.

Release date: August 26.

Forty Naughty Girls

(RKO-Radio)

Comedy Mystery Melodrama

The title might suggest an airy musical film. Such is not the case, however, as "Forty Naughty Girls" is another Inspector Oscar Piper-Teacher Hildegarde Withers detective mystery story. Sixth of the series of Stuart Palmer yarns, which included "Penguin Pool Murder," "Murder on a Blackboard," "Murder on a Honeymoon," "Murder on the Bridle Path" and "The Plot Thickens," the screen play is by John Grey, recently credited with "Too Many Wives" and "Mysterious Crossing." Directing is Edward Cline, who just completed "On Again—Off Again" but also is remembered for "Preview Murder Mystery" and "Hollywood Boulevard."

James Gleason, creator of the Oscar Piper screen character, again has the same role. Hildegarde is Zasu Pitts, who played the role in "The Plot Thickens." Marjorie Lord, seen in "On Again-Off Again," "Border Cafe" and "Hideaway," shares the romantic interest with newcomer George Shelley. Other important characters are Joan Woodbury, Edward Marr, who makes his screen debut, Frank M. Thomas, Alan Edwards, Alden Chase, Ada Leonard, Barbara Pepper and Tom Kennedy.

All the action takes place within the walls of a New York theatre, where a play is being presented. A murder is committed. Piper, called into the case, rounds up a multitude of suspects and becomes snarled in as many clues. Another mysterious killing takes place and Piper's groping for a solution brings Hildegarde into action to make hash of his theories and turn up the culprit.

London by Night

(MGM)

Mystery Melodrama

MGM believes, and exhibitor reaction seems to be supporting the opinion, that "Night Must Fall" demonstrated its staff was expert in the art and mechanics of producing weird mystery pictures. And, although love interest and comedy are included, baffling crime is the principal ingredient of "London by Night."

That's all the story is—mystery which it is presumed will stump the shrewdest spectators as they attempt to identify the killer and establish a motive for his series of slayings. A definite clue is given early, but production technique is being applied so trickily that it is calculated suspense will keep everyone guessing until the final moment.

The main character in the picture, an American newspaper man who turns detective for the one job, is George Murphy, previously in "Top of the Town" and soon to be seen in "Broadway Melody." Other principals are Rita Johnson, late from the stage, where she was featured in "Fulton of the Oaks," making her screen debut, Virginia Field, seen in "Lloyds of London," and another comparative newcomer, Leo G. Carroll. The supporting cast is more familiar, listing George Zucco and Montague Love, who were in "Parnell," Leonard Mudie, Eddie Quillan, remembered for many pictures,

One Dead, Many Felled in 91° Heat; Warm Weather Due to Continue

Humidity Adds to Discomfort of Year's Highest Temperature—Two Boys Drowned, Scores Rescued as Throngs Rush to Beaches—Midwest in Grip of Torrid Wave

One death was attributed to the heat and several persons were prostrated yesterday as the mercury climbed to a new high for the year, 91.4 degrees, one degree less than the record for the date.

Two boys were drowned and more than 130 others were rescued from drowning at various resorts in the metropolitan area. Most of the rescues occurred in the Rockaways. First-aid cases—for cuts, bruises, sunburn—soared past the 800 mark.

The weather, made oppressive by an unusually high humidity for the temperature, grees, at 6:15 A. M. The average was 81 and the normal 73.

The humidity ranged between 70 and 80 per cent of saturation between 8 and 10 A. M., then dropped steadily until, at 4 P. M., it reached 40. It started rising again after that and was 42 at 8 P. M.

At no time during those hours, however, was the humidity low in relation to the temperature, not even when the moisture content of the atmosphere was 40. Usually when the temperature is high the humidity is low.

The Weather Bureau pointed out

Double or Nothing

(Paramount)

Comedy Romance with Music

"Waikiki Wedding" having done much to revivify Bing Crosby's screen popularity, Paramount is determined that "Double Or Nothing" shall increase his prestige. Much effort and expense has been undertaken to concoct a film pleasing to audiences and crowded with showmanship potentialities for exhibitors to exploit.

For names to go along with Crosby there will be Martha Raye, Andy Devine, Mary Carlisle, William Frawley, Benny Baker, Samuel S. Hinds, William Henry, Fay Holden, Bert Hanlon, Gilbert Emery, Walter Kingsford, John Gallaudet and Harry Barris.

The story, originally a drama by M. Coates Webster, was transformed into a comedy romance by Charles Lederer, Erwin Gelsey, John Moffitt and Duke Attebury. Quality of musical content is assured by the fact that Arthur Johnston, John Burke, Sam Goslow, Al Siegel, Ralph Freed and Burton Lane prepared music and lyrics for the several numbers. Paramount's whole musical staff—Boris Morros, Max Terr, Victor Young and Arthur Franklin—have their hands in bringing the composers' and writers' efforts to screen realism. Theodore Reed is director in charge of the film, which is being produced by Benjamin Glazer.

In the story, Crosby, Miss Raye, Devine and Frawley, find and return purses. As a reward for their honesty all are given opportunity to participate in a $1,000,000 legacy provided they double the $5,000 reward given each one. All but Crosby lose their windfalls. Falling in love with the girl, Mary Carlisle, who is supposed to swindle him, he doubles his roll, wins the girl and the fortune.

Music for Madame

(RKO Radio)

Melodrama, Romance, Music

Although this production has a Hollywood background and many famous spots including the "Symphonies Under The Stars" Bowl are incidental to the action, it does not tell a typical Hollywood story. The basic theme concerns a young singer and an extra girl who is also a composer. The singer wants to help her, but as he has been innocently involved in a crime and fears gangster vengeance he dares not do so. While motivation is melodramatic, mechanics of production cause it to be played in a gay airy atmosphere. As the appeal of picture making locales, law enforcement circles and a radio station are brought into play, a unique conclusion is effected as the singer engages in a vocal duet over the radio to prove that he is the wanted, though innocent, man.

Nino Martini who made his screen debut in a small part in "Paramount On Parade" after which he did "Here's To Romance" and "The Gay Desperado" and Joan Fontaine, hailed as RKO-Radio's most important discovery, are starred. Her work in "Quality Street," "The Man Who Found Himself" and "You Can't Beat Love" has stamped her as a personality to be watched. The featured players are Alan Mowbray, Erik Rhodes, Bradley Page, Billy Gilbert and Frank Conroy, a group whose screen capabilities are well known.

Authors of the story are Robert Harari, a new comer to the ranks of screen writers, and Hans Kraly whose earlier credits include adaptations, singly or in collaboration, of "Broadway Gondolier," "By Candlelight" and "My Lips Betray." Music and lyrics are by Rudolph Friml whose operettas include "Rose Marie" and "The Firefly," and Gus Kahn, associated with many important recent musical pictures. Direction is by John Blystone recently credited with "Woman Chases Man." Jesse Lasky, who gave Martini his first real chance, is producing.

Release date: August 23.

Lancer Spy

(20th Century-Fox)

Melodrama

This is one of those productions to which Darryl F. Zanuck is giving much personal attention. When such is the case, the past record proves that the effort usually results in a worthy entertainment and commercial venture. Naturally it is known that under Mr. Zanuck's guidance the picture will be impressively and authentically produced. In theme it tells the story of a British Spy in Berlin trying to ascertain the secrets of Germany's final offensive. He must fight against time and scores of other obstacles. As the elements of strong action underlie everything he is under suspicion and surveillance constantly and to heighten the tensity he further becomes involved romantically with a beautiful enemy spy.

For this type of story, the cast which plays it appears to be hand picked. The British Spy is George Sanders, featured in "Lloyds of London" and the current "Slave Ship." The girl is Dolores Del Rio, last in Columbia's "Devil's Playground." Third important principal, Peter Lorre, seen in "Crime and Punishment," "Crack Up" and "Nancy Steele Is Missing" will be featured in the "Mr. Moto" series. Others of importance, whose worth as screen personalities is familiarly known are Virginia Field, Sig Rumann, Joseph Schildkraut and Lionel Atwill. Character and atmospheric players listed are Luther Adler, Maurice Moscovitch, Holmes Herbert, Lester Matthews, Fritz Feld, Carlos De Valdez and Yvonne Severn.

Direction is by Gregory Ratoff who also had a hand in the writing and adapting of the story.

Release date: Not determined but after August 1.

Make a Wish

(RKO Radio-Lesser)

Comedy, Melodrama, Romance, Music

The idea of the story told in this picture which has considerable music content and comedy contrast is that of the mental and physical rehabilitation of a composer who has gone stale, a revival effected by the friendship of a small boy. The time is the present and the chief locales are a boys' camp in the Maine woods and New York City.

For the first time, Bobby Breen, who is starred, will be presented as a typical red blooded American boy. Important as that may be another departure of equal importance is made as Basil Rathbone, usually seen in "heavy" roles, will appear in a sympathetic one. A screen recruit, Marion Claire, will be seen as the center of romantic interest. Brand new to pictures, Miss Claire was for several years a member of the Chicago Civic Opera Company. The music numbers in the film will be sung by little Mr. Breen and Miss Claire.

Comedy contrast is in the capable hands of Henry Armetta, with Breen in his first picture, Leon Errol, Leonid Kinskey and Donald Meek. Other players who have important roles are Ralph Forbes, Herbert Rawlinson, Phillip MacMahon, Billy Lee, Spencer Charters, Lew Kelly, Herbert Colcombe, James Parker, Carlyle Moore, Harold Smith and Jack White.

Story used is an original by Gertrude Berg. She collaborated on the adaptation with Bernard Schubert and Earle Snell. William Hurlburt contributed special dialogue and the late Al Boasberg created the comedy sequences. The music is by Oscar Straus with lyrics by Louis Alter and Paul Webster and will be directed by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, Kurt Neumann, who made "Let's Sing Again" and "Rainbow On The River" is directing.

Release date: August 6.

Thanks for Everything

(Columbia)

Comedy, Romance, Melodrama

Viewing this forthcoming production with the thoughts of what will be its most important commercial values in mind leads to the conclusion that title significance together with possible name values will be the angles which exhibitors undoubtedly will be more ready to utilize. In theme, although several novel twists and developments have been incorporated, the story is comedy romance tinged with light melodrama. More exactly, it is a modernized version of a man's regeneration, a plot that has often been used for screen purposes. A girl loves a boy. A wealthy friend of both wants them to marry, but the boy does not think he is in love with the girl. Eventually, when through jealousy, his eyes are opened to his true feelings, he discovers he loves her and marries her.

The featured players are Francis Lederer, who for some time seems to have threatened to blossom as a big star, but who just hasn't gone over with the public at large as he should, and Madeleine Carroll who in "Lloyds Of London" gave evidence of what she will be in the future. The supporting cast which includes Richard Carle, Grace Bradley, Charles Waldron, J. C. Nugent, Arthur Hoyt and Stanley Mack is further indication that Columbia is placing great dependence on Lederer and Miss Carroll to be the mainstays in exhibitors efforts to arouse popular attention.

The story is an original by Adelaide Heilbron, about whom, as far as the screen is concerned, not much is known. The screenplay writer, Mary McCall, Jr., has many adaptations to her credit, her most important latest one for Columbia being "Craig's Wife." Direction is by Elliott Nugent.

Release date July 22.

Budding Exploitation Managers Trained in Journalism School

H. J. FITZGERALD and DONALD C. DEMIEN

How to convince the public that a forthcoming picture is colossal, stupendous or magnificent without saying so directly is the sum and curricular substance of a course now offered to students in the College of Journalism at Marquette University in Milwaukee.

Convinced that the trite and true methods of theatre advertising and publicity, confined chiefly to superlative adjectives, have lost their effectiveness and that a new appeal to the public is needed for modern selling, H. J. Fitzgerald, general manager of the Fox Wisconsin Theatres in Milwaukee, after a long campaign is counting the fruits of a theatre advertising course which he persuaded the college to inaugurate last February.

Mr. Fitzgerald started with the premise that common-sense selling copy, presenting the facts of the matter to the public in such a way as to arouse interest was needed. Attempting to train his staff toward this end he found that theatre men, in general, live so close to their work that they lose touch with public taste and that they were unable to attack the problem from a fresh angle. After experimenting with various methods of attaining his objective he determined to interest the college of journalism at Marquette University and gave the task to Jim Keefe, circuit publicity director.

J. L. O'Sullivan, dean of the college, was reluctant at first to embrace the plan because he feared a publicity stunt and was not convinced that there would be sufficient interest among the students. Persuaded that the plan was sincere but still dubious over the possible interest, he agreed to install the course and classes were instituted with the start of the second semester this year. More than 50 students enrolled.

Because there was no precedent to draw upon the faculty proceeded slowly and carefully in the development. Questions were submitted weekly by the Fox Theatres office as a basis of class work with limitations as to subject and number of words to be used in the copy. Screenings of leading features and outstanding short subjects were held and members of the class prepared newspaper and trailer copy on them. Some of the product was so good that the circuit immediately put it to use in its campaigns.

To perpetuate the course and to encourage students to become interested in theatre work, Mr. Fitzgerald has instituted a full scholarship which will be given each year to the junior who attains the highest marks in the theatre course and does outstanding work in all his classes. It was won this year by Donald C. Demien of Milwaukee, who will become a member of the circuit advertising department during his summer vacation.

Although the course has been in operation only one semester and no effort was made to publicize it, the circuit offices have received requests for information from several film companies and the college has received queries from other schools.

B & K'S RETURN TO SINGLES INDICATED

Decision to Drop Doubles in Fall Reported Following Paramount Conferences

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

Double featuring will last only through the summer in Chicago, and starting with the new fall releases will come single programs, ending the considerable controversies which have taken place in theatre circles here since the double bills were started last fall by Balaban & Katz.

This information comes from a source close to the B. & K. front office. The reasons for the return to single features are said to be the result of conferences with Paramount distribution and production executives regarding coming product and the slump in business this spring which was laid to the double feature policy.

The announcement by Paramount that it will make a number of million dollar productions the coming year is considered a prime factor in the decision to return to single bills, double featuring of such expensive films being a point of attack.

B. & K. Paramount's Spearhead

B. & K., an important cog in Paramount, with its Chicago and downstate theatres, will be the first to make a move to open the way nationally for the new Paramount product. The starting of duals in the Great States theatres led to application of duals here in the city. B. & K., with duals in its out-of-town theatres, gradually was forced to go to doubles here as the releasing setup is such that pictures do not set bookings in the outlying towns until after they have played a loop engagement or city engagement. This system of single bills in the city and duals in the out-of-town houses soon made necessary a different releasing arrangement, and duals were started in all the theatres with the exception of the Loop theatres.

Since duals have come to be a general thing business has fallen off here to a noticeable degree. Other factors in the situation are the elimination of so-called chance games, the spring and summer releases at the tail end of the product season, and the warm weather. Then there has been the grouping of radio programs at the best show times and the daylight saving time, which keeps people out of doors later.

Sales Quotas Increased

Exchange managers too say that the coming year with its increased sales quotas is going to be a tough one for them to solve. Exhibitors are protesting over rental scales and the double feature clash with short subjects is another sore spot.

Protests also have been directed against B. & K. practice of playing top pictures in their ace neighborhood houses on a double feature policy, before the smaller exhibitor gets them. Many deals in the smaller theatres are on a percentage basis, and distributors have been feeling the results of the double featuring, too.

As B. & K. is the only group that has obviously wanted the duals (if anyone wanted them), all other theatres probably will return to singles at the first opportunity. In fact, many already have done so and say they have found it profitable.

Newspaper Starts Poll

The Chicago Daily Times this week launched a campaign to find out just what Chicagoans think of double and triple features.

Almost without exception the theatre patrons replied that they were opposed to triple feature bills and added that shorter shows were more to their liking. Many referred to the three features as being a sort of an endurance contest as such programs last from four to six hours.

Another daily newspaper, the Examiner, was ready to launch a campaign against double bills when it was brought out by a member of the staff that to fight dual bills perhaps would cause a loss of circulation among those who look at films from the bargain standpoint.

Warner Bookers And Admen To Meet

Warner bookers and advertising salesmen will hold their fourth and final regional meeting at the Hotel Warwick, New York, on July 17-18. Merchandising plans and advertising accessories will be discussed, with emphasis on Warners' newly adopted accessories rental plan.

A. W. Schwalberg, supervisor of exchanges, will conduct the meeting, which will be attended by representatives of the Eastern and Canadian branches. Those attending from the home office are I. H. Dolid, Arthur Sachson, H. M. Doherty, C. C. Ryan, Phil Abrahams and Bernie Goodman.

MGM Prepares British Production

MGM will produce five pictures in England this year, the first to be "The Yank at Oxford," starring Robert Taylor. Louis B. Mayer, accompanied by Howard Strickling and Benny Thau, sailed this week on the Rex in order to prepare for production, due to start September 1st.

Michael Balcon, in charge of production, and Jack Conway, director, will join them in London August 15th.

Loew Drive Winners

Winners of the April-May exploitation drive conducted by Loew's were announced in New York this week by C. C. Moskowitz. Nicholas M. Schenck, president, will present plaques to the men, as follows: Al Weiss of the Oriental, Brooklyn, for his campaign on "Romeo and Juliet"; Seymour Mayer, Pitkin, on "Maid of Salem"; Allen J. Isaacs, 175th St., "Waikili Wedding"; Louis Suess, Fairmount, "Romeo and Juliet"; Charles Burns, Yonkers, "Maytime"; Harry Brown, Century, "Romeo and Juliet."

United Artists Claims Precedent With 14 Features

With the approach of the crest in the 1937-38 selling season, United Artists' interest in distribution is being focussed on a new trend which, for the first time in the company's history, creates a supply of 14 features for early release, compared with the top total of 15 usually handled previously during an entire season.

During the period ending a few years ago, the company's product for a season has varied from 10 to 15 in number. During the past 18 months, however, the addition of several producers and increased activity on all fronts has caused a unique situation in United Artists' setup.

Now, for the first time, the company has on hand for early release 14 productions, and, commencing with Alexander Korda's "Knight Without Armor," starring Marlene Dietrich and Robert Donat, and currently at Radio City Music Hall. George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager, has consummated plans to distribute on the average of one picture a week throughout the fall into November.

In this group are four from Samuel Goldwyn, three from Selznick International, three from Walter Wanger and three from London Films, all of which are completed, in the cutting-room, or in advanced stages of production.

"Stella Dallas," starring Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles and Ann Shirley, and "Dead End," with Sylvia Sidney, Joel McCrea and Humphrey Bogart, have already been finished by Mr. Goldwyn, while "Hurricane," with Jon Hall and Dorothy Lamour, and "Adventures of Marco Polo," with Gary Cooper and Sigrid Gurie, are the others upon which the producer is at work.

Selznick International has "The Prisoner of Zenda," with Ronald Colman, Madeleine Carroll, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Mary Astor ready for release. "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," with Tommy Kelly, Walter Brennan and Elizabeth Patterson, and "Nothing Sacred," with Carole Lombard and Fredric March are both well along in production.

"Walter Wanger's Vogues of 1938," with Warner Baxter and Joan Bennett, is awaiting its Music Hall opening on August 12th, while "52nd Street," with Kenny Baker and Pat Paterson, and "Stand-In" with Leslie Howard have been before the cameras for some time.

Three London productions have been completed and prints are in the New York vaults, ready for early distribution.

Rodgers Joins Grand National

Ben Rodgers, who resigned as manager for Gaumont British in New Haven, a month ago, has joined Grand National as a salesman in Boston. He succeeded Harry Goldman, who returned to Warner Brothers as a salesman.

Floyd Heninger has been promoted from booker to field salesman for Grand National in the Oregon district. Marc T. McDougald has been made head booker.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by BRUCE ALLAN

in London

Music for "Victoria"

With Herbert Wilcox about to sail for America with a print of "Victoria the Great" for its New York premiere—it will be early 1938 before the general British public has a sight of the film, by the way—the last stages of production were conducted with considerable speed. Immediately after the editing stage, and to some extent parallel with it, the problem of the musical background was faced. It was a considerable one, owing to the necessity of retaining, in the Coronation scene particularly, the music known to have accompanied the original event. Muir Mathieson, musical director to London Films at Denham, was in charge of the task; his employment indicates that cooperation between the Wilcox and Korda enterprises has gone beyond the use of floor space.

The London Symphony Orchestra, the Life Guards Band, and singers from the London College of Choristers were used, and Anthony Collins, apart from composing a good deal of original music, introduced in the Coronation scene Handel's "Gloria," Attwood's "I Was Glad," and "The Queen Shall Rejoice," all of which were played in Westminster Abbey one hundred years ago. The performers included a number of members of the Abbey orchestra for this year's Coronation of King George VI and the trumpeter who rendered the fanfares and flourishes so noticeable in the newsreels was also used. It is a curious reflection on the British release system that New York will hear, and see, all this before London.

'Pimpernel' at Denham

Production of "The Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel" for London Films at Denham is now in full course and Hans Schwartz has completed a sequence, using a cast of three hundred, which pictures one of the Revolutionary Tribunals which judged the "aristos." Barry K. Barnes, new star in the part of the Pimpernel, figures in these scenes in the guise of an unshaven tumbril driver. So concealed, he watches the trial of his wife, Lady Blakeney (Sophie Stewart).

The court set was designed by Lazare Meerson, and Rene Herbert planned special costumes for Miss Stewart, who has by far her biggest part in the "Pimpernel" picture. Barnes is emphasizing the protean side of his part; in a few short scenes he is the tumbril driver aforesaid, a bulbous-nosed window cleaner and a deaf old officer, and these impersonations are varied by his appearance in the main role of the fop, Lord Blakeney.

Anthony Bushell is repeating the part of Sir Andrew Ffoulkes, which he played in the first "Pimpernel" film. Margaretta Scott, as a Spanish actress in the service of the revolutionaries, has also appeared in current sets. Mutz Greenbaum is at the camera.

"MEN AT WORK" SETS THEME OF NEW FILM

For Victor Saville's "South Riding", a current London Films production, an unusual outdoor setting was used at Denham. It represented a stretch of arterial road under work and it ought to look realistic because the constructors were out-of-work laborers obtained from the local Labour Exchange.

The background is used for a sequence in which the main happening is a Meet of Foxhounds, interrupted by the fact that the road-builder, played by Edmund Gwenn, won't move his lorries to allow the horses and dogs to pass. That typifies the story, which is built on the clash between the old and the new England. They are already saying that "South Riding" may be an English "State Fair".

Buchanan Moves

Jack Buchanan, who announced the establishment of his own production unit only two months ago, already has completed his first picture, "Smash and Grab," and is nearly through with his second, "The Sky's the Limit," at Pinewood.

Tim Whelan directed "Smash and Grab." His reputation gained considerably from "Farewell Again," which he directed for London Films. In this picture he broke new ground, inasmuch as Buchanan, essentially a musical comedy star, is featured as a private detective in a crook melodrama. Elsie Randolph, Arthur Margetson, Anthony Holles, Edmund Willard, David Burns and Lawrence Grosmith are in the cast. In "The Sky's the Limit" Mara Lossell, Russian singer, is starred.

"Sweet Devil," with Bobbie Howes and Jean Gillie, will next go on the floor. After that Rene Clair, who has two pictures to make, will direct Buchanan and Adele Astaire in a black and white singing-dancing picture before turning to Technicolor for his second effort. Color also is scheduled for "Richard of Bordeaux," with John Gielgud, which is in the 1938 schedule. Buchanan has lined up with those producers who see the ultimate disappearance of the black and white picture.

Pinewood studio itself figured as a background for Grosvenor Sound Films' production of "Command Performance" this week. It was used in an episode in which Arthur Tracy, playing a stage-film-radio star, is seen completing a film. Pinewood's crane, monitor room and exterior lot are prominent in shots showing production in progress. Phyllis Stanley, the cabaret star, figured in these "film within a film" scenes. Grosvenor also has used a party of gypsies for current sequences; five families camped in their caravans near the studio, reporting for duty as required.

Hulbert, Gangster

Starting in on his part for "It's in the Blood," at Warner-British studio at Teddington, Claude Hulbert put on black-rimmed glasses and a false mustache as part of his presentation of the role of a pretended gangster, up against Clem Lawrence, the former wrestler and physical instructor, whose last job was to be knocked out by Buddy Bear in "Transatlantic Trouble." Gene Gerrard, in this picture, is directing for the first time a story in which he himself is not cast.

Completed for Warner-British is "The Dark Stairway," with Hugh Williams and Chili Bouchier. It was finished at the Brooklands motor racing track, with the staging of a car crash.

"Documentary"

Strand Film Company, which this week showed "Today We Live," a study of the problems of England's distressed areas, has twenty-four subjects in production. As Strand is a "Documentary" unit, the progress being made in this department of British production is obvious; it is illustrated further by the fact that in less than a year the Strand organization has multiplied its staff and floor facilities four times. Currently being edited is "The Future's in the Air," for which sequences were shot in all parts of the British Empire, "Animal Kingdom," shot at the London "Zoo" under the supervision of Professor Julian Huxley, and subjects dealing with Agriculture, Social Service and the Lifeboat Service.

Itemized

John Grierson, film officer of the Post Office Film Unit, has resigned and will become a consultant, with Arthur Elton, director of a number of successful British shorts, associated with him. Mr. Grierson is regarded as the leader of the important "documentary" field in England.

"The Good Earth," which had to be withdrawn from the Palace after a 12-week run, owing to a theatrical production demanding the house, has been put into the Empire, Leicester Square, by MGM to meet continued demands. It is the first time the Empire has played any picture as a second run.

LABOR BILL RELIEVES FILMS OF REGULATION

Sunday Laws and Taxation Measures Up to State and City Lawmakers

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Threats of Federal control of hours and wages in the motion picture industry lessened this week with the rewriting of the Administration's labor legislation by the Senate Labor Committee at Washington.

As reported to the Senate, neither film producers nor exhibitors are seen as affected, the former through the fact that wages paid are far in excess of the standard to be fixed in the legislation, and the latter through an exemption of local retail trade. Technically, the law also would apply to the film business.

Representing practically a complete rewriting of the bill submitted by the Administration, the reported draft establishes a "ceiling" of 40 cents an hour, above which the administrative board may not go in fixing minimum wages, and a "floor" of 40 hours, below which it cannot go in determining the national work week.

In the original measure it was contemplated that the board should not go below 40 cents an hour in fixing wages, nor above 40 hours in fixing the work week, but the new committee draft imposes no prohibition upon the ordering of lower wages or longer hours for industries in which necessary.

Original provisions of the bill giving the proposed federal administrative board broad authority to fix wages and hours for all industries, prohibiting "oppressive" labor practices and limiting the freedom of employers and employees to bargain have been entirely eliminated.

The House Labor Committee this week began the preparation of its draft of the bill and is expected to submit one more along the lines of the Administration measure. The bill reported by the Senate committee, however, is seen in Washington as indicative of a determination on the part of the Senate to adopt a policy of caution in dealing with matters which might have far-reaching effects upon the continued activity of industry.

Classification of motion picture exhibition as retail trade had a precedent in legislation prepared by the Senate District of Columbia Committee last week, making motion picture and other amusement admissions subject to a two per cent "luxury" levy provided for Washington as a substitute for a privilege tax of three-fifths of one per cent of the gross receipts of all businesses.

A $7,500,000 tax bill for the District of Columbia now before the Senate, provides for a two per cent tax upon the sale of all articles other than food, clothing and medicines, and specifically stipulates that it shall apply to "all sales of admissions to any place of amusement, moving pictures, theatres."

The tax is to be collected from the purchaser "in so far as the same can be done," but shall be a direct obligation of the retailer, who is to be required to make monthly returns. No mention is made in the bill of the manner in which sales of less than 50 cents are to be taxed, but it is left to the District Commissioners to determine some method of accounting for such sales, which would include, of course, a large proportion of the theatre admissions.

In addition to the so-called "luxury" tax, the bill provides other levies which will hit the theatres, principally an increase in the rate of tax upon all real estate, but not on the improvements thereon, from $1.50 to $2.50 per $100 of valuation.

Sunday Laws and Taxes Up In Other Legislatures

While Congress this week was concerned, motion picture-wise, with a new two per cent tax levy for the District of Columbia, city and state legislatures elsewhere, nearing the end of present sessions, continued with discussions on various forms of Sunday theatre laws and local tax measures.

In Harrisburg, Pa., the Dauphin County Court issued an injunction against J. Griffith Boardman, Pennsylvania Secretary of Revenue, restraining him from collecting the newly created tax on chain stores of the state, pending action of the court on the pending suits filed by grocery chains to test the constitutionality of the law creating this tax.

The tax, which ranges from $1 to $500 on each store, according to the number owned by an individual organization, applies also to theatres of the state.

With Fred Wehrenberg, of the M.P.T.O.A., and Leto Hill, general manager of the Fanchon and Marco houses, leading the opposition to the four recently-passed tax bills, Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann and the Board of Aldermen in St. Louis voted to reconsider the measures, one of which is an amusement admission levy which, if put into effect, will cost local exhibitors $500,000 annually.

Mayor Dickmann said he is hopeful that the collection of delinquent real estate and personal taxes due the city will eliminate the necessity for the special tax bills.

On the matter of Sunday theatre laws, the New Hampshire Senate voted favorably on a bill to advance Sabbath openings from 6:30 P. M. to 4:00 P. M., with House passage now being worked out.

Following the closing of the Wilson theatre in Arlington, Va., after its recent Sunday opening, Arlington County authorities declared they will prosecute any further violations of the county's "blue law."

Voters at Beatrice, Neb., will vote next Tuesday on repeal of the Sunday closing law. Twice previously the proposition was defeated, but now it has the support of local patriotic and civic organizations.

The State Court of Appeals has upheld an ordinance of the Georgia city of Dublin banning motion pictures on Sundays except between the hour of one and two P. M. Charles Hicks, exhibitor, was defendant.

Theatre and theatrical union representatives spoke in favor of the proposed New Haven Sunday vaudeville ordinance as an aid to business and employment in the city, at a public hearing before the Board of Aldermen. No opposition was heard.

Condor Proceeds With New Filming

M. H. Hoffman has assumed active supervision of all Condor production under the company's reorganization plan which went into effect last week with the announcement of Edwin N. Clark's election to the executive chairmanship, succeeding George A. Hirliman, resigned. Mr. Hoffman, who returned to Hollywood from New York, expects to start the shooting of two new-season features and a musical short subject next week. Two additional features, still due on last season's schedule, will go before the cameras the following week.

"Murder in Swingtime" and "A Frozen Affair," the first two Condor short musicals on the new program, have been delivered to RKO, and the first of the new Corum Sports, "Water Polo," awaits only a few added shots.

Prior to Mr. Hoffman's joining Condor he spent 20 years in various executive capacities with Universal, Tiffany, Allied and Liberty Films.

Final details in connection with the reorganization of Condor Pictures were completed in New York last Thursday by the company's board of directors at a meeting at the office of Edwin N. Clark of Robb, Clark & Bennett. Mr. Clark had been named a director and chairman of the executive committee and in all probability will succeed George Hirliman, who recently resigned as president.

Frank M. Snell, treasurer, has left for the coast, where he will make his permanent headquarters.

Attorneys for Condor have advised executives that the Securities and Exchange Commission will clear registration papers in connection with a stock issue in a few days. No more testimony is required by SEC, it was said, and word is being awaited from Washington as to when to proceed with the issuance of stock.

In addition to Mr. Clark, the following were named directors: Harold H. Anderson of Chicago, George A. Fry of Chicago and Lewis C. George of Madison, Wis.

Mr. Clark was formally welcomed Thursday when Amedee J. Van Beuren, chairman of the board of Condor, entertained a group of motion picture executives at a beef steak at his estate in Carmel, N. Y.

Censors in Virginia Review 1,387 Films

Although 41 more pictures were viewed during the 11 months ending May 31st as compared to the same period last year, the Virginia board of censors rejected only two films.

In commenting on the 1,387 pictures seen, Mrs. Elizabeth C. Chalkley, board chairman, declared films have been greatly improved both from the standpoint of artistry and morals during the last three years. Comparatively few eliminations and changes are made in pictures put out by the large companies, Mrs. Chalkley said. Those with objectionable features or dialogue are mainly those made by small producers, she explained.

During the 11 months a total of $32,226.50 was collected in license fees, a gain of $1,926.50 over the corresponding period last year.

GB ANNOUNCES 12 MAJOR FILMS TO BE SOLD WITH ELASTIC POLICY

Weeks Remains in Organization; Distribution Through 20th-Fox Exchanges to Continue; Stars and Directors Emphasized

A program of 12 Class A productions with provisions for a limited number of additional features and a sales policy elastic enough to permit selling on a single picture basis where that is desired was outlined by Arthur A. Lee, vice-president, and George W. Weeks, general manager, at the Gaumont British convention in the St. Moritz Hotel, New York.

Mr. Weeks will remain with GB as general sales manager and the company will continue to release its pictures through the Twentieth Century-Fox exchanges in spite of rumors to the contrary, Mr. Lee told the delegates.

In outlining the product Mr. Weeks said, "The emphasis definitely will be on quality, rather than quantity, and each picture is to be made on a large scale, from the standpoints of production and star value.

"Because of the type of product planned GB's selling policy will be elastic. Wherever desired by the exhibitor, the program will be sold on a picture-by-picture basis. Because we are going in for individual rather than mass production, our pictures can be handled and sold individually. We are ready to sell our whole program, but 12 highly distinctive, first-calibre productions can each be sold on its own merits."

Concentrating on Fewer Films

The new policy will mean a greater concentration on fewer films, Mr. Lee said, with no decrease in quality. He said the parent company was resting on a firm financial basis—"as strong and as big as it ever was."

Continuing this theme the GB vice-president said, "We are starting upon our fourth season with all the backing in the world from the other side, the same exchanges where we originally started—even though there have been rumors that we would be asked to leave them—and with a program of which you will be proud."

Details of Productions

The product list follows:

NON-STOP NEW YORK; romantic melodrama set in New York City and aboard a transatlantic plane. Starring Anna Lee, with John Loder, Desmond Tester, James Pirrie, Francis Sullivan and Frank Cellier. Directed by Robert Stevenson.

SAILING ALONG; a Jessie Matthews musical, with Jack Whiting as her masculine lead and dancing partner. Music by Arthur Johnston, lyrics by Maurice Sigler. The story has a river background.

LOOK OUT FOR LOVE; musical, starring Anna Neagle and Tullio Carminati. A Herbert Wilcox production with music by Lerner, Goodhart and Hoffman.

EMPTY WORLD; mystery melodrama, starring Nova Pilbeam, in an adult role.

THE SHOW GOES ON; melodrama, starring Anna Neagle with Tullio Carminati and Leslie Banks. Directed by Herbert Wilcox from an original story by Herman Manciewicz. The three principal characters are trapeze artists.

GB TO EXPAND SALES FORCES

The Gaumont British sales force will be expanded to its original size before September, Arthur Lee, American vice-president, said after the adjournment of the convention in New York.

Discussing the continuance of physical distribution through Twentieth Century-Fox exchanges, Mr. Lee said, "There has never been any question in any shape, way or form about GB continuing through Twentieth Century-Fox next season. At no time has Sidney R. Kent intimated that he wanted GB to move out of the exchanges."

SPARKLE; a second Jessie Matthews musical in which spectacular dance numbers and emphasis on comedy are promised.

A GIRL MUST LIVE; romantic comedy starring Anna Lee with Lilli Palmer, Viennese star.

WEDDING DREAM; romantic comedy starring Nova Pilbeam.

Jessie Matthews' Third

GLAMOROUS LADY; Jessie Matthews' third for the season in which she will play a society beauty who wants a stage success based on her talent not her reputation.

THE UNCONQUERED WOMAN; with Anna Lee starred in a screen drama written especially for her. At least half the scenes are planned for rural locations.

LADY OF LA PAZ; based on the stage play of that name which was adapted from the Elinor Mordaunt novel. Nova Pilbeam had the title role in the stage production. No selection has been made for the screen role.

THE GIRL PAT; based on a recent event which received much newspaper attention. A fishing trawler of that name abandoned its usual grounds to go treasure hunting and for months eluded searching navies all over the world.

The stars and directors under contract for these 12 features will be the point of concentration in the selling of the new films, Mr. Lee told the delegates when he announced the product.

Individual Meetings

The meeting, which began on Friday, ended Sunday with individual meetings among home office executives and the sales forces from the field. The convention banquet was held Saturday night and the men left for their respective territories Sunday afternoon.

In addition to the product announcement on Saturday and addresses by Mr. Lee and Mr. Weeks, Albert Margolies and Al Selig, directors of publicity and advertising, spoke. A prize of four weeks' salary was awarded to R. W. Selig, branch manager in Denver for the company, for his showing in the George Weeks sales drive. Second and third prizes went to Mark Goldman of Pittsburgh and Walter Wessling of Portland.

Mr. Weeks, addressing the delegates said, "The Gaumont organization in this country must be recognized as an essential part of the industry as a whole, too essential a part to be destroyed by rumors. It is a structure too vital to be wrecked."

Product from BIP

He pointed out that a period of stabilization, such as was necessary in the British industry, always looks alarming to superficial observers. Gaumont British has paid for some of its own mistakes, he said, and even more dearly for the mistakes of others in the British industry. England, he insisted, always will be a great production center, and the Gaumont organization in America will remain its chief outlet for distribution in this country.

Although he did not specify how many pictures British International Pictures would send to America, Budd Rogers, American representative of the company, told delegates he was willing to submit product selected from BIP's output on the merits of each production.

Al Perry of Empire Films Canada, distributors for GB in the Dominion was among the speakers on Saturday. At lunch Howard Cullman, trustee of the Roxy theatre, New York, and William T. Powers, film buyer for National Theatres, made short speeches. Other National Theatres men introduced to the delegates included Edward Zabel, Milton Hossfield, Aubrey Schenck, Irving Barry and Jack Miller. O. J. Silverthorne, Toronto censor board member, and Ralph Poucher of Consolidated Film, also were among the guests.

MGM to Continue Foreign Expansion

Negotiations for at least six of twelve theatre sites being considered by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as part of its foreign expansion program are expected to be completed by September.

Foreign houses now operated by the company include the Empire, London; four in Australia with a fifth to be opened in November; one in Johannesburg, South Africa, and a second to open August 1st at Durban; four in Belgium; two in France; one in Calcutta and construction already started on one in Bombay; four in South America, with a new house to be started next month at Sao Paulo, Brazil. Construction also is to start within two months on a site recently acquired in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The average seating capacity in the theatres being constructed or contemplated is 1,500.

Boas Operates Theatre

The Park theatre, in downtown Boston, now is being operated by Louis Boas. Grand National has contracted to take over the house in 1939. Ben Welansky, who formerly operated the theatre, is president of the new Monogram Picture exchange.

Wilschke Promoted

E. O. Wilschke, district supervisor at Philadelphia for Electrical Research Products, Inc., has been named district superintendent. He succeeds Patchon Jones, who retired after 30 years of service with the Bell System.

RYDGE NAMED HEAD OF GREATER UNION CIRCUIT

NSW Exhibitors Seek Three-Year Contracts to Guard Against Shortage of Product

by CLIFF HOLT

in Melbourne

Norman B. Rydge has been appointed to the chairmanship of directors of Greater Union Theatres. There is as yet no announcement as to the successor of Stuart F. Doyle as managing director.

With the return from the United States of Charles Munro, managing director of Hoyts; Stanley S. Crick, managing director of Twentieth Century-Fox in Australia, and Kenneth Asprey, Greater Union attorney, negotiations were resumed for a continuance of the pooling deal between Hoyts and Greater Union. Mr. Munro, it is understood, has received instructions on the matter.

It is felt here that if either company succeeds to the disadvantage of the other in obtaining film contracts, then that company will favor an independent status after the termination of the GTC agreement on December 31st. On the other hand, if there is a disposition on the part of producers to sell to the circuits for no longer than a year or two, Hoyts and Union might satisfy themselves that it would be more profitable to present a united front to the distributors than fight each other.

The sensation of Stuart Doyle's resignation scarcely had subsided two weeks after the news was made public. Among financial interests associated with the Greater Union companies is an expressed opinion that he is going to be extremely difficult to replace. Should Hoyts and Union amalgamate their interests for a further term, however, it is said in authoritative circles that the logical choice for the job of sole managing director for the merged companies would be Charles E. Munro, now executive of Hoyts.

Independents' Ear to Ground

How keenly independent theatre-owners are watching Hoyts-Union developments is made clear by the current issue of Exhibitors' Monthly, the official mouthpiece of independents throughout the Commonwealth. This paper declares that with the end of the current General Theatres agreement approaching, many new South Wales exhibitors are more or less apprehensive about future film supplies. "It is commonly said that the two big circuits may amalgamate later," the article proceeds, "in which case independents may be asked to pay more film hire 'to make up the leeway' since the distributors may lose in dealing with one big national circuit instead of two; or that separate ways may be declared for by the circuits, in which case an expansion 'war' would probably lead to even worse results."

To meet any such contingencies, the N.S.W. Exhibitors Association has decided to approach distributors to see if any of them are willing to give its members three-year contracts on existing terms and conditions. The Association is endeavoring to persuade as many as possible of its members to link up with the plan, in order that this "bulk" proposition to the distributors will be viewed in the most attractive light.

The exhibitors do not expect all exchanges to agree to the idea, but they feel that even if two or three services were signed up they would be given a measure of security.

MGM Leases Sydney Theatre

MGM has expanded its Australian theatre interests by acquiring a long-term lease of the Sydney Liberty, an intimate house of 650 capacity owned by Imperial Theatres, Ltd. MGM has been operating the St. James, Sydney, for some years, but found that the one house provided an insufficient outlet. MGM assumes operating control of the Liberty this month and the first picture in under the new regime is "The Good Earth."

N. B. Freeman, MGM chief here, says that the Liberty will be his company's "show window" in Sydney, and that seasons will be governed by no consideration except receipts. On many occasions at the St. James, he said, it had been necessary to withdraw pictures at the height of their success in order to prevent other releases from banking up.

Formerly the Rialto, a second-run Hoyts house, the Liberty was remodeled three or four years ago, and acquired by Imperial Theatres, Ltd., when the lease which until then had been held by Hoyts, had terminated. Under a first-run hold-over policy the Liberty did very well, and the managing director, David N. Martin has the distinction of having run "Show Boat" there no fewer than 47 weeks. Mr. Martin denies that he will now transfer his activities to another theatre organization, saying that he is devoting his energies to the development of Imperial Theatres "in an important new enterprise to be announced shortly."

MGM will be opening a new house in Brisbane towards the close of this year. For the past three years the company has been operating the Metro in Melbourne.

Lloyd Hughes has arrived here to star in Cinesound's "Lovers and Luggers."

Would Restrict Theatres

The Film Board of Trade at Sydney has approved a formula for the restriction of theatre building, but particulars have not yet been made available. Members emphasize that the scheme will not bring monopolies in any district, but is a logical and economical solution of a problem that has become most serious.

Exhibitors Re-elect Lawson

At the annual general meeting of the N.S.W. Exhibitors' Association, the president, Robert Lawson, was reelected for a year. Trade topics discussed included the Board of Trade's theatre restriction formula, speedy conclusion on which was urged. Other items on the agenda included sixpenny admissions, ad valorem duties, imperial quota proposals and contingent legislation. All these matters were placed in abeyance.

Loew's Contracts For 40 Columbia, All UA Films

A Loew's-Paramount contract still was pending this week after the signing of agreements with the theatre circuit by United Artists and Columbia. The first pacts with Loew's for the 1937-'38 season were signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Universal.

Although the UA and Columbia agreements are for one year periods, the term of the Paramount transaction is contingent upon the two companies agreeing on prices to govern a long term contract.

Under the United Artists agreement, Loew's has signed for the company's entire output for more than 100 theatres throughout the country. The first picture to be handled under the new arrangement will be "Stella Dallas" which will open at the Music Hall, New York, July 29th.

The contract with Columbia calls for 40 features, not including westerns, for the 1937-'38 season.

Representing Loew's in both transactions were C. C. Moskowitz, Joseph R. Vogel, and Eugene Picker. UA was represented by George J. Schaefer, and A. W. Smith, and Columbia by Abe Montague, Rube Jackter and Lou Weinberg.

Odlum Describes "Ideal Conditions"

If Atlas Corporation were operated under "ideal" conditions, its investments would be managed competitively by a group of investment banking firms, according to testimony given by Floyd B. Odlum, president, during hearings on investment trusts before the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The head of the corporation which owns 50 per cent of the RKO stock and holds an option to purchase the remaining 50 per cent from Radio Corporation of America, made the statement after he had voiced the opinion that there is no reason why there should not be a connection between investment banking houses and investment trusts.

Mr. Odlum contended a large part of the trained investment personnel is found in investment bankers organizations.

Paramount Due To Test N.D. Law

Filing of Paramount's action testing the constitutionality of legislation recently enacted in North Dakota which would prohibit producer ownership of film houses in the state will begin in about two weeks. The action will seek to enjoin enforcement of the law.

In Wisconsin, the legislature adjourned without acting upon a similar bill introduced there some time ago. It is not known whether the divorcement will be attempted at the next session or not.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 77

Bluebook School Question No. 77 was: (A) What is the best method of cleaning carbon clamps? (B) How much lost motion is permissible in a gear train? (C) How may such lost motion be accurately measured?

The following made acceptable answers: C. Rau and S. Evans; D. Danielson; C. Oldham; J. R. Prater; C. L. Loft; G. E. Doe; H. Edwards; O. H. Schmidt; L. Cimikoski; M. and J. Devoy; H. B. Smith; H. Bunker; J. A. Zachritz; C. Champney; P. and L. Felt; T. F. Bochert; H. T. Plum, J. H. Morton, M. O'Connell and D. A. Shea; D. E. Birdsong; W. H. Edmonds; A. W. Baxter; A. Cook; L. Hayes; F. H., S. and P. Delbey; C. Lonie; W. Limmroth; A. L. Cooper; W. Winkler and R. R. Robbins; T. and W. Turk; L. F. and G. Brown; J. K. Robinson and R. E. Bullard; R. and K. Wells; S. R. Hewitt; R. D. Hicks and P. F. Maxwell; S. H. Billings; A. H. Bradley; R. S. Welch; S. N. Baxter; L. A. Beachwood and M. F. Robinson; S. R. Cuddy; J. R. Davidson and W. R. Matthews; T. L. Strobey; W. L. Morehouse; G. L. Goss; B. B. Hornstein and R. R. Jacobs; L. N. Schofield; S. N. Lockhard and O. S. Malaby; E. F. and M. Wentworth; G. T. Jones and A. Leonard; A. C. Greene; T. W. Redhouse; D Morgan; B. L. Sanderson; K. N. Alberts; D. Davis and E. M. Brown; V. F. Nutan and W. A. Kendal; H. T. Randolph; F. D. Scanlon; R. H. Carter; H. Lathrope and M Dey; A. D. Lonby; T. N. Kent and B. L. Cooper; O. L. Goldstein and M. Samuels; L. M. Roberts and W. C. Bant; L. E. Dodson and H. T. Todd; D. and W. Porter; E. Exline; W. V. Henderson and T. T. Brown; M. L. Grahame; H. D. Maxwell; T. Lavenburg.

On the whole I believe it best to summarize the replies, as follows: There is a large preponderance of favoritism for cleaning clamps with crocus cloth wrapped around a steel bar a little smaller than diameter of carbon used in the clamp to be cleaned. Some favor a slot cut lengthwise in the bar to a depth equal to half its diameter, into which one edge of a strip of crocus cloth may be inserted, the cloth passed around the bar and the opposite edge inserted in the slot beside the first one, which to me seems rather impracticable by reason of the difficulty that would be experienced in entering the second edge.

Another and what seems a more practicable plan is to use a similar bar of perhaps somewhat less diameter, around which a strip of crocus cloth may be tightly rolled until the desired diameter is obtained, whereupon one end of the cloth is held by the tight pressure of a strong rubber band doubled several times; or, if it be preferred, it is possible to use very fine emery cloth, say No. 0 or No. 00, though while it would do an equally good job of cleaning, it doubtless would remove somewhat more metal and would not produce so high a burnish as would the crocus cloth.

However, whichever is used, the bar upon which it is wrapped should be bent at one end so that a handle is formed, and it should be sufficiently long for a good grip to be had at both the handle and the opposite end, and in working it back and forth under slight pressure exerted by the carbon clamp screw or nut, a twisting motion should be employed.

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 82

What constitutes a harmful glare spot in a motion picture auditorium? Explain, in detail, its damaging effects.

To join the Bluebook School merely send in answers. Place name and question number upon first sheet. Address F. H. Richardson, No. 3 Tudor Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

Rau and Evans suggest a small motor mounted upon a suitable pedestal, to the shaft of which is attached, by means of a setscrew and male-and-female coupling, a special emery paper holder which really forms an extension of the motor shaft. This paper holder must have a slot cut in it into which the edge of the paper may be inserted, the remainder of the sheet being wound upon the shaft, the completed diameter being that of the carbon used in the clamp to be cleaned. That such an arrangement would clean and polish the clamp is quite obvious, though I do not know where such an extension could be obtained, and to make one would be quite a chore.

Several approved the following plan, set forth by O. S. Mallaby: "Some time ago in your Comment in Better Theatres, you described a carbon clamp cleaning tool used at one of the big New York City theatres. It seemed so very evidently excellent that we immediately put in a requisition for a small motor such as is used to mount emery wheels upon. We had friend manager get one that would mount a wheel on either end, and secured six wire brush wheels for trial, finally, after experimenting, selecting two of five-inch diameter, one rather coarse and one of quite fine wires. We mounted the motor in a small room adjoining the projection room which is used as a work shop, and do those brushes do a quick and bang-up job of cleaning and polishing out H. I. carbon clamps? Take it from us, the answer is an emphatic yes! Of course, though, this plan may only be employed where the clamps are readily removable. We keep extra sets of clamps, clean a set today and next morning the first duty when we arrive is to remove the set used the day previous and insert the clean ones, those removed being cleaned later on that day."

(B) A surprising fact is that out of all the mass of answers, only one gave evidence of thorough understanding of what is taught on page 236 of the Bluebook of Projection. R. and K. Wells say, "We do not believe the question is quite correct, Dad. We think it should read: 'How much lost motion is permissible between the intermittent movement and the rotating shutter?' Please understand, we do not intend this as a criticism, for we realize that the school represents a task of such size that an occasional slip can hardly be avoided." [I thank you, gentlemen. Your criticism is fully justified and shows that you really understand the matter, for it is the lost motion between the intermittent sprocket and shutter that counts and part may be in the various shaft bearings, in the gear train and in the intermittent itself. —F. H. R.]

"Lost motion up to a maximum of 3/16 of an inch movement of the rim of the flywheel, is permissible even in a new projector mechanism. But when by wear this is increased to a maximum of 5/16, the mechanism should have a general overhauling to take up the slack in bearings, gearing, etc., for the reason that unless this be done the shutter will have too much back lash, with the result that travel ghost will develop unless the master blade width be more than would be required were the lost motion reduced to a nominal amount, therefore light is wasted and flicker tendency increased."

(C) Oscar H. Schmidt says, "The lost motion may be measured by first affixing a prick punch mark on some part of the mechanism frame as close as possible to the inner edge of the flywheel rim. Then, having the intermittent movement 'on the lock', make another similar mark upon the flywheel rim, near its inner edge and a sufficient distance from the frame mark to enable accurate work when the wheel is rotated. Next have an assistant hold the rotating shutter stationary and rotate the flywheel as far (in either direction) as it will go. Fix one of the caliper points in the frame mark, and the other in the flywheel mark, and with the shutter still held stationary, measure distance between the caliper points, or better still, prick the points into paper, Then having rotated the flywheel as far as it will go, in the opposite direction, shutter held stationary all the while, again fix the caliper points into the punch marks. The difference between the two measurements will of course be the exact amount of lost motion between the intermittent and shutter, including the intermittent itself."

I might add that if no assistant is available the rotating shutter may be anchored immovable for the test by attaching a cord to its lower rim and suspending a weight from it.

COLUMBIA

END OF THE TRAIL: Jack Holt, Louise Henry—This is an unusually fine western, so good in fact that we brought it back. The story includes Teddy Roosevelt. Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

I PROMISE TO PAY: Leo Carrillo, Chester Morris—Very nice. Everyone liked it, good interest story, plenty of action. Running time, 66 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

RACKETEERS IN EXILE: George Bancroft, Evelyn Venable—You exhibitors who are looking for class A pictures for your Sunday opening should hop onto this one. It will please all classes of movie patrons. Do not make the mistake of passing this one up, as it packed a punch.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

TROUBLE IN MOROCCO: Jack Holt, Mae Clarke—Nothing to it, no one liked it. Running time, 60 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

WHEN YOU'RE IN LOVE: Grace Moore, Cary Grant—We just cannot get any money with Grace Moore. An excellent picture. Receipts clear off.—C. L. Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FIRST NATIONAL

GREEN LIGHT: Errol Flynn, Anita Louise—One of the best. A great story. Well done. Lacks box office.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MOUNTAIN JUSTICE: Josephine Hutchinson, George Brent—Good picture of its type depicting the life of the Southern Mountain people, inspired, I think, by the child marriages that have occurred down there. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

AFTER THE THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy—A grand picture, one that holds attention from beginning to end. Full of clever comebacks, as a side line to a mystery that delights.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

CAMILLE: Greta Garbo, Robert Taylor—They seemed to come out to this better than we had hoped, a few men walked out, and were decidedly of the opinion that it was too high class for them, but on the whole we are glad we showed it.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

FAMILY AFFAIR, A: Lionel Barrymore, Cecilia Parker, Eric Linden—A grand picture for small towns. Played by a great cast, it had everything. This is the type we need in these small communities. Running time, 69 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MAYTIME: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Grand production. But not for the small town. It does get out some of the regular stay-at-homes but falls down on regular theatre patrons who like their screen fare lively, modern and with plenty of comedy. Believe that the trailer on this picture drove people away instead of bringing them in. Running time, 132 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PARNELL: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Edna Mae Oliver—Two top rating stars, and evidently a costly picture to produce, and, as a picture, it was given thought and care in production for authenticity to this era in Ireland's destiny. But the business done on it was very disappointing. It is just another that adds prestige to the house that runs it, but you can't pay your bills on prestige. I'll give Metro credit for always trying some other angle to attract the public, but I don't like to pay for their experiments, not to the tune that this one cost.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

PERSONAL PROPERTY: Jean Harlow, Robert Taylor—Excellent, we thought. Drew extra business possibly on account of the recent death of Harlow. We'll miss her! Running time, 84 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PICK A STAR: Jack Haley, Patsy Kelly, Mischa Auer—No dice on this one. It missed and missed plenty. They dragged in a little bit of everything even to the menace Auer, and, of course, Jack comes to the rescue, and all did it well with the exception that Auer's sequence was painful to watch for most of the audience. He is a pain any way you put him, if the audience can be believed. The Lion can't roar about "Pick A Star."—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TARZAN ESCAPES: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—Tarzan pictures always do well for us, the kids and the young folks came out in full force.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D.

THEY GAVE HIM A GUN: Spencer Tracy, Gladys George, Franchot Tone—Well produced and was to some extent a psychological study of the effect of war and the aftermath of unsettled men who came back from the front—one going gangster. Average business. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

UNGUARDED HOUR, THE: Loretta Young, Franchot Tone—A very good program picture, which was played on a dual bill with Buck Jones to exceptionally good business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WAY OUT WEST: Laurel and Hardy—Give us more pictures like this for Saturday. It pleased and it drew.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PARAMOUNT

DOCTOR'S DIARY, A: John Trent, Helen Burgess—A very good program picture.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FORLORN RIVER: June Martel, Larry Crabbe—Zane Grey made into acceptable out-of-door picture.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

I MET HIM IN PARIS: Claudette Colbert, Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young—A lot better than average picture. It is excellent entertainment. Colbert does grand, and when you witness these two leading men working in this picture, you will say both of them are the best. You know that slogan, "If It's a Paramount," well, that seems to fit here.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

JOHN MEADE'S WOMAN: Edward Arnold, Francine Larrimore—Terrible—did not please and did not draw. It has a sad ending and that makes it all the worse.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kans. Small town patronage.

JOHN MEADE'S WOMAN: Edward Arnold, Francine Larrimore—This caused a lot of comment, both for and against. Haven't had a picture in months which caused such a diversified opinion. Was wonderfully acted, we thought, but many of our patrons did not care for Miss Larrimore. Believe she would be swell in a dress-up role. Running time, 87 minutes. —Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

JOHN MEADE'S WOMAN: Edward Arnold, Francine Larrimore—Place this in the weak spot on a double feature. Why they make these, we do not understand.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

JUNGLE PRINCESS, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland—Good action program picture which pleased very well. Lamour is nice to look at and has a swell voice. Where did they get all those monkeys? Running time, 84 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MAKE WAY FOR TOMORROW: Victor Moore, Beulah Bondi—I would like to have some one tell me why they stay away from a picture like this one. No doubt critics will say this picture rates right along with such pictures as the "Informer," and as far as my theatre is concerned it does this very thing, positively no customers. It is a real masterpiece. It is a real box office flop—No Fooling.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

MURDER GOES TO COLLEGE: Roscoe Karns, Marsha Hunt—Just a little program picture. Still don't believe you can mix comedy and mystery. One or the other will predominate and spoil the other. Pleased only fairly well. Running time, 71 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PLAINSMAN, THE: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—A really big Western which did some better than average business but not as much as it should have done.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kans. Small town patronage.

SWING HIGH, SWING LOW: Fred MacMurray, Carole Lombard—Was disappointed in this, not as big as Paramount claims. Only average biz, or a little less. The trumpet playing was dubbed in and it is noticeable.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kans. Small town patronage.

TURN OFF THE MOON: Charles Ruggles, Johnny Downs, Eleanore Whitney—Pleased patrons as much as some of the much touted musical comedy dramas. Ruggles always good and the young people are on the up-grade.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

REPUBLIC

RIDE, RANGER, RIDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—I think Autry is about the worst on the screen, but the public goes for him and he is doing good business.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kans. Small town patronage.

ROARIN' LEAD: Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan—These Three Mesquiteers are turning out some good westerns and these stars are getting some drawing power.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kans. Small town patronage.

RKO-RADIO

HOLLYWOOD COWBOY: George O'Brien, Cecilia Parker—These Geo. O'Brien pictures are always good and do pretty fair at the box office.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kans. Small town patronage.

MEET THE MISSUS: Victor Moore, Helen Broderick—Mighty good little picture. Plenty of laughs from start to finish. If you can get them in it will please. Only did average business.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kans. Small town patronage.

RACING LADY: Ann Dvorak, Smith Bellew—Below average program which did not draw at all for me.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kans. Small town patronage.

SEA DEVILS: Victor McLaglen, Preston Foster, Ida Lupino—Fairly good picture of its type but with a sad ending.— Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kans. Small town patronage.

THERE GOES MY GIRL: Ann Sothern, Gene Raymond—Program, with the stars apparently not up to the mark set in other pictures and by Miss Sothern with Paramount.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

THERE GOES MY GIRL: Ann Sothern, Gene Raymond—Fair newspaper story, though this is only a program picture with not extra good drawing power. —Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kans. Small town patronage.

WOMAN I LOVE, THE: Paul Muni, Miriam Hopkins—War story that did not hit and better have not been played, for it was a wasted date despite the picture was well produced although slow in tempo.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

20TH CENTURY-FOX

DIMPLES: Shirley Temple, Frank Morgan—After reading many reports on this picture, we felt it must not be very good, but if she never makes them any worse than this it will be O.K. in this situation. Business good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Will Rogers, Bill Robinson—Last year this was our biggest box office attraction, but for some unknown reason we did only average business in playing it for the second time.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

IT HAD TO HAPPEN: George Raft, Rosalind Russell—An old picture, without stars or any special drawing name, but those who saw it liked it very much.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MISS NOBODY: Jane Withers, Ralph Morgan—This picture drew well, almost as well as a Shirley Temple. In fact, many say they like this little star even better.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

MESSAGE TO GARCIA, A: John Boles, Barbara Stanwyck, Wallace Beery—Here is a fine picture, that I regret none told me about sooner. We passed it up, due to some adverse exhibitor reports, and now we are sorry we did not play it earlier, and step on it with a little emphasis.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

UNITED ARTISTS

ONE RAINY AFTERNOON: Francis Lederer, Ida Lupino—This did not draw well, and did not seem to please, although I liked it personally. It has beautiful music, clever lines, but it lacks that something.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

STAR IS BORN, A: Janet Gaynor, Fredric March—Go to the limit on this one. Box office smash in any spot. Running time, 110 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

UNIVERSAL

RIDE 'EM COWBOY: Buck Jones—We played this in face of Cole Bros. Circus, playing in a neighboring city 18 miles away, with Ken Maynard in person, and we did record weekend business. The kids went wild, stood up and yelled "Come on Buck." This western is above the average, dealing with a cowboy who knows nothing about cars and wins an auto race, but still prefers his horse. If your situation has a western trend for weekends, don't pass this one up. It did better than "San Francisco," "Captain Blood," and many other socalled specials.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario Can. General, patronage.

TWO IN A CROWD: Joel McCrea, Joan Bennett—A fine little picture, that drew well.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

WARNER BROTHERS

DOCTOR SOCRATES: Paul Muni, Ann Dvorak—This is a very fine picture, interesting to all. It is old, so we put it on a cash night, but were proud to present it nevertheless.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

KID GALAHAD: Edward G. Robinson, Bette Davis, Wayne Morris, Humphrey Bogart—Good picture and acted right bang up to the top all the way through. Wayne Morris is a big guy and good looking. He was Kid Galahad. Whether it was the prize fight angle or not, it did not do the business that it deserved. Why I don't know, for I know that the Louis-Braddock fight pinned our ears back that night on a good picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

KID GALAHAD: Bette Davis, Edward G. Robinson—One of the best pictures of the season. A box office smash in any spot. Running time, 105 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

MIDNIGHT COURT: Ann Dvorak, John Litel—Good programmer, everyone liked it. Running time, 60 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR, THE: Paul Muni, Josephine Hutchinson—A very fine picture. Do not take it for high brow, it is interesting to young and old, and down to earth stuff. The title sounds heavy, but it has suspense, romance, human feelings, beautiful rural scenery, all that anyone can ask for.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

CINEMA CIRCUS: Musical Comedies—A very good color film of a circus, with many interesting movie folks. Should be popular for the kids on the weekend. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

EVERY SUNDAY: Tabloid Musicals—This one slipped up on us. It deserves extra billing as it has Judith Garland of Jack Oakie's radio program and Deanna Durbin, the star of "Three Smart Girls." They both give exceptionally good performances, and should be played up.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

HEARTS ARE TRUMPS: Our Gang Comedies—A dandy gang comedy that will please young and old.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD PARTY: Musical Comedies—A grand colored two-reel musical. Give this preferred time. Not only the stars, but good vaudeville and comedy—a host of names.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PENNY WISDOM: Pete Smith Specialities—Grand! Sure thing subjects of this type go over well with all types of patronage. This was exceptionally fine and should have feature billing. Running time, 10 minutes. —Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SWING WEDDING: Harman-Ising—Not up to the standard of these excellent cartoons.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO-RADIO

MAJOR BOWES AMATEUR PARADE: No. 6—Very ordinary, although it costs plenty of money. Our people laughed at the acts.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

CHINESE BAN ON 'NEW EARTH' DEFIED BY JAPANESE THEATRE IN SHANGHAI

Cinema in International Settlement Shows German-Japanese Film Without License from Police Board of Censors

by J. P. KOEHLER
in Shanghai

Defiance of Chinese government film censorship by the Japanese reached its peak when, ignoring the Shanghai Municipal Police Film Censor board, a Japanese cinema, "Towa," situated in the Hongkew district of the International Settlement in Shanghai, displayed for public performance the German-directed, Japanese film "The New Earth," despite the fact that the Shanghai Municipal Police film censor denied a license for showing this film because the theatre refused to make two cuts of scenes which the Board considered detrimental to public peace, and offensive to the Chinese people.

An American short subject, "Mongolia" (Fox Movietone), was recently passed by the Shanghai Municipal Police film censors only after certain cuts had been made and dialogue blacked out which referred to the Japanese activity in Mongolia, and the film was afterwards passed by the Central Film Censorship Committee in Nanking.

The Japanese, however, taking refuge under extraterritorial rights, with the reported approval of the Japanese Consular authorities, defied the Shanghai Municipal Police, and since Japanese films are not shown in Chinese controlled territory, did not apply to Nanking for the usual certificate from the Central Film Censorship Committee. The Towa theater ran "The New Earth" for several days, advertising in the newspapers in defiance of the Chinese law which forbids such advertising in advance of a license under penalty of heavy fines.

The Chinese censors are powerless to act since unless a film is shown in Chinese controlled territory, the Central Film Censorship Committee apparently has no jurisdiction. But the fact remains that other foreign film companies have had films delayed and fines levied, because such other foreign distributors depended upon exhibitions outside the foreign controlled areas, and could not afford to incur boycott of their product. Japanese films, being exhibited only in foreign or Japanese controlled areas, are able to defy the Central Films Censorship Committee in Nanking.

The Shanghai Municipal Police can close a cinema, or stop exhibition of a non-licensed film in the International Settlement. Other foreign distributors have never defied the Shanghai Municipal Police, and as far as can be learned, the Japanese Towa theatre has always had the Shanghai Municipal Police censor Japanese films, though it is understood that seldom have any but the Japanese members of the Shanghai Municipal police film censors reviewed such Japanese films for showing in the International Settlement.

It is claimed that Japanese films pay no Chinese Maritime Customs duties, as these films are brought in on Japanese vessels and otherwise conveyed to the theatre. Other foreign films must pay such duties, and furthermore, must, in all shipments for distribution in China, be accompanied by the Customs Identification Card, to which is attached a frame of the film showing the title, etc.

It is extremely unlikely that the Japanese authorities would allow the Shanghai Municipal Police to stop performance. Such action on the part of the police would undoubtedly call for "extreme action" on the part of the Japanese Naval Brigade in Shanghai.

The matter received considerable attention in the local press. The North China Daily News reported that four Chinese civic organizations in Shanghai had telegraphed a petition to Nanking demanding that "The New Earth" be censored in four places. The report said the organizations charged the film was political propaganda and was injurious to friendly Sino-Japanese relations. Objections were made to scenes showing a map of Manchoukuo, sections of the Great Wall and the silhouette of a Japanese soldier on sentry duty.

"The New Earth" was produced in Japan by Towa Shoji-Kaisha and was directed jointly by Dr. Arnold Fanck, German director, and Mansaku Itami. The dialogue is in Japanese with superimposed English titles.

Rigid Censorship Relaxed

Late developments from the Central Publicity Bureau in Nanking, which censors the press, books, advertising and motion pictures, have given new hope that in general, all censorship will probably be less rigid, but without affecting principles, in the future. Mr. Shao Li-Chi, the new Chairman of Central Publicity Bureau, has had wide experience, and has already affected certain relief in the censorship of foreign films.

The rigid requirement of the Central Film Censorship Committee that required the banning and seizure of films depicting Chinese in menial or degrading characterizations, has been relaxed to allow the deletion of objectional characterization.

This acts greatly in favor of numerous foreign films, in which there had been included in the cast some Chinese feature or character who did not conform with modern Chinese ideals. As a consequence "Theodora Goes Wild" (Columbia), "Stowaway" (Twentieth Century-Fox), "The Mighty Treve" (Universal); "After the Thin Man" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) have been duly cut and licensed for exhibition.

New Producers Group

Chinese producers, government officials and the press met at the inaugural banquet and meeting of the newly organized Association of Motion Picture Producers of China, in Shanghai.

The meeting was addressed by Mr. Shao Li-chi, head of the Central Publicity Department, who congratulated the association on its formation after a long struggle and predicted that the association will do great work in the field of education and culture.

The board of chairmen is composed of: Chang Shi-chuan, Shao Chey-son, Yieu Chun-tang, Tao Pei-shun, Wei Pang-feng, Chang Shien-kwan, and Chow Chien-yuan. Mr. Chin Ching-yu was appointed Secretary-General, and Mr. Pei Hung-chi acting Secretary. The Chairman, Mr. Tao Pei-shun, (United Photoplay Studio), addressed the meeting after the usual formalities were completed, expressing the aim of the association as a united organization in spreading education and culture.

What this new organization means to the producing branch of the industry in China remains to be seen. Production so far has been limited to around 50 features for 1936, but reports show that 1937 will indicate a decided increase in native films. That foreign distributors have reason to feel that their market is weakening in China is certain, yet the first five months of 1937 show more than 155 foreign features passed or to be passed by the Nanking censors, of which 140 are the product of the eight major American producers, while there have been several more applications for the extension of the licenses on old American films which still show earning power after three years' running.

The Wedding Of the Arts

If an engagement on the Broadway stage is not available to motion picture stars during the slack season, a vacation from the home studio is the next best thing, in the eyes of Walter Wanger. In other words, Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda and Joan Bennett, all under contract to the independent producer, are to return to the summer theatre soon.

Miss Sidney, who was borrowed by Samuel Goldwyn for "Dead End," will go East to star in the Theatre Guild's production of the Ben Hecht play, "To Quito and Back," rehearsals beginning August 15th. Leslie Banks will be her leading man.

As soon as Fonda and Miss Bennett have completed co-starring in "I Met Love Again," adapted from Allene Corliss' "Summer Lightning," Fonda leaves for New York to play the lead in Arthur Hopkins' production of "Blow Ye Winds," by Valentine Davies. Should the picture be finished in time, he will go on the stage in "The Virginian" for Richard Skinner and Day Tuttle at their summer home in Mt. Kisco.

Miss Bennett, whose performance in "Jarnegan" in support of her father, Richard Bennett, preceded her first film role, will go on the stage at Dennis, Mass., in "Secret Heart."

Mr. Wanger at one time was a stage producer in New York and London. Earlier he was associated with Granville Barker, handling Ernest Cossart and O. P. Heggie; was impresario of the Marberry Stock Company; stage-managed Jane Cowl and Irene Castle. Then on Broadway he starred Nazimova in "Ception Shoals."

Paramount Cuts Capital Stock

In a certificate filed with the Secretary of State at Albany last week, Paramount Pictures, Inc., reduced its capital stock from $41,000,000 to $29,856,649. The move was approved at a stockholders' meeting as essential to the conversion of preferred into common stock.

THE PASS SITUATION FROM ANOTHER ANGLE

Whether or not the recent symposium in these pages on passes will result in much immediate progress to eradicate this boll-weevil of the industry, general comment is of the opinion that keeping the subject in the spotlight will aid in cutting down the number of free admissions theatremen are presently distributing.

"Keep at it," encourages the membership and two recent communications to this desk provide the necessary ammunition for further discussion on another pertinent angle of the pass situation.

The first is a 14-inch co-op newspaper ad from a member wherein the contributor gave 25 passes for answers to questions concerning his attraction and the store that paid for the ad, the greatest part of the space given to the theatre. The second communication is a release from the publicity department of Hart, Schaffner & Marx, detailing a national advertising tieup wherein Henry Fonda will be shown wearing the clothier's new models. Says the story—"In a day when motion pictures draw an audience of millions, a tremendous army of potential buyers is just waiting to be directed into the proper merchandising channels." With which, of course, there is little argument.

In the beginning of merchandising tieins made by theatremen, hard-headed store men unversed in the possibilities of motion picture promotions had to be beguiled by something more than the name or face of a star in their advertising and display. Thus to obtain the tiein your theatreman was forced to offer something considered more substantial by the merchant and the "something" that often did the trick was the offer of passes in one form or another. Now, that may have been good business in the days when exploitation was "just a purp" but does it hold true today?

Few will deny that the cooperation of stars in selling merchandise by endorsement and suchlike is now big business; that important world-known corporations go to great lengths to corral important names for the advancement of their wares. And if this be so, then is it not time for the theatreman to take cognizance of the situation by effecting local tieins without the necessity of throwing in a handful of seats to complete the deal?

A quick answer of course is that the local storeman does not always view the setup from the same standpoint; that being less than promotionally-minded, the merchant demands more in return for his hard cash and unless the theatreman comes across with the requested passes, there will be no deal. And another answer, perhaps not so quick, is the manager's desire to put over a tiein that will look good in the eyes of the bossman.

But whatever the cause, there still remains to be proved that the deal will always fall through if the usual ducats are not forthcoming. And a certain way to find out is to effect merchant co-op tieins strictly on their merits.

MOVING THE MOUNTAIN

There are few managers today who refuse to realize the importance of radio in theatre advertising. Thus it is usual to find some sort of regular program or spot announcements included in many campaigns that come to this desk. That goes of course for situations with local broadcasting facilities but not entirely to the exclusion of towns without radio stations.

For instance, there is Danville, Illinois, which depends upon nearby WDZ in Tuscola for most of its radio entertainment. Realizing the value of this air publicity for the theatres under his supervision, E. E. Crabtree, Publix Great States City Manager for Danville, first sold the Tuscola station on the idea of a thrice-weekly "Behind the Sreens in Hollywood" broadcast from the lobby of the Fischer Theatre in Danville. Then he went out and interested local merchants in sponsoring the show, obtaining two leading stores for the tiein.

Now Crabtree goes on the air regularly to tell the folks about the stars and his coming shows. It costs him nothing more than the time and effort put forth in preparing his material which for the best part he secures from the various studio publicity departments. An effective setpiece in the lobby plugging the station, the program, sponsors and coming pictures is another device to build the prestige of the arrangement which is reflected in the increased listener-attention to the broadcast.

Crabtree's accomplishments in localizing his radio advertising so effectively may well serve other theatremen in similar situations as an example of what can be done to "bring the mountain to Mohammed."

Pianist and Banjoist Plug "Town" Hits

To sell "Top of the Town" at the Astor Theatre, Reading, Pa., Dwight Van Meter planted pianist and banjoist in music window on main street. First Time Broadcast In China on "Live"

Alexander Krisel, U. A. manager for China, put on an intensive campaign for the opening of "You Only Live Once" at the Metropole Theatre in Shanghai.

What is reported to be the first time in China, was a radio broadcast with the program based on the pressbook radio script. A special amateur cast appeared in the broadcast for fifteen minutes on four days in advance of opening.

Another "first timer" was securing permission from the police department to place safety posters on all signal stations throughout the city and orchestrations of the theme song was planted in leading hotels, night clubs and cabarets.

Store Puts On Contest For Elliott's "Town" Date

Local furniture dealer was promoted for "Top of the Town" by Doc Elliott, Canton, Ohio, on what he called a magic square contest in which numbers had to be rearranged so that the total horizontally, vertically and diagonally totaled the same number. Store donated radio to winner, theatre coming through with passes for runnersup.

Five and ten featured a "Town" sundae, using streamers on store mirrors, imprinted pennants were strung throughout store and drug store featured large window display of cosmetics with panel featuring women stars from the picture with plenty of stills.

Railroad Employees Attend "Barriers"

It was Canadian Pacific Railroad night at the Orpheum Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., when Ivan Ackery invited old time railroad employees to the opening of "Silent Barriers" recently. Photos and stories were run in papers.

As an eye-attractor street bally, Ackery planted large barrel on street corner with card on top reading "The only white rattlesnake in captivity," folk looking into the barrel read card in bottom with copy "We may have fooled you this time, but you won't be fooled if you see," etc., etc. Local Scottish band paraded to theatre with banners and broadcast from theatre foyer with prominent local celebrities giving brief addresses over radio.

Parker Organizes Club Among Theatre Patrons

Organizing what he chooses to call his "Tudor Circle Club," Kenneth B. Parker, Tudor Theatre, Dewsbury, Yorkshire, England, already though only a year old, boasts a membership exceeding 1,000. The club, an adult one, was designed solely for the interchange of social ideas between the management and patrons.

Some of the benefits that members derive are: Use of unbrellas when it rains, monthly programs in advance, advice on all matters concerning films and film stars and a free ticket for the show on members' birthdays. Ken reports the club as extremely successful and local newspapers have played it up big.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

May Queen

Candidates from each class of local high school vied with each other for the selection of a May Queen, contest organized by Ted DeGrazia for his "Maytime" date at the Lyric, Bisbee, Ariz. Ballots were published in local paper and boxes provided at theatre for the voting results which were announced at a Maytime dance.

DeGrazia also promoted two other sizeable exploitations, one being a singing contest, winner given trip to Tucson and an audition before University of Arizona voice department head. Other click was a star revue and stage show based on costumes in the picture.

Parade

Parade with police escort was arranged by Hy Gordon, Schine's Avon, Watertown, N. Y., for "Hit Parade" procession followed by nine boys, each carrying a letter of the title. At intervals the boys would change places, then get back into position spelling out the title again. Co-op page was landed in which various names were planted in ads, tickets going to those spotting their names. Girls were spotted at telephones calling names at random from directory advising of the opening, music store came through with entire window display and menu cards were imprinted in all leading restaurants.

Front Page

Turning a mishap into an unexpected page one story was Howard Robarge's experience on his two-a-day date for "Romeo and Juliet" at the Cosmo, Merrill, Wis. The reserved seat tickets late in delivery, Robarge wired MGM to have them shipped by air and the arrival of the tickets inspired the front page break.

Co-op page and misspelled word contest were also planted. All schools in the neighborhood and surrounding neighborhoods were contacted and schools supplied with study guides and advised of special students' discount tickets.

Shorts Tiein

Now devoting his time to MGM exploitation, Round Tabler Louis Orlove was recently reported to have arranged a neat series in the Wisconsin News on the Pete Smith short "Gilding the Lily." Louis interested women's editor of the paper for a series of makeup photos and copy showing how correct application of cosmetics improves appearances. Theatre was duly credited in the stunt.

JULY DEADLINE MIDNIGHT, AUGUST 7

From date of this issue, exactly three weeks remain for entries in the Quigley Awards for the month of July. Deadline has been set for midnight of Saturday, August 7, at which time all campaigns must be at Committee Headquarters.

The following have been asked to serve as judges: Louis Frisch, Randforce Circuit; John D. Clark, Twentieth Century-Fox; and Si Seadler, M-G-M.

Slogan Contest

Cash prizes were awarded by local insurance company in connection with a safety slogan contest sponsored by Wayne Williams, Majestic, Mansfield, Ohio, for his short subject date on "Lucky Spills." Contest was planted in paper with co-op ads from agencies and auto dealers. Wayne also promoted a "safety week" and to attract attention two wrecked cars were roped off on main square with picture copy. Company provided safety posters with playdates in exchange for which Williams distributed insurance pamphlets with theatre imprint.

Lamm's 10th

Series of celebrations by neighborhood merchants and home office executives helped signalize Julius Lamm's 10th anniversary week at Warner's Uptown, Cleveland. In attendance at birthday cake cutting ceremonies were district manager Fishman, Sid Dannenberg, advertising head and Sol Bragin, zone film buyer. Congratulatory wires from stars were also promoted and displayed in the lobby.

Animation

Animated display for his "Waikiki Wedding" lobby was constructed by C. T. Spencer, Capitol, Hamilton, Ontario, with large frame containing blowup scene stills before which colored doll with grass skirt and all the trimmin's danced. Card attached to doll read "meet Lulu from Honolulu."

Leading store devoted window to display of "Waikiki" dresses, background depicting Hawaiian scene with palm trees and cutout dancers, scene stills and playdates were used profusely. Day ahead Spencer also planted sitdown striker in front of theatre explaining stunt with tiein copy.

Advertising Class

Professor at the local duPont high school was contacted by Roscoe Drissel, Loew's, Wilmington, Del., in connection with the opening of "A Star Is Born," the former lecturing to approximately 1,200 pupils on the difference between technicolor and black and white film. During his talk, the Professor used a strip of color film which carried the title of the picture and suggested that the pupils see it as a follow up on the lecture.

Drissel further contacted the teacher in charge of advertising class in Wilmington high school, offering his assistance to the class for a session on theatre publicity. Pupil was assigned to cover the subject with Drissel helping to prepare thesis and talk based on the picture, which was given before classes in general assembly.

Two McDonalds

Name of cashier at the Opera House, Millinocket, Me., is Janet McDonald, which was seized upon by Manager Bill Johnson for some extra publicity on his "Maytime" date. In exchange for mimeographing a music week concert program for the local Philharmonic Club, Bill secured picture plug. For lobby, entire ceiling and upper part of walls were covered with pink and green crepe paper streamers, banner covering entire side was lettered in glitter on rainbow background and contained several stills.

1907 Model

Hal Neides, Orpheum, San Francisco, Cal., found a different way to distribute gum packages promoted on "Devil Is Driving" by sending out several girls in uniform carrying baskets of the chicle and driving about town in 1907 model car. Jaloppy was bannered with driver in red devil's costume. Prevue was held for traffic judges, heads of women's clubs, etc., whose endorsements were used for publicity. Neides also arranged to have traffic violators sentenced to see the picture during the run.

Full co-op ad page was secured by Les Pollock, Loew's Rochester, Rochester, N. Y., banner across top reading "With a cargo of sales 'Captains Courageous' comes to Loew's." Each merchant's ad was set in sail form, with stem of boat carrying the theatre ad. Cast, playdates, etc., were scattered throughout the page.

BABY CONTESTS CLICK WITH M&P MANAGERS

Manual Outlining Highlights of Successful Tieins Put Out by Ad Head Browning

The modus operandi of the M & P baby contest put on in the past by many of that circuit's managers has been detailed by publicity director Harry Browning in a complete manual on the subject.

From time to time details of individual baby contests from the New England sector have been run in the Round Table and the following taken from Browning's manual is a compilation of highlights in campaigns executed by Maurice Corkery, Barney Dobrans, Harry Botwick and Mel Morrison which were reported by the members as highly successful.

The first step in conducting a baby contest according to Browning is to enlist the wholehearted cooperation of local newspaper and ask them to sponsor the contest. This arranged, the next step is to secure cooperation of a photographer who agrees to take a picture of each baby registered, giving a photo to each and one to the theatre where it is displayed in lobby. He also agreed to take an ad on the contest page; photographer will be interested in stunt because it brings parents into his studio with their babies. According to Browning, when parents see the finished photographs, about 20 per cent of them leave orders for pictures.

Register Entries First Week

During the initial week of contest entrants are registered at the theatre. Four days are usually allotted for registration and during that time the newspaper cooperates with free ads and news stories. A trailer is also used on the screen. After registration parents are given an appointment with the photographer. At the close of the registration period the photographer supplies the theatre with one picture of each baby. These are put on display in the lobby and each picture is identified by the baby's name.

On the following week the voting in the preliminary contest starts, ad is run gratis in paper with names of babies. Voting is done by ballot good for 10 votes run daily by paper and a ballot worth 50 votes is given with each theatre admission. Ballots are deposited in the ballot box located in theatre lobby not later than a specified time at the end of the week.

During the week of preliminary voting newspaper procures ads for double truck pages. These run about once a week for four weeks and papers set a minimum and maximum amount of space for each ad so that no merchant can dominate the page. The contest is explained to each advertiser and he understands that he is to sponsor a baby, whose picture is to appear in his ad in the double truck for the next four weeks. The advertiser also agrees to contribute a gift to the baby he sponsors and these gifts are placed on display in lobby.

The number of advertisers participating decides the number of babies to compete in the main contest. Assuming that 200 babies register and 50 advertisements tie up, therefore the 50 babies receiving the greatest number of votes in the preliminary contest are eligible to enter the main contest. The names of the 50 babies are placed in a box and drawn—one baby for each advertiser. From then on the babies are known by the name of the sponsoring firms instead of their own names and their photos appear in all the advertising of their particular firm..

The main contest breaks with the double-truck page and continues for approximately four weeks. The double-truck runs once each week throughout the contest. Each advertisement has a value of 25 votes for its particular baby. The daily newspaper ballot run throughout the contest is good for 10 votes when properly filled in with the first name of any baby. The cooperating merchants are allowed to issue votes on the basis of one vote for each cent of purchases. During the contest the newspaper cooperates with stories and standings of the contestants.

Prizes donated by the merchants are displayed in the lobby with credit lines. It is suggested that these be made worth-while enough to stimulate interest and competition. Votes deposited in ballot box in the theatre lobby are counted at the end of every day so that the newspaper can publish the standings. This aids in maintaining interest in the contest.

Awards are given from the stage at the end of the contest. Award night is usually held at a regular evening performance and parents of all contestants urged to be present.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Radio Contest Planted By Brown on "Woman"

Lou Brown of Loew's Century, Baltimore, tied in with the local radio station for a contest wherein listeners sent in their pet names for their husbands, best names receiving guest tickets for "Woman Chases Man." Stunt caused a lot of comment during the five days of its duration.

Lou also sold the A. & P. stores the idea that a man's heart is best reached through his stomach. Chain went for the gag with window displays, streamers, throwaways, etc.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Gag Street Bally Used By Lykes for "Out West"

Man dressed as miner paraded streets of Cleveland as part of Jack Lykes' street bally on "Way Out West" at Loew's Stillman. Chap stopped at intersections making a spiel and offering $5 bills for $4.95. Catch in the stunt was that people had to have the correct change on them.

Another stunt that Lykes used was the distribution of 5,000 "gold mine deed" heralds with cuts of Laurel and Hardy in the seals. These were handed out in various schools and different parts of the city.

To Riverside Theatre Patrons:

I BOOKED A PICTURE, TO START NEXT WEDNESDAY AT THE FOX RIVERSIDE, WHICH IS WITHOUT DOUBT ONE OF THE YEAR'S MOST HILARIOUS COMEDIES. BUT IN MY OPINION IT IS HANDICAPPED WITH ONE OF THE YEAR'S WORST TITLES—"WOMAN CHASES MAN."

IN DISCUSSING THE PROBLEMS OF ADVERTISING THIS PICTURE AT OUR STAFF MEETING, THE EMPLOYES ASKED FOR A SPECIAL SCREENING AND TO LET THEM DO THE ADVERTISING. I AGREED, AND THEY HOWLED AT THE PICTURE LAST NIGHT AFTER THE REGULAR SHOW. NOW THEY'RE BUSY MAKING PLANS AND WRITING ADS, AND I'M JUST AS CURIOUS AS YOU ARE TO SEE WHAT THEY DO OR SAY!

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Dear Herald:

When they made the southern tier of counties of this state they stood 'em up on edge, and it is just up one hill and down another, and when you travel 'em you are apt to think you are on a roller coaster on Coney Island on July 4th, 1492, but then April Shower don't mind 'em, for, like the Herald, she covers the country, hills and all, even if it is hot.

John Waller still operates the theatre at Osceola, and he has been there ever since away back when Uncle Ezra married Aunt Pruny that time. When we first met John he was operating a little "store show," but he recently built the Lyric, a swell theatre nice enough for any town. The people of Osceola have put up with him for a long time and the only fault they find with him is he snores so much of nights. We used to do that until the neighbors got to complaining about it and now we sleep with a clothes-pin on our nose. If they ever put John in the cell next to ours we are going to kick about it, too.

You should go to Osceola some time and meet John and also see his new Lyric theatre; they are both of 'em among "The Four Hundred" of Iowa, and the crops around Osceola look like they would do away with the depression.

You no doubt have already heard a whole lot about W. H. Eddy and his Empress theatre at Indianola; if you haven't you haven't ever heard very much. W. H. showed us around the town and took us out to a lake where they are making preparations for a summer resort that Iowa can be proud of. When this is completed they should advertise it so the public would know about it, for it is clear off the highway and surrounded by timber. He also took us out and showed us their golf course, which reminded us of what the Doc told us about playing golf and this, of course, reminded us to curb our language. Doggone these doctors, anyway.

Mr. Eddy's Empress theatre is another of Iowa's beauty spots, and she has a lot of 'em. There is everything about this theatre for beauty and comfort that there ought to be about any theatre. It is good enough for the Indianola folks and if it is good enough for them it is good enough for Eddie and Wally.

A fellow told us while we were there that a shelter belt crew grubbed out oak trees, some as big as five inches through, to make room to plant those shelter belt sprouts. But we don't like to talk about that damphool thing for fear it might lead this typewriter into profanity. Well, anyhow, we had a dandy visit with Mr. Eddy and we want to thank him for the courtesy shown us.

There are a multitude of things we can't understand, two in particular. We can't understand what a Dutchman says when some one steps on his bunion nor what a woman says when she sings over the radio. We know what we say when we hear her, but then we never could savvy Chinese anyway.

Those who have travelled Iowa very much know about Winterset. Winterset is located right "Where the tall corn grows" and that's where Mr. A. B. Pettit has his Iowa theatre, and the Iowa theatre is good enough for Iowa, and anything good enough for Iowa is good enough for anybody. Mr. Pettit showed us a very royal time and he also gave us a theatre pass for Miss Merriam (just like the rest of the boys did). You know Miss Merriam is making a collection for her scrapbook. Not only that, but he asked us to renew his subscription to the Herald, although it wouldn't expire for three or four months, but he said he didn't want to miss a copy. (A good thought.)

W. H. Dussler came up here from Missouri and bought the Grand theatre at Greenfield. We met him and Mrs. Dussler last night and had a very lovely visit with them. Mr. Dussler had been a Herald subscriber long before he came to Iowa. Why anyone would want to leave Missouri is more than we understand, but then, of course, every one wants to come to Iowa.

A lot of you older fellows will remember away back when you used to hitch up old Fan and Jerry to the buckboard and go and take your girl out for a buggy ride. You used to wrap the lines around the whip-socket so that both of your arms would be free. Yes, you did, you know darned well you did, and there is no use to tell your wives you didn't, for they were probably in the buckboard, too. Nowadays the young fellows have to keep both eyes on the road and both hands on the steering wheel and this makes 'em miss a whole lotta fun. Gosh-all-fishhooks, Oscar, but wouldn't we like to go back to the "horse and buggy days" again, though?

When we got to Exira we found that W. D. White of the Palace theatre had gone up to Spirit Lake fishing, which was further proof of his excellent judgment, but we did go to his home and have a very pleasant visit with Mrs. White, just like we did when we were there before. We hope that Mr. White will be at home next time.

Mr. Budd edits the Anita paper and his son, C. G., operates the Rialto theatre, and between the two they are kept pretty busy. We parked April Shower in front of their office and Mr. Budd recognized us before we got out of the car. The question is, did he recognize us or did he recognize April Shower. Anyhow, he told C. G. to get the checkbook, for he didn't want to miss a single copy of the Herald, and this is something else you boys ought to remember.

Over at Manning we met J. F. Dethleffs working like a Hoosier decorating his Crystal theatre, putting in new chairs 'n' everything with a determination of giving the customers of the Crystal as comfortable show house as they could find anywhere. It beats all how that J. F. does work, and if the Manning folks don't show their appreciation of his efforts by attending the theatre we will be disappointed in the Manning folks. Thanks, J. F., for a very pleasant visit.

We next went to Denison to see Mr. Suggan of the Ritz theatre and found that he had also gone fishing. There's no sense in these boys going fishing without us, not a bit. Doggone the doggone luck, anyhow. J. C. Fanning of the Brownsville theatres at Brownsville, Texas, wouldn't do that, and we can imagine we can hear you say that there is no sense in continuing this any further, which we are accepting as a left-handed hint to quit.

"MY DAUGHTER KILLED A MAN!"

"My daughter killed Horace Mitchell—as surely as if she had pulled the trigger which ended his life!"

This heartbreaking cry was wrung from the tortured lips of Tod Swain, veteran "World" reporter, in accusing his daughter, lovely Vina Swain, reporter on the "Sentinel" staff, of "moral responsibility" in the death of Mayorality candidate Horace Mitchell, who committed suicide last night in the Swain home. Mitchell committed suicide after appearance of a story signed by Miss Swain, in which she "exposed" the candidate's youthful prison record.

GIRL NAMED MURDERESS! Lovely Vina Swain, star reporter for ex-gangster Charles Gillette's "Sentinel", shown with her father, Tod Swain, and her fiance, Ralph Houston, both of "The World" staff. Both men place the "moral responsibility" for the suicide of Horace Mitchell, Mayorality candidate, on Miss Swain, because of an expose story which she wrote in "The Sentinel" [illegible]

Voice and Music Heard at Its Best— When You Treat Your Theatre With

USG ACOUSTONE

Acoustone-treated Theatre, Chicago, Ill., Architect, A. L. Levy

■ Steady attendance depends almost as much on good hearing as on good shows. Acoustone*, USG fireproof acoustical tile, permits your show to be heard at its best, without distortion by overlapping reverberation. The natural result is increased audience appreciation—and increased business for you.

Applied overnight to new or old walls or ceilings, Acoustone requires no further decorating. Its travertine-like finish and rich integral colors provide a pleasing and distinctive decoration all their own, and one particularly suited to the modern trend in theatre design. Freshness is maintained by simple vacuum cleaning at a fraction of the cost of painting. Yet Acoustone may be painted if desired, without damage to its noise-absorbing ability.

Even with the five important advantages here shown—and maintenance considered—Acoustone is actually low in cost, the acoustical tile to use for all-around satisfaction.

There's a USG Acoustical Material to Solve Every Sound-Control Problem

USG sound-control service includes absorption treatments and materials to clarify hearing and reduce noise—also sound-insulation to reduce the travel of objectionable noise from room to room. USG acoustical engineers are always available to assist you in an advisory capacity, without obligating you in any way.

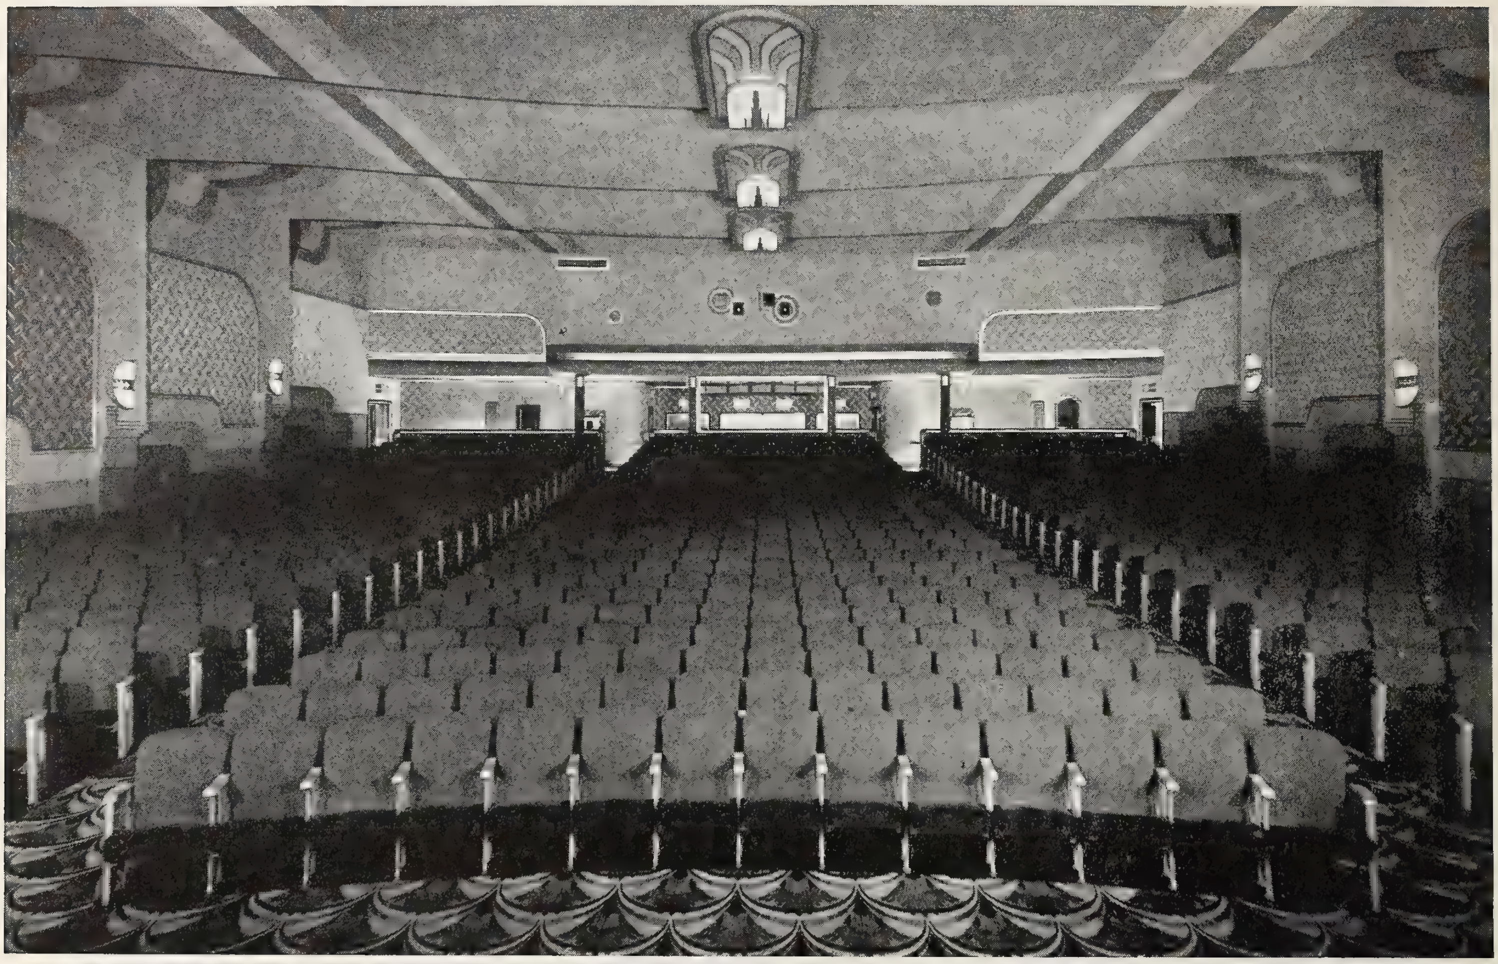
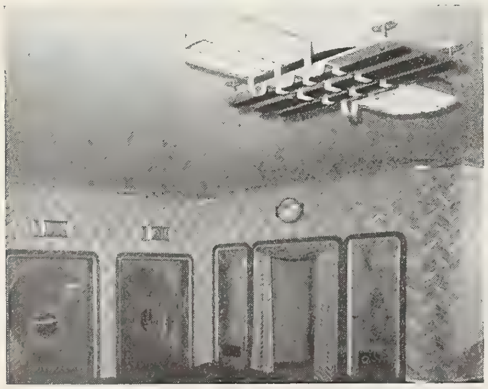
THE CALVERT: NEW WARNER THEATRE WITH CONTINENTAL SEATING PLAN





■ The 1,000-seat Calvert theatre in Washington is the latest of several recent additions to the Warner group in the nation's capital, which now numbers sixteen houses. A notable feature of the Calvert, besides its general design, is the seating, which, spaced 36 inches back-to-back, allows free enough passage to make broad banks of chairs feasible (the so-called "Continental seating plan"). The Calvert, which serves the residents of Georgetown and Massachusetts Avenue Park, was designed by John Eberson. It is of modern architecture and decoration throughout, but highly colorful on the interior. The lobby has walls paneled in various woods, outlined with aluminum. The auditorium walls are paneled with damask, which covers rock wool acoustic treatment. Blending tones of the basic colors red and brown, the panels are darker in tone as they approach the screen end of the auditorium. Illumination throughout is by means of lighting fixtures—ceiling troughs and plaques and semi-indirect wall brackets—of modern patterns executed in flashed and ribbed glass, and chromium-plated supports. In the auditorium the central ceiling fixtures are associated with air-inlet diffusers. The front of the Calvert is finished in Vitrolite with aluminum trim, and the same material is used for the box office. Entrance doors are of Formica inlaid with decorative aluminum strips. The air-conditioning system is equipped with Frick compressors for cooling, and includes auxiliary exhausts for the projection room, foyer and lounge areas. The Calvert was erected by the Globe Amusement Company of Washington and is operated under a long-term lease by Warner Theatres, under the supervision of John J. Payette, general manager of the Washington zone, with Alan Bachrach, formerly manager of Warners' Apollo in Washington, as resident manager. Construction was under the supervision of A. Julian Brylawski, manager of the Washington real estate department, and Herman A. Maier, chief of construction for Warner Theatres. » » » » »

VOLUME 128 JULY 24, 1937 NUMBER FOUR

Plans for 186 New Theatres Reported First Half of 1937

PLANS FOR the construction of 186 new theatres in the United States were announced during the first six months of 1937, according to a tabulation of reports received during the period from January 1 to July 1, by the Projects Bulletin Service of BETTER THEATRES. Thirty-five States are represented in the reports.

The greatest number of reports were received from the New England States, in which 42 projects were listed. The East North Central States (Illinois, Wisconsin, Ohio, Indiana) closely followed, however, with 41. In the latter group, Illinois led with the construction of 20 new theatres, which number was the largest reported by any single State. Connecticut led the New England section with sixteen.

It is to be pointed out that the total of 186 projects may not represent the true total for the entire country, if all types of theatres are considered. These reports come from correspondents located in all cities and delegated to "cover" the cities and rural areas tributary to those cities. It is possible, however, that some building projects, particularly those in very small towns, were not made known through the usual channels. Moreover, all remodeling projects, some of which are so extensive that they are reported as new theatres, have been eliminated from the count given here.

It is interesting to note that in the two sections of the country reporting the larger numbers of new theatres planned, the average seating capacity in each is much higher than the average capacity of all theatres operating in the United States at the end of the year 1936. The latter average was 640, whereas the average capacity of theatres projected in New England during the last six months is 880, while that in the East North Central States is approximately 900. The total number of seats represented in the projects reported by New England during the six months period is approximately 37,000, while the corresponding figure for the East North Central States is approximately 39,000.

The number of projects reported by each section and State is as follows:

New England States: Connecticut, 16; Maine, 2; New Hampshire, 5; Massachusetts, 13; Rhode Island, 1; Vermont, 5.

Middle Atlantic States: New York, 8; New Jersey, 8.

South Atlantic States: Florida, 2; Georgia, 2; Maryland, 1; North Carolina, 2; Virginia, 2.

East North Central States: Illinois, 20; Michigan, 3; Ohio, 11; Indiana, 1; Wisconsin, 6.

East South Central States: Alabama, 5; Kentucky, 1; Mississippi, 4; Tennessee, 2.

West North Central States: Iowa, 8; Missouri, 5; Nebraska, 5.

West South Central States: Arkansas, 4; Oklahoma, 2, Texas, 7.

Mountain States: Idaho, 3; New Mexico, 1; Colorado, 1.

Pacific States: California, 9; Oregon 7, Washington, 13; Montana, 1. In this area the average capacity was much less than that of the national average at the end of 1936, being only a few seats above 600. These 30 projects represent a total of 18,500 seats.

Individual reports, by sections and States, are listed on page 49.

$800,000 in Remodeling In W. Mo. and Kansas

A CONSERVATIVE estimate places the amount of money spent by exhibitors in Western Missouri and Kansas during the two years ended June, 1937, on remodeling and replacement between $700,000 and $800,000, according to survey of improvements made in that area. This includes complete outlay — construction, where there was any; architect's fees, paint, labor, sound equipment, chairs, carpets, air conditioning and refrigeration, light fixtures, marquees, projection equipment, etc.

Some 160 individual (independent) theatres spent more than half this amount, but the circuits, both independent and affiliated, representing around 135 houses in the area, accounted for a very substantial part of the total.

Principal items of expenditure were sound equipment, chairs, carpets and redecorations in general, and cooling equipment.

The work was generally scattered over the entire territory. Exhibitors in small cities and towns participated to as large an extent in the effort to modernize their theatres and make them more comfortable as those in the larger cities.

Some theatres have been almost completely rebuilt, the exhibitor seeking to overcome structural defects and space limitations by a completely revised use of the space within the original walls. Such jobs were relatively expensive, running all the way from $10,000 to $50,000.

At the other end of the scale are "cleanup" jobs, which consist of a general refurbishing — painting, possibly a new marquee, cleaning and painting inside, etc., or the installation of sound equipment only, or of air conditioning equipment only, and so on. These run from $500 to $1500. In between are the theatres on which from $3,000 to $15,000 was spent for a complete overhauling, new equipment, seating, furnishings, etc.—Kenneth Force, Kansas

Modernization Wave Reaches 400 Ia. Houses

IN 400 THEATRES in Iowa, remodelling to some degree has been done in the past two years, and in 300 of those the largest single item of equipment purchased was new chairs. During the two or three years previous to June of 1935 theatres had been kept operating with the smallest possible amount spent for upkeep. A great many theatres simultaneously came to the point where new chairs must be purchased—and they were, to the tune of $160,000.

This represents approximately one-fourth of the total amount spent in remodelling of motion picture houses in Iowa, which is estimated at $700,000. One equipment company alone handled between $65,000 and $70,000 in chair sales made to smaller houses and those independently owned.

After the terrific heat of the summer of 1935, air cooling systems did a big business, of which the largest number of sales came in 1936. Every theatre in Iowa has some system of cooling, but there is no doubt that further improvement will be made in this field. About $45,000 was the amount spent in the past two years for this type of modernization, of which close to $35,000 was spent in the smaller houses. The larger theatres had previously been air-cooled, though one must keep in mind that houses of the larger circuits, which were newly constructed, were equipped with air-cooling systems at the outset, the amount varying in estimates from $10,000 to $15,000.

New decoration and illumination systems were installed in probably 320 houses, yet did not run into such large expenditures in the smaller houses. For the 280 independent theatres, redecorating amounted to $25,000. However, in one circuit of 30 houses, redecorating ran to $60,000 which was matched by an equal amount spent on interior decorating of new theatres in this circuit. Practically the same proportions and an equal amount was the outlay for another leading circuit.

Estimates for rebuilding of theatre exteriors run to a large item for the independent theatres, with $125,000 as the estimated total. For the circuit theatres, exterior construction ran to 25% or 30% of the total, or $53,000 out of a total of more than $265,000.

Projection equipment had been brought to a point where principally small replacements were made, and $10,000 or $15,000 would probably cover the total spent for this item in the budget.—M. Grahl, Des Moines.

Another landmark of New York's "legitimate" theatre sector has gone "movie"—and announces the change with a sign and marquee of goldleaf and bronze. More than three decades ago, the Amsterdam began its memorable career with Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream"; it opened the other day as a motion picture theatre with the Warner film production of the same work. Located on 42d Street, just west of Broadway, the Amsterdam was long one of the gayest centers of New York's theatrical activities, for it was the home of Ziegfeld's Follies through most of the tenure of that perennial production as an American institution. Following its purchase by Max A. Cohn, until recently operator of Wallach's theatre on 42d Street, the Amsterdam was fitted out for motion pictures, but for the most part its luxurious appointments were left unchanged, except for the front. The sign is 50 feet high and is finished in porcelain enamel of an ivory tint. The crown and base of the sign, however, are finished in 22-carat golf leaf. The name is spelled in channel letters with white gas tube illumination. The marquee is of bronze construction. Trim has been confined to single lines of neon between the rows of attraction board letters, all three fascias flood with light the flashed opal glass of the attraction boards, which are illuminated by lamps set in front of parabolic reflectors. Attraction board letters are Adler silhouette type. The vertical sign and marquee were designed by George W. Colby and constructed by the Continental Sign Company of New York. The Amsterdam has Motiograph projectors.

Press Book Developed On Sound Equipment

RCA PHOTOPHONE has developed an interesting pressbook in four sections to aid exhibitors in publicizing the installation of RCA sound equipment. The sections are divided into advance, opening, contest promotion and year-round exploitation.

The advance campaign takes in newspaper stories, radio and sound track announcements, posters and banners of various sizes, all of which are suggested for use to build up the premier—a special prevue—of the new sound equipment. Suggestions for this event include copy for invitations and comment cards and interesting also is a souvenir for distribution, the idea being a small card in which is placed single frame of non-inflammable film mounted on white pasteboard so that the sound track may be clearly seen, which is noted in the card copy.

Two contests are detailed. The first is called "The Magic Voice" in which a trailer is provided in which is represented the voices, but not the faces, of several popular screen players. Contestants are asked to identify the voices of the players they hear on a ballot provided for the purpose, to describe what characteristics of the players gave them the identification clues. For further build-up the Photophone sound track in the trailer is clearly visible.

A "Favorite Voice" contest is also suggested in which each entrant is asked to list the name of the screen player whose voice he likes best along with his estimate of votes the player will receive. The two contests are accompanied by a list of stories, ballyhoos, etc.

Under the heading of year-round exploitation some 21 advertising and exploitation activities are listed on a schedule on which is also indicated how and when each is to be used. Mats for tie-in with cooperative ads are carried, as well as illustrations for street ballyhoo and other ideas.

How Fixtures Are Used In Lighting Theatres Today

● Especially effective in remodeling, lighting fixtures continue to be widely used in theatres. Here they are examined in their new applications

UP-TO-DATE lighting fixtures are as different from those that have been used in theatres as modern streamlined automobiles are different from the "horseless carriages" of a generation ago. They are functional and they are good looking in a straight-forward clean-cut way. They are especially helpful in solving the lighting problems encountered when endeavoring to modernize effectively an obsolete theatre.

Fixtures of special design naturally give a theatre distinction and are sometimes definitely indicated by the decorative scheme, but there is a wide range of stock designs to meet most requirements. Fixtures of stock design cost less, as a rule, than those of special design. But there is a great difference in stock fixtures. Too often unsuitable, cheaply made and badly designed fixtures are bought. Such fixtures injure the appearance of the theatre, give bad lighting and are a poor investment all around.

The theatre owner or operator should be sufficiently well informed about modern lighting principles and practice and about the recent advances in lighting fixture design to be able to obtain a fixture installation for his theatre that will furnish correct lighting and will be a decorative asset.

An idea that lighting fixtures are ornaments and only incidentally give light, has been held by many. They are rather to be regarded as light sources designed to furnish the quantity and the quality of light required for their special purposes.

FUNCTIONAL DESIGNS

Lighting fixtures today are not overloaded with ornament, as they were when every part of the theatre interior was encrusted with gingerbread enrichment; nor are they eccentric in design, as they were not so long ago when the extreme modernistic fad prevailed. The conservatively styled modern lighting fixtures are in excellent taste and are suitable for use in interiors of either period or modern style.

Fixtures of essentially functional type are best in most cases—simple troughs suspended from the ceiling, pylon brackets, soffit lights, drum-shaped units, and bowl-shaped indirect and semi-indirect pendant fixtures and semi-ceiling fixtures, with little if any ornamentation but of simple, pleasing form.

Where a suggestion of historic period design is desired in the lighting fixtures to harmonize with the decorations of the interior, this can be secured through a new approach to period fixture design. This approach consists in designing functional fixtures for electric lighting in modern materials and adding touches of period style ornament, or modifying the shapes of the fixtures in ways that do not interfere with their functions. The resulting fixtures are modern in their lighting ability and in their smart simplicity of general design, but they have also a decorative character expressive of the past.

This is exactly the reverse of the procedure that has prevailed until recently in period lighting fixture design. It has been customary to adapt to electric lighting, forms of lighting units that originated in the days of candles and oil lamps, such as the chandeliers, wall brackets with branching arms, and lanterns. Now these forms are often abandoned, and a bowl or trough or wall pocket fixture is given the character of the Colonial style, or some other period, by its form and ornamentation.

Fully as important as the new approach to the designing of period lighting fixtures described above, is the revolution that has taken place in the designing of modern style lighting fixtures for theatres. The ornate and intricate designs are giving way to less ambitious, much simpler and more attractive designs. Of course, where a sufficiently large expenditure for lighting fixtures is warranted so that very fine fixtures can be purchased, elaborate designs are often desirable; but in the vast majority of cases the rule of good taste in fixtures is the simpler the better.

Nothing dates a theatre interior more definitely than out-moded lighting fixtures, and there is hardly any major improvement that can be made for so little as refixturing. Fixtures which are well designed for lighting and decoration—functional, simple and well made—can be had at reasonable prices. Showy fixtures that do not give good light and are cheaply made often cost just as much as the right kind. Cheap fixtures are dear at any price.

THE BOX OFFICE ANGLE

The lighting of the interior of the theatre has a much greater effect upon the box office receipts than is generally recognized. The lobby that is attractively lighted—bright, but free from glare and with smart looking fixtures—puts the incoming patrons in a mood to be pleased with the entertainment. A foyer that is agreeably lighted, not too dim and perhaps enlivened with some decorative lighting features, such as illuminated wall niches or back-lighted panels of carved glass, creates an impression of friendliness and dignity, with a touch of the gala spirit that helps people to have a good time.

The lighting of the auditorium calls for the most care, since whatever lighting there may be, must not interfere with the projected image. When the audience is leaving, or when some contest is on, more light is needed, and there should be fixtures capable of furnishing such light without glare.

The audience may not be conscious of the lighting of the auditorium (if it is good lighting), but it will be more comfortable on account of it and more likely to patronize that theatre again. What people think of the picture and how much they enjoy it depends partly upon the conditions under which they view it, including the lighting of the interior.

INDIRECT LIGHTING

The first principle of modern lighting is to avoid glare. This may be accomplished by indirect, semi-indirect or diffused direct lighting. Among the best fixtures are those for totally indirect lighting in which the lamps are shielded from view by an opaque bowl, trough or other reflector which directs the light to the ceiling or wall, from which it is reflected into the room, being diffused, softened and widely distributed.

In some of the new types of indirect fixtures, the light is reflected upon a back plate or ceiling plate, which re-directs it into the room. Often this plate is of corrugated metal, which gives a lively lighting effect, but should not produce reflected glare. There are back plates in a light gray finish that soften the light, and satin-finished metal is free from bright reflections likely to cause glare.

But indirect lighting is not the only means of avoiding glare, for semi-indirect fixtures, if properly designed, give glare-free illumination and are sometimes preferred to indirect fixtures. Semi-indirect lighting fixtures send part of the light to the ceiling or wall surface, to be reflected as indirect illumination, but they also furnish a large amount of direct light, which shines into the room through translucent glass or plastic material, which diffuses the light, preventing glare.

NON-GLARE DIRECT LIGHTING

Direct lighting, in which all of the light issues directly into the room, can be free from glare also, if the lighting units are fitted with louvers, or light baffles, to prevent the light from shining into anyone's eyes from any normal point of view, or if prismatic lenses or some other suitable means of control, direction or diffusion is employed.

CEILING FIXTURES

In the past, totally indirect pendent and ceiling fixtures have been open to the objection that their opaque metal bowls appeared dark against the lighted ceiling. This has been overcome in some indirect fixtures by designing them so that a small amount of light is projected upon the outside of the bowl, lighting it softly and agreeably. Other totally indirect fixtures have a drum composed of louvers, or slats, of metal, through which light shines upward and outward, incidentally lighting these surfaces. One type has a concave ring of bright metal so placed around the top edge of the bowl that a little light is reflected downward upon the outer surface of the bowl.

The metal bowls of indirect fixtures are now often made to appear luminous, or even as though they were translucent, by lighting the outer surface, in one way or another. In addition, this light is often tinted, so that the outside of the fixture is banded with light of some bright color, while the illumination delivered by the fixture is white.

Totally indirect lighting fixtures suspended from the ceiling afford a good means of lighting the auditorium. They may be of either the pendent or semi-ceiling type, the latter being suspended on shorter stems than the former. They may be of bowl or drum shape, or of "doughnut" shape. The last mentioned shape, as its name implies, is a trough of circular form. Such fixtures of metal, in chromium or any desired finish, and each containing several lamp bulbs, can furnish both the running light and house light, if wired for two circuits so that some bulbs of low wattage can be turned on during the showing of the picture and the light of the other bulbs added for the house light.

WALL STYLES

If a light source is of too concentrated brightness, it produces glare that is hard on the eyes and interferes with seeing the picture on the screen. The wall bracket lights in most theatres have this fault, for they are too small for the output of the lamps they contain. This difficulty is overcome by using the larger brackets that are now being introduced very widely, particularly the kind of fixtures known as pylon brackets.

One type of pylon bracket consists of a tall box of glass panels set in a metal frame attached to a back plate against the wall and enclosing the electric lamps. The body of the fixture is often of half-hexagon, half-octagon, or "side wing" (triangular) form, and measures from, say, 8 x 24 inches to 14 x 50 inches, while the overall dimensions, including the ornamental back plate, are from about 12 x 36 inches to 18 x 64 inches. Pylon brackets of the smaller size given here, or of some intermediate size, are suitable for most theatre auditoriums, while the largest sizes are in keeping with spacious auditoriums.

The large glass area of such a pylon bracket make it possible for the fixture to deliver the required amount of illumination without brightness of the glass.

There is also the totally indirect type of pylon bracket, which consists of a metal

FLOOR PLANS, CAPITOL THEATRE, JEFFERSON CITY, MO.
ROBERT O. BOLLER, Architect

A Two-Floor

● Describing the Dubinsky Brothers' Capitol theatre in Jefferson City, Mo., a 1,271-seat house of modern architecture and decoration created from an existing structure

THE CAPITOL, recently erected by Dubinsky Brothers, motion picture theatre operators of Kansas City and St. Joseph, Missouri, and Leavenworth, Kansas, is this organization's third undertaking in Missouri's capital city. Located in the heart of Jefferson City's downtown district, the new 1271-seat house caters to a normal population of 16,000, which for several years has been augmented by the personnel of various emergency bureaus called into existence during the period of business depression. The theatre is managed by Arnold Gould.

The theatre represents the remodeling of a fireproof structure formerly used as a garage. Robert O. Boller of Kansas City, was the architect.

The side walls of the original building were of concrete to the second story level and of brick above that point. Being in excellent condition, they were used in the reconstruction. The original front of brick and the level roof deck of poured gypsum on steel trusses were also utilized in the new plan.

With so much fireproof material as a beginning, the owners decided to complete the theatre interior with steel supports and reinforced concrete floors, in order to make the new Capitol a Class-A house.

The garage was unusually long, its dimensions being 52x199 feet, but it was decided to use the entire space, arranging for two shops, an abundance of lounging space, a full stage with dressing rooms, and a four-room apartment facing the street at the second story level for the theatre manager's quarters.

EXTERIOR

The design of the exterior leans toward a conservative sort of streamline moderne, and this motif is repeatedly recalled by the decorator in the interior. The smooth cement plaster front depends entirely on painted color for its effectiveness. Display frames on the piers add a decorative note. Panels in the upper section of the front shade from a rich blue to a deep yellow, with golden yellow striping to tie the treatment together.

A vertical sign with channel letters lighted in neon and with neon trim, tops a rectangular marquee which also carries the theatre's name and attraction boards with silhouette letters. The marquee is lighted decoratively in neon.

wide by 5 feet deep, contains an island box office. The lower section of the ticket booth is decorated in a shade of blue to harmonize with the front above, and is trimmed with bright metal mouldings. Box office windows are of plate glass, etched with ornamental designs. The booth is attached at the rear to a series of doors opening into the lobby. Vestibule floors are of

The color note for the entire theatre is struck in the lobby. Soft blue walls and a ceiling of French gray are high-lighted with silver-toned decorations, and contrast sharply with glossy black enameled doors ornamented with bright metal mouldings. Link mats are woven into an attractive pattern inside a Verdi-Antique marble base and border. A display frame for coming attractions is an integral part of the side wall treatment. Ceiling fixtures of chromium and opaque glass contain three color lighting effects.

FOYER

Adjoining the lobby is a roomy, T-shaped foyer, 21x32 feet in size, and further enlarged by alcoves at either end. The color scheme of the sand-finished plastered walls is blue, gray and silver, with the same tones repeated in the carpet pattern.

A display frame built about a round plate glass mirror combines an architectural effect with showmanship in an interesting manner. The terra cotta drinking fountain also carries out the moderne design. Access to the manager's office is gained from one of the foyer alcoves.

From the foyer stairs ascend to a spacious mezzanine, in which color scheme, carpets, and decorative ideas are repeated as a setting for comfortable chromium and leather furniture of modern design. Off this room, under the balcony construction, are individual lounges for men and women.

In the women's section (see plan) a lounge 12x14 feet opens into a 6x14-foot poudre room, which in turn leads to a 9 x 14-foot toilet room. These rooms are treated in black and white tiles, with black enamel trim.

The men's section off the mezzanine lounge consists of a 6x14-foot anteroom leading to a 10x11-foot toilet space, both of which are finished in black and red tiles, with black enamel trim.

From the mezzanine stair landing, at one side of the building, a few steps ascend to a corridor leading to the manager's apartment.

BALCONY

Stairways at each end of the mezzanine lounge lead to the balcony section, which seats 307. The stepped balcony rows are of easy ascent, having only a 7-foot rise in each platform. In front of the balcony cross-aisle two sections of chairs are arranged with center and wall aisles; while those back of the cross-aisle fall into one large and two small banks of seats, with four aisles. The balcony overhangs the main floor seating 42 feet.

PROJECTION

Immediately above and to the rear of the balcony seating is the projection booth, 20x 12 feet, with auxiliary toilet alcove and generator room. Equipment includes two Simplex projectors, with Peerless Magnarc lamps supplied by General Electric rectifier. The sound system is Western Electric. Walls of the booth are painted slate gray. The room is air-conditioned, and in addition has its own exhaust system.

AUDITORIUM

Viewed from the balcony, the auditorium presents a pleasing study in rich blues and grays, with silver striping accentuating the stream line motif. Side wall panels containing long, vertical, four-color lighting fixtures shade from glossy black through lightening shades of blue to a ceiling of French gray. Draperies of royal blue and silver (by the Great Western Stage Equipment Company) harmonize with the general color scheme, which was planned and executed by Earl Altaire, Kansas City decorator.

The distance from wall separating foyer from auditorium, to the stage, is 116 feet. In this area 964 fully upholstered chairs (by International Seat Corporation) seats are arranged in two sections, with center and side wall aisles. Chairs are 19 inches and 20 inches in width throughout the entire house, and are set in 32-inch rows.

As the original garage roof deck was of 4-inch poured gypsum material, this was left unchanged in the reconstruction because of its insulating value. The effect of height in the auditorium ceiling was gained by a series of ceiling offsets and heavy beams to give architectural emphasis to the moderne treatment.

The extreme length of the original building allowed for features in the stage section not found in many motion picture houses of recent date. A full stage, 40 feet wide by 20 feet deep, with stage loft approximately 40 feet high, allows the presentation of stage attractions. The proscenium opening is 32 feet wide by 22 feet high, and will accommodate a maximum size screen of 25x20 feet.

Boiler for an indirect steam heating plant, and compressors for the air-conditioning system, are located in the basement under the dressing rooms. The remainder of the air-conditioning apparatus is located on a deck above the dressing room section.

The entire theatre and manager's apartment are fully air-conditioned, with cooling supplied by a series of four 25-h.p. Westinghouse compressors.

The Capitol lighting fixtures, manufactured by the Capitol City Electric Company, Des Moines, Ia., are of opal glass and chromium-finished metal. Illumination throughout is on three-color circuits. In addition, color change switches give each fixtuer almost any color effect.

Directional Auditorium Lighting: What It Is and How to Apply It

●A discussion of so-called "down-lighting" and its allied methods as one of the newer developments in illumination notably effective for theatres

By FRANCIS M. FALGE

LIGHTING TODAY is undergoing many changes—rational analysis has invariably lead to more efficient methods of proving the proper quantity and quality of lighting for each individual need. As in other fields, it is to be expected that the theatre, too, will capitalize on a more logical analysis of its needs, and new methods to provide for those needs.

Auditorium lighting, in many cases, has either been neglected, to the detriment of the box office, or has been inefficiently handled, to the detriment of the pocketbook. Fortunately, new equipments are now available to provide better and more efficient lighting for the theatre.

CHARACTERISTICS OF GOOD LIGHTING

How many of the fundamental needs does your auditorium provide for? Check them against this list of questions.

1. Do signs and brightness areas direct people and answer questions, thus minimizing the need for usher attention?

2. Are eyes gradually accommodated to the darkness of the theatre interior? Bright spots near the auditorium entrances, even spotlighted displays, cause the pupils to close rapidly for protection, and a number of seconds are required for readjustment to the darkened auditorium.

3. Are sources of light, such as wall brackets, so bright that they distract and cause discomfort to patrons viewing the picture? Spreading of the sources of light by indirect methods or diffusing glassware helps; however, the placement of sources high up near the junction of the ceiling and sidewalls removes them farther from the line of vision where they're less annoying.

4. Is the level of lighting adequate? Adequate lighting allows patrons to locate seats with ease and comfort. Adequate lighting is reassuring to patrons. Adequate lighting minimizes the need for individual usher service. Adequate lighting prevents accidents and thus minimizes insurance costs. Bringing up the lights during breaks in the show helps people to empty the theatre and fill seats more easily and quickly.

5. Does your lighting contribute to the atmosphere and provide an interesting setting for the presentation? Color arrangement, harmonious form, and brightness variations do much to make the theatre an interesting place, one that patrons will "shop" first. Flexibility as to arrangement, color and control makes it easy to provide lighting for special occasions, "warming" or "cooling," or for special holidays or presentations. Bringing up the lights for a humorous or "light" picture helps to put it across because patrons become more conscious of the reactions of their neighbors.

6. Is your lighting controlled as to distribution? It should be arranged so as to direct the light predominantly toward the front of the auditorium, but with a minimum of light striking the screen. Some directional effect from the sides of the auditorium makes people look better.

USE OF COLOR

Are you using colored light effectively and efficiently? A single color becomes monotonous. Blue, for example, when used alone, appears gray. Furthermore, blue lamps are very inefficient. Yellow lamps give about 80 times more light per watt, orange 60 times more, green 10, etc. The addition of accents of other colors provides interest and accentuates the predominating color.

Combinations are in most cases more attractive than single colors. Some colors flatter, other hurt complexions. Light at the seats should bring out flesh tints; lavenders, and pinks are best.

Natural colored glass lamps produce more light through life than inside colored lamps, though they are initially more expensive. Natural colored hoods provide similar advantages in that they use the least expensive lamps, and, once selected, provide uniformity of color. Reflectors with colored roundels provide well for color, and also for proper direction and control of the light.

DUAL LIGHTING

Many of the suggestions just given apply to theatres lighted according to the standards of the past. These standards, however, impose some limitations, the most serious one being that of obtaining seeing light efficiently. In the past, in general, lighting applied for decoration has also had to provide for seeing, so that if the theatre was to have all blue cove-lighting, for example, the only recourse was to use higher wattages of blue than were necessary for purely decorative purposes. Even then, lighting for seeing was generally inadequate, and people stumbled around or required personal usher service to locate seats. A better and more efficient method is to provide two systems of lighting, as follows:

1. A seeing system: a method of directing well-controlled lighting (uncolored or of an efficient light tint which flatters complexions) over the seat areas, without reflection from walls or ceiling.

2. A decorative system: this can now be as simple, elaborate or colorful as the designer desires, and can be confined to various architectural features, with only the wattage required for the particular decorative effect.

The second or decorative plan needs no further explanation; it can bring into play all of the many forms and materials suited to unusual decorative lighting.

DIRECTIONAL LIGHTING

The controlled seeing system has in the past been handicapped by a lack of well-devised equipment to accomplish this purpose. Today, however, there are many types of equipment; the problem is to select that which best serves the purpose.

Simply, the technique is to mount on or in the ceiling directional lighting units which throw beams of light over a definite seating area. Equipment for accomplishing this have beam spreads from 45° to 90° and the number of units needed is determined by this spread.

With a 90° spread, for example, the effective floor area covered will be equal to the ceiling height; with a ceiling 20 feet high, and a 40-foot auditorium width, two rows of units would be indicated. For a 20% efficiency, approximately ¼-watt per foot is necessary to produce a lighting level of 1 foot-candle. The wattage can be stepped up to provide for intermissions, and be dimmed with a minimum of loss by the use of thyratron reactor control.

TYPES OF EQUIPMENT

The characteristics of available equipment for directional lighting are as follows:

Louvered reflectors (Figure 1) are equipped with spill shields, rings, or crossed fins which cut off the direct light from the filament. The louvers may be of a reflective finish where their brightness would not be objectionable, as for the lighting of

Electrical and Mechanical Provisions for Modern Lighting

● Examining the new values in theatre illumination and the devices available today for realizing them effectively in every class of theatre

LIGHTING — lighting the theatre front—lighting the auditorium—all of these are expressions which we in the theatre business hear frequently. All of us will admit to some extent the importance of lighting in our theatres. Yet how little we do about it, except at infrequent intervals—say, every ten years, when we give the theatre a complete overhauling.

The alert theatre operator is forever seeking new attractions, new entertainment, and new effects for his stage or screen. But other than covering up more wall surface in the lobby and vestibule, with advertising matter, and a spotlight here and there, he has been wont to make few changes in the theatre lighting.

Poster displays and illuminated frames are being crowded right into the auditorium now-a-days, destroying what lighting effect there might be in the theatre. Theatres used to be the leaders in the use of proper and ingenious lighting, but through the years of the depression so much emphasis was put on selling pictures at the least possible cost that cheap advertising and art board fronts now mark out handsome illuminated frames, and extension cords are connected to lighting fixtures to supply current to an ugly, cheap display frame!

Stores that once trailed far behind in the parade of light, now can teach theatre men something about the art of effective merchandising by means of light. Yes, even filling stations are lighted more intelligently than some theatres!

It is believed that lighting in theatres is in its present state of obsolescence and disrepair because theatre men have failed to keep abreast of the developments in lighting, and do not have a correct conception of the cost of newer methods. Much can be done for a reasonable sum of money, but some sign company representatives try to sell too much and by the time they complete a survey of the marquee and front, the whole project may look too big to undertake. The same applies if an architect is called in on the interior, and the net result is that nothing is done to keep our theatres looking like theatres, with the exception of those in the larger metropolitan areas.

EQUIPMENT AND ITS APPLICATION

BEFORE ATTEMPTING to suggest some of the things that might be done to improve specific conditions, it might be well to call attention to some of the improvements developed in equipment.

FLASHERS

Flashers are much cheaper and much better built today than they used to be, and they do not require anywhere near the amount of time and money for maintenance. One particular type of flasher which I have in mind is driven by an induction disc motor. This type motor operates on the same principle as the revolving disc used on electric meters—it is not a motor in the usual layman's idea of a motor. Such flashers are lubricated at the factory with graphite, and even the bearings require no attention for periods of years. All contacts are silver, and this assures long life. Besides being well-designed, well-built, and compact, these flashers are very reasonably priced.

For instance, there is a flasher that can be used for color change, on and off, speller, or alternating, simply by changing an eccentric disc or raker. With a few colored lamps to change the old color combinations on the marquee, some paint on the channel where the lamps are to be installed, and a new flasher that you can do tricks with, I ask you: Can you change the appearance of your front?

ATTRACTION BOARDS

Another thing about the marquee that indicates obsolescence is the type of letter in use. The most satisfactory letter is the silhouette letter against the opal or flashed opal glass background. Whereas with the older style cutout mat letter 40 to 60 watts per socket was required in back of the letters, you will discover that such wattage can be reduced to 25 with the newer silhouette letter—quite a saving. There are many types of silhouette letters on the market today, from prestwood and compo board letters to cast white metal letters finished in colors. The cast metal letters are without a doubt the most satisfactory from every point of consideration.

The cast metal letters may be obtained in several different styles of alphabets, and in 8-inch, 10-inch and 12-inch sizes. So that you can get an idea of what a font of letters would cost per letter, the 8-inch is $1 list, the 10-inch is $1.25, the 12-inch $1.75. The style of alphabet sometimes makes a small difference in the per letter cost.

SIMPLIFICATION

The theatre manager will be astounded at the change in his entire front by just a change in the glass panel arrangement and changing to the silhouette type letter. Another way to change the appearance of the front is to simplify it. Many of the marquees and vertical signs of ten or fifteen years ago were very ornate; today, however, simple lines and color are in demand. Remove the old vertical sign entirely, remove the old ornamental pieces over the attraction signs, and substitute the name of the theatre in bold modern letters, and you will have made a substantial change for the better. Many old theatre buildings have interesting fronts, and often the removal of an old cornice, the bricking up of a few windows, and some carefully thought-out

MAINTENANCE Tabs

By J T Knight, Jr

AIR-CONDITIONING DESIGN: Few engineers seem to appreciate that the problem of air-conditioning small stores, including drug stores, ready-to-wear apparel stores, delicatessen stores and small restaurants presents an entirely different problem from the air-conditioning of theatres. The time during which patrons of any establishment are exposed to air-conditioning has a great deal to do with establishing correct and proper inside design conditions.

For instance, a small soft drink parlor must have a colder or cooler condition so that the moment the person enters the door he will be impressed with the coldness of the place, as that patron is probably only going to buy a bottle of Coca Cola and, at the maximum, spend no more than ten minutes in the store, whereas in a theatre, a patron comes in and spends fully two and a quarter to three hours. We would therefore be guilty of creating a very unhealthy condition if we attempted to cool our theatres to the same temperature as the above-mentioned soft drink parlor. We would have complaints of colds and reports of discomfort.

Perfect air-conditioning in theatres will permit a person to enter a theatre and remain for the entire show without being aware of the refrigerated air. Naturally, upon entering, if that person is hot and perspiring, his first reaction might be that the air-conditioning system isn't working, but if he will take a seat in the auditorium, the perspiration should evaporate and dry in about ten or fifteen minutes and the temperature of the body should come into equilibrium with the temperature of the air in the theatre. By that time the patron is completely comfortable and he will not be conscious of any mechanical air-conditioning.

Apparently there are some managers who do not understand that theatre air-conditioning, when properly designed, is designed on this basis. The sudden shock of coming into a cold room is more than people in poor health and elderly people can withstand; similarly, the shock is equally as bad upon leaving a cold theatre, and every effort should be made to regulate air-conditioning in theatres so as not to shock patrons either on entering or leaving a theatre.

ASPHALT TILE AND MASTIC FLOORS: These "soft composition" floors are sold under various trade names and, in general, have a base of asphalt, bitumen or resin. Cleaners and polishes containing abrasives, oils or organic solvents (gasoline, turpentine, carbon tetrachloride, etc.) should not be used. These floors should be washed by mopping with a neutral soap and lukewarm soft water. Scrubbing machines with soft polishing brushes have been used for large areas.

After cleaning and drying, these floorings (especially the asphalt tile) are generally waxed in order to cover the surface with a protective film. The water-emulsion waxes free from oils and volatile organic solvents are the safest waxes to use on these floorings. This type of wax can be applied with a cotton cloth mop or wool applicator. The wax should be spread as thinly as possible on the surface of the floor using the mop or applicator in one direction only. In a short time the wax should dry to a hard, lustrous finish.

Asphalt tile floors should not be buffed or burnished until the wax or other treatment is completely dry. The treated floors may be maintained by sweeping with a brush, a dry mop, or by buffing. Scrubbing with water and a neutral soap may be required at times (probably two or three times a year). Oils, soaps or other detergents containing abrasives, and sweeping compounds containing free oil, should not be used on the untreated or the treated floors. The floor treatments should be renewed at intervals, depending upon the wear.

Before treating an asphalt tile floor with an unknown preparation, moisten a white cloth with the preparation and rub over the surface of one tile. If the color of the tile shows on the cloth it indicates the preparation should not be used.

painting scheme make the front of the building more attractive by day and worthy of flood-lighting at night. Remember that mass of color, light, and interesting shadows form the motif in floodlighting buildings.

Stucco is cheap and can be used to good advantage in recreating an old front. Special features, such as columns, panels, or bands can be emphasized with the brilliant colors in baked enamel on steel, or with several other of the newer synthetic materials and architectural glass or glass brick.

From the sidewalk we go into the theatre through lobby, foyer, and into the auditorium. Authorities say that we should maintain 15 foot-candles in the lobby, 10 in the foyer, and 5 in the auditorium; however, no lighting system in a theatre is adequate if it serves utilitarian needs only, though these are prime considerations. The lighting system of a theatre definitely calls for some decorative treatment; however, unless the necessary "seeing" requirements are met by the theatre lighting system, the major purpose of lighting is defeated and no amount of architectural or decorative treatment will make up for this deficiency. The object of planning theatre lighting is to provide adequate light, but to do so by ingenious, artistic, and architecturally decorative methods, so that visitors to a theatre will be intrigued by the novelty, color, and cheerfulness, but good taste, with which the lighting is accomplished.

LIGHTING VALUES

The recognition of these important factors has necessitated the close co-ordination of the architect, the lighting engineer, and the showman, and lighting as it should be done in theatres is now one of the interesting features of present-day amusement. Fifteen or twenty years ago we tended toward massiveness, with ornate and intricate detail, much marble and gold leaf. Today, however, the theatre of 1000 seats or less is simple of line, combined with masses of cheerful color combinations, and embellished with architectural features of light.

No other material or medium available to the architect or theatre owner today has more possibilities or greater versatility, or is more expressive of the spirit of entertainment, than light. Unfortunately, all of us do not seem to realize this to the fullest extent, for if we did, much more could and would be done to the already existing theatres. Lighting, with simplified painting schemes, is without doubt the least expensive way in which to treat a theatre, and certainly the least expensive to maintain.

But besides these necessary considerations, the newer schemes permit weekly, monthly, or seasonal changes in atmosphere which are interesting, attention-getters, and showmanly in the extreme. These changes are or can be obtained by changing the colors of the lamps, by changing the color of the flat-painted reflective or diffusing surfaces, by increasing the intensity of the lighted areas by changes in wattage of the lamps, or by the use of dimmers.

DIMMER SYSTEMS

There are on the market today dimmers of design representing a change from the established resistance dimmer plates, with which we are all so familiar. This type of theatre dimmer is now designed after the principles of the auto-transformer, and the voltage to any circuit is altered by the adjustment of the core in the transformer. With this type of dimmer the current consumed is the current represented by the light level maintained. Therefore, in actual service, these new dimmers are economical to use.

We have all seen the changes created in a stage setting by dimming lights, for that has been a part of theatrical practice for a generation. The same radical change in the auditorium atmosphere can be created by the use of dimmers on the house-lights. In order that you may get an idea of the cost for such dimming equipment, the equipment for 3000 watts in a small theatre recently built cost $147, and the installation cost about $50. The dimming of various circuits of light permits a mixing and a blending of effect similar to what is accomplished in the mixing room of a broadcasting station. The method provides facilities which to date have not been used to the greatest advantage.

Even the dimming of circuits of exterior lighting or flood-lighting affords opportunities of creating effects that are hard to imagine unless one has spent some time in studying the subject. But try and sell a theatre man the idea of installing dimmers on exterior lighting!

COLR EFFECTS; NEW MATERIALS

COLOR HAS always played a prominent part in the operation of theatres. Color quality concerns not only the matter of color discrimination, but it also has to do with a certain feeling of comfort, satisfaction and cheerfulness. With the wide range of illuminants now available, both in incandescent lamps with their many color and lens and reflector accessories, and in gaseous conductor sources (neon, etc), the theatre owner and operator, the architect and the engineer, if prepared to balance quantity with quality, can produce practically any special effect of light quality or quantity desired.

The question of "color effect" in theatres cannot be divorced from the science of architecture or the art of decoration, and it follows that the application of "color effect" and spectacular lighting requires considerable artistic and decorative talent. Some of the efforts on the part of managers to create their own lighting schemes, while very courageous, have in the net result been terrible. The methods of lighting involve many proved principles. The psychology of color is an interesting study in itself, and as in all such things perfection is not attained easily.

"ALZAK" FINISH

There are other comparatively new materials being used in creating lighting effects. For one, aluminum sheets, either flat or corrugated, are being used. A new finish for aluminum has been perfected, known to the trade as the "Alzak" finish. This finish has a very high reflective value and at the same time it is diffusing. It is as nearly permanent a finish as we can get today, and it stands up exceedingly well out-of-doors. This surface can be easily cleaned by wiping with a cloth saturated

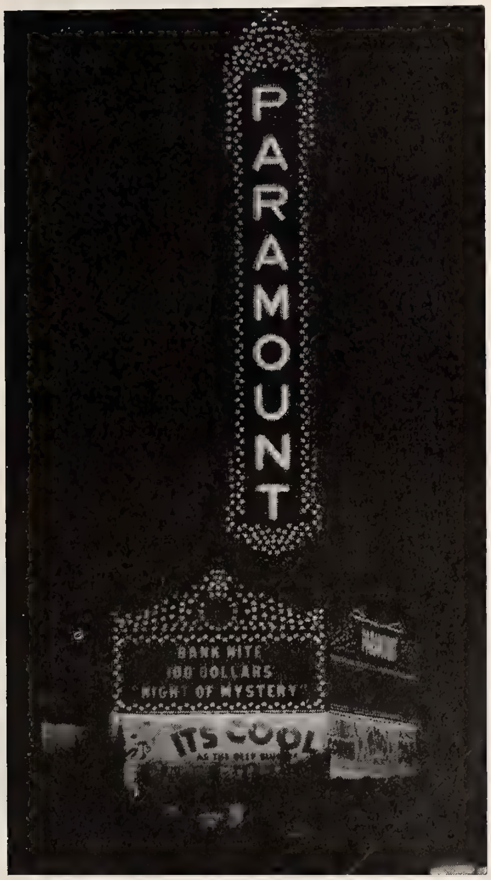
Brilliance and Color for Signs With Reflectors

DEVELOPED as a means of increasing effective illumination with reduced wattage, and also of attaining color without resorting to colored lamps, a polished aluminum reflector with glass roundel is being more and more extensively applied to marquees and signs. This reflector was introduced a short time ago by Climax Reflector, Inc., of Canton, Ohio. The device consists in a polished reflector mounted in a standard lamp base and accommodating a small S6 mazda lamp. To provide sparkle and wide-angle viewing, a multifacet roundel is used; this also protects the reflecting surface and presents a smooth easily cleanable face. The reflector collects light ordinarily wasted in a backward direction and directs it down the street where it becomes possible for most people to view the displays.



Night view of Paramount theatre in Fremont, Ohio, showing clear definition of sign and marquee trim with incandescent lamps in reflectors.

Natural colored glass roundels are used, thus providing initially greater color efficiency than can be had by using the usual colored lamps. Through the operating life of the lamp, the 6-watt clear lamp retains its efficiency just as do all standard lamps, thus performing much better than do the usual types of colored lamps. Not only does greater light output result but replacements of reflector units when lamps burn out are not noticeable; a unit with an old lamp looks like a new one.

Cast Aluminum Magazine with Reel Alarm Space

A NEW projector magazine of cast metal and designed with a special compartment for reel-end alarm, has been marketed by the Golde Manufacturing Company of Chicago.

The magazine is of sturdy cast aluminum construction with smooth inside finish. The door is held closed by a snap lock designed to prevent its springing open, yet responding quickly to pressure of the bronze door handle. Hinges are cast on the body and door.

with alcohol. Many reflectors are finished with Alzak, but the material may be obtained in sheets. Sheets can be obtained in sizes 24″ x 36″, and in lots of 100 sheets. It costs $1.50 per pound. The Alcoa sheet, which is similar to the Alzak, in No. 20 gauge can be obtained in 24″ x 48″ and 24″ x 72″ sheets. Alcoa has a reflective value of 80% to 83%, and Alzak from 80% to 85%. So you can see how similar the two finishes are. No. 20 gauge Alcoa sheets cost about 85c per pound, and a 24″ x 72″ sheet weighs 54 pounds.

GLASS BLOCKS

Another new material frequently used in creating lighted features is glass blocks. Several of the glass companies manufacture glass block. Sometimes they will sell the half block for use in lighting ornamentation when the glass does not in any way form part of a structural system. One manufacturer sells 12 x 12-inch glass blocks for approximately $2 each. Another manufacturer carries several sizes—12 x 12-inch for $1.65, 8 x 5 for $27, 6 x 6 for $.23, and 8 x 8 for $.45. Having used probably all types of glass blocks at one time or another, I have found that those styles of blocks with the larger fluted surfaces at right angles to each other transmit a more pleasing light pattern than bricks with smaller fluted surfaces.

In addition to blocks, several of the glass companies are making glass plates of various textured surfaces, which have been used to great advantage in lighting some theatres recently constructed.

To attempt to describe the almost unlimited number of elements and methods used in architectural lighting would require a full length book. There are many volumes on the market, some very expensive and some less expensive, but all more or less having many illustrations. However, several of the larger lighting companies, and the Nela Park laboratories are continually developing illustrated data and information on new methods of lighting. Much of this data is available to the theatre manager for the asking. The facilities of this laboratory are available to you or your architect at no cost. Many of the outstanding architects of the country take advantage of a close contact with this laboratory. The writer is indebted to several members of the staff for their many worthwhile ideas and information on lighting. Since lighting is such an important part of theatre operation, why can't we all become more familiar with the science of lighting—for it is a science—and acquainted with reliable sources of information on the subject?

In closing, I want to add that when theatres are lighted in accordance with modern methods and modern ideas, the interest thus manifested by the public is reflected in the commercial value of the property. The entire development of modern lighting has inspired new styles and created fresh viewpoints of design and utility. Luminous treatment is now universally accepted for both interior and exterior architecture, and in this acceptance there is new vitality and new charm added to even the old architectural masterpieces. The use which we, as theatre operators, can make of luminous elements is limited only by our indifference to the possibilities, or by the lack of ingenuity of those we call on to apply the principles to our theatres.

The fluidity of light when applied to theatres will create for each theatre an individuality, a beauty, a unity of showmanship and composition that is bound to create interest and to command the attention of the public. Such interest would unquestionably tend to increase box office grosses considerably.—J. T. K.

New Emergency Lighting Unit for Smaller Theatres

RECENT improvements in emergency lighting systems have brought them more in line with theatre requirements, specifically. In every theatre, the requirements, legal and moral, for an emergency lighting system include, naturally, protection for exit lights and a system of hazard lights to be located at those points throughout the house where accidents and confusion may result from sudden, unexpected darkness. How to provide lights at these points in the event of power interruptions has been a problem for small and some medium-sized theatres.

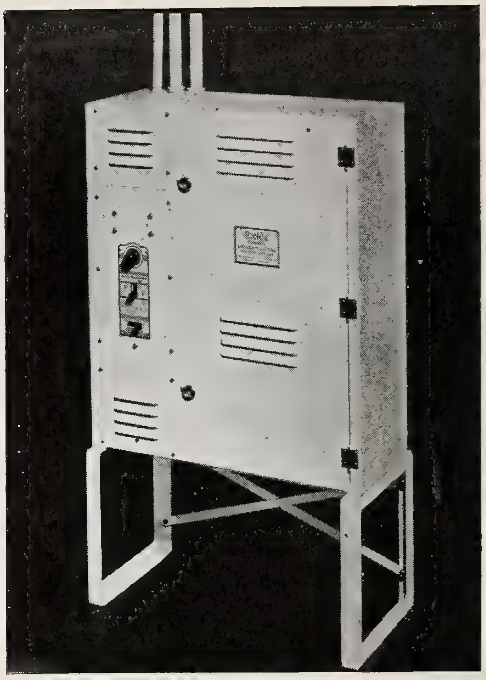
This problem has been attacked in the designing of a new unit developed by the Electric Storage Battery Company of Philadelphia. The new type eliminates the necessity for elaborate and large battery installations in small and medium-sized theatres. The only attention it requires is the addition of water three or four times a year. The manufacturer estimates the life of the battery at from five to seven years, and its renewal is inexpensive.

The unit consists of a 12-volt Exide glass-jar type battery, a transformer; a device for the automatic, instantaneous switching over of the emergency load to the battery; and another device for automatically recharging the battery after an emergency discharge. All this is compactly assembled in an attractive steel cabinet.

The exit lights are normally kept burning from the regular 115-volt house current, but in the event of power failure they are thrown over on to the battery. This arrangement is made possible by using 12-volt lamps and having the regular 115-volt house current supplying them, stepped down to 12 volts by the transformer in the unit.

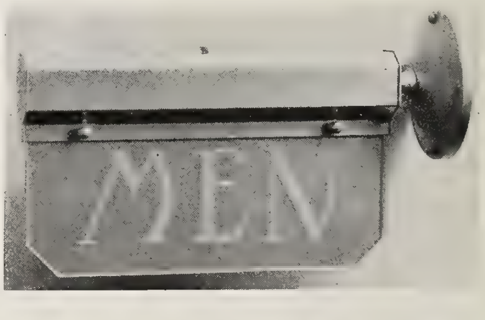
The hazard lights, however, are on a circuit directly connected with the battery in the unit. These are not lighted under normal conditions. The instant, however, an interruption in the regular a.c. service occurs, the hazard lights go on.

The hazard lights, although only 12-volt lamps, are of the high-intensity; each hazard light, when called into service in an emergency, delivers nearly twice as much illumination as a 115-volt lamp of the same wattage. These high-intensity lights have a life of about 50 hours, and as they are normally off."



For the exit lights, a medium screw base, 12-volt, 10-watt lamp can be used. The exit light current will carry a load of 200 watts, or 20 lamps of 10-watt capacity; and the hazard light circuit will carry eight 30-watt lamps, supplying light equivalent to the same number of standard 60-watt lamps.

The new Exide unit is fully automatic. It operates instantly and automatically the moment a power failure occurs. The 12-volt glass-jar type battery, which is part of the unit, is continuously charged at a low rate to maintain the battery in a fully charged condition.



Directional sign unit made by the Missouri Steel & Wire Company of St. Louis, in satin chrome finish and with letters cut on the inside to appear embossed. A lumiline lamp is used, and this may be readily replaced by removing the top portion of the lamp casing, which is done by exerting an upward pull on a nut. The casing and bracket measure 10¾ x 2¾ x 2 inches over all. This type sign may be had in single- or double-face models.

Sound System Designed for Smaller Theatres

A NEW SOUND system, designed specifically for the smaller theatre, has been marketed by the Ballantyne Company of Omaha. The soundheads are of unit construction and are designed for adaptation to push-pull recording.

All film travels on rotating surfaces, and the optical system includes a specially designed filter, pre-focused exciter light mounting and constant-axis lens carriage.

The amplifier circuit is of inverse feedback type. Exciter lamp supply is by a copper-oxide rectifier. The equipment includes a two-way horn system with cellular speakers for high frequencies and folded horn for the lows.

Three Circuits Sign Air Patents Agreements

AGREEMENTS have been signed by Warners', Loew's and National Theatres with the Auditorium Conditioning Corporation, controllers of certain so-called "by-pass patents" pertaining to the air-conditioning of auditoriums. One of the effects of the agreement with Loew's is the termination of a suit with which the patent company sought a test in the U. S. Supreme Court.

Concerning the new agreements, the patents company, in a statement prepared for the press, declares in part:

"Under the terms of the contracts, the theatre circuits obtain a license for all their existing air-conditioning systems under all patents owned by the Auditorium Conditioning Corporation . . . and agree that whenever any patents of Auditorium Conditioning Corporation are used, that the contractor making the installation, extension or reconstruction embodying said patents shall pay to Auditorium the currently established royalty rate."

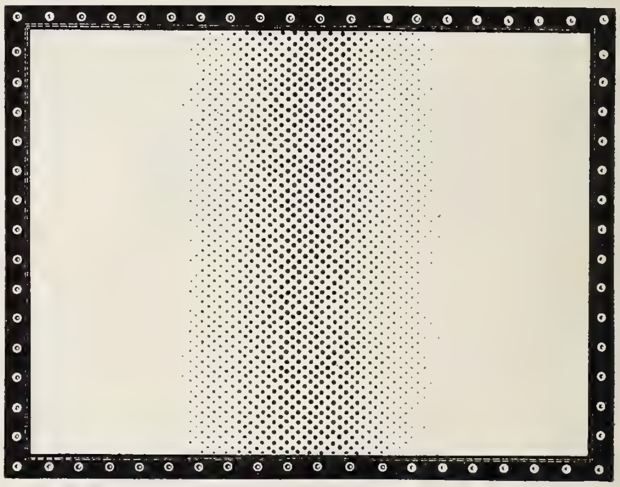
Crew erecting "gradationally perforated" screen in Radio City Music Hall.

New Type Screen in Radio City

THE FIRST installation of the "gradationally perforated" screen, recently developed by the Hurley Screen Company of Long Island City, has been completed in the Radio City Music Hall, New York. The screen is perforated only in approximately the horn area, leaving the remainder solid.



The extent of the perforated area depends upon the size of the screen, ranging from 8 feet wide for small and medium-sized screens, to 12 feet for large screens. From the middle, the perforations gradually diminish in number and diameter towards each side (see drawing), but they average a diameter which, with the depth (thickness of screen) makes the total transmission area (holes) approximately equal to the usual 10% of the entire area of the screen.

Installation of the new screen in the Music Hall was a huge task, the overall dimensions of the screen being 50x80 feet. There are over 1800 grommets for attaching to the frame.

PLANNING THE THEATRE

A SERVICE DEPARTMENT DEALING WITH ARCHITECTURAL DESIGN AND MATERIALS, DECORATION AND FURNISHINGS

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES: One of the principal functions of this department is to answer inquiries pertaining to preliminary considerations in the planning of a new theatre or the remodeling of an existing one. All questions receive the personal attention of Peter M. Hulsken, A.I.A., contributing editor of this department and a practicing architect who long has specialized in theatre design. He will be glad to offer advice, suggestions and criticisms. Working plans, however, cannot be supplied. All communications intended for this department should be addressed to Better Theatres, Rockefeller Center, New York. In publishing replies, only initials are used for identification.

THE QUESTION:

I HAVE a piece of property 63x126 feet. I have been considering building a theatre on it and would like to know how many seats it would be possible to place on the main floor. I do not expect to have a balcony if I can get enough seats on one floor. Your answering the above question, with specifications as to aisles, etc., will be appreciated.—J. W. A.

THE ANSWER:

FOR A THEATRE 63 feet wide, the best seating arrangement is a center bank of 14 seats, with a 4½-foot aisle on each side, and two wall banks each of 7 seats across, making 28 seats across the width of the auditorium. This will only require 60 feet for outside dimensions of the width of the building.

From the length of 126 feet there should be deducted 18 feet for screen platform, 10 feet for space between apron and first row of seats, 10 feet for foyer, and 14 feet for lobby; adding to this the thickness of walls, there will be available in the auditorium 83 feet for seats, or 30 rows spaced 32 inches from back to back. So the minimum seating capacity on the lower floor will be 840 seats.

THE QUESTION:

I AM PLANNING on building a theatre with 250 seats, 150 seats on main floor and 100 in balcony for colored. Size of lot has nothing to do with building as said lot is a large one.

This building I want to use as a picture show only, no stage. We contemplate using brick. We want to put up as cheap a building as can be built.—T. T. C.

THE ANSWER:

TO REDUCE the cost of construction to the minimum, I suggest that you plan the width of the theatre 30 feet and build the largest part of balcony over foyer and lobby, using walls in lobby as supports for baloncy construction.

The majority of State building codes require that a theatre containing a balcony must be of fireproof construction.

With a narrow span, as suggested, the roof and balcony construction can be done in bar joists with 3-inch concrete slab on metal lath, eliminating heavy steel beams or girders. The use of pre-colored plaster may also be a saving factor, as it will eliminate decorating.

By using the greatest economy in construction and design, you should figure the cost of the building, exclusive of equipment, at the rate of 18 cents per cubic foot.

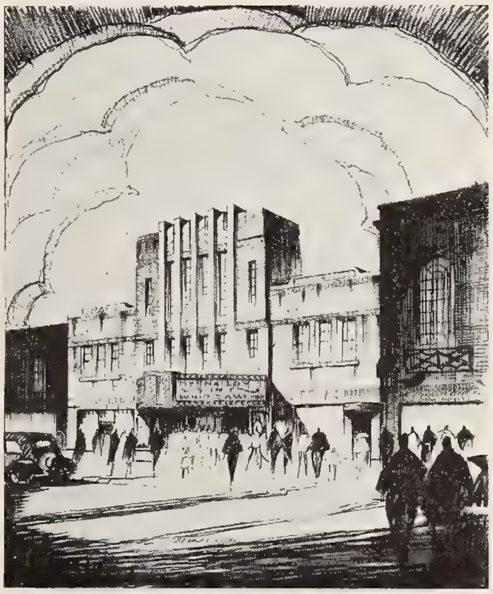
THE QUESTION:

WE ARE contemplating building a theatre and want to design it in a manner whereby we can get as many seats as possible in and are asking you to give us your advice. The lot is 50 feet wide by 114½ feet in depth. It would be perfectly okay to have a 20-foot stage merely for concert acts, public meetings, etc. There would be two store rooms, 15x20, on either side of the entrance. We would desire you to advise what, in your opinion, would be an adequate size for an outer lobby and inner lobby. The two exits would be so constructed that they would have to go under the stage. There would be no basement under the theatre except under the stage for the heating and ventilating system. We would appreciate your outlining to us the best possible arrangement to get a maximum seating capacity, on the first floor, and the proper method of constructing the balcony for the maximum number of seats. We figure that we should be able to get somewhere between 750 and 800 seats.



Perspective rendering of the new Fox theatre in Mt. Vernon, Ill., now under construction. The exterior will be of buff tapestry brick with terra cotta trim. Between the central pylons will be panels of glass bricks, which will be illuminated from the rear on a flasher system. Robert O. Boller, of Kansas City, is the architect.

Will you kindly tell us what drop we should have to the floor? It is our intention to put a cement floor in. What thickness should the cement floor be? What height should the stage have at stage openings? What height for the ceiling? Dimensions of theatre entrance, operating room, foyer, etc? Do you think it would be satisfactory to use a two-brick construction with pilasters to support the steel girders? We would want an attractive front, using some kind of modern trim over stucco, which would be put over the brick. What would you suggest along this line? What would be the cost?—V. A. G.

THE ANSWER:

AFTER READING your inquiry carefully, it is my understanding that there is a party wall on one side of the theatre, so it will be necessary to build another side wall. The inside width of the auditorium will be 48 feet, 6 inches. For such a width, arrange the seats as follows:

A center bank of 13 seats with a 4-foot, 3-inch aisle on each side and two wall banks of five seats each, giving 23 seats across width of auditorium. If the stores and stage are to be 20 feet deep, there will be left space for 22 rows of seats, making the lower floor seating capacity 506 seats.

You will require three sets of entrance doors, so place the ticket booth at silewalk line and the first set of entrance doors 8 feet back of sidewalk line. This will make the Lobby 12 feet deep, and the foyer wall will come in line with back wall of stores. The foyer should be 9 feet wide.

I suggest that one end of foyer, behind wall bank, be used for women's toilet room and the other one for stairway, leading to balcony. Under these balcony stairs, plan for stairs leading to basement, where men's toilet will be located. If this should not be desired, take enough space from one store room for men's room.

The incline of auditorium floor should be 36 inches, leaving the first 15 foot (near stage) level.

The balcony can be so constructed as to be supported on walls, separating stores from lobby and on columns placed in standee railing. If the property is an inside lot without alley, on one side, it will be impossible to provide for exit stairs from balcony; therefore, it may be necessary to reduce the width of store rooms, to make provision for these stairs.

The thickness of the concrete auditorium floor should be at least 5 feet, and this floor should be reinforced if not resting on solid ground.

The proscenium arch should be 20 feet high. The height of the ceiling depends upon the balcony layout. The lower part of balcony should be 10 feet above foyer floor. If you figure one a 250-seat balcony, this would require 11 rows plus a cross aisle, making top of balcony at least 20 feet above foyer. From top of balcony to ceiling the height should be not less than 8 feet, 6 inches; but, you may be able to slope the roof toward stage.

The foyer will be 9 x 31 feet. The projection room should be 10 x 22 feet, minimum.

I advise you to build reinforced concrete piers about 24 x 12 feet to support steel roof trusses, in place of two bricks as you suggested. You may be able to cut half way in party wall, giving the piers 4-inch projection. This will reinforce party wall.

The cost of such a building, exclusive of equipment, would be around $43,000.

THE QUESTION:

I AM A constant reader of your valuable magazine and have obtained a great deal of useful information through your department. I want to remodel the interior of my theatre. I would like to make it as modern as possible. I have been hearing a great deal of a streamline design for a theatre, but am unable to tell what it is like.

The acoustics in my auditorium are not what they should be. Will the covering of walls with fabric improve it? How should it be applied and what is the approximate cost of same?

I have noticed in some theatres that the carpets in the aisles are of a plain tone, while in the foyer a pattern is used. Is there any advantage to this method? I also noticed that single width carpets are used in the aisles. My aisles are 58 inches wide, and I do not think the use of single width carpet would look right. What is your opinion?

The walls in the auditorium of my theatre are paneled in squares wtih ornamental plaster bands, and the cornice is supported by plaster brackets. I think they can be easily removed. The plaster in the ceiling is bad. Could this be covered with Celotex?—M. H. P.

THE ANSWER:

STREAMLINE design for theatres is similar to streamlining automobiles or any other objects. To explain this as well as I possibly can, it is carried out by flowing lines without obstructions in the wall surfaces and with as little ornamentation as possible. For instance, a sidewall in an auditorium may be divided into horizontal panels. Starting at the rear of the auditorium, these horizontal lines continue toward stage and are sometimes curved downward at the proscenium arch. The idea is to tie the proscenium in with the walls, to form one unit.

To cover the walls with fabric, all ornamental plaster should be removed. The walls should be stripped with 1-inch wood stripping. The division between the fabric panels is generally formed by wood mouldings with small members covering the tacking of the fabric. There should be applied a layer of rock wool or felt behind the fabric. This is for acoustical qualities.

Plain color for carpet in aisles is frequently used, but, personally, I prefer the continuation of the same carpet as used in the foyer. I think the plain color is used to continue the color scheme of the seats.

trough reflector supported in a vertical position a few inches away from a back plate which is attached to the wall. The lamps are in the trough, concealed from view, and their light is spread upon the back plate and upon the wall for some distance at either side. Such indirect brackets, shielding the lamps completely, ensure glare-free illumination. Reflected glare from the metal back plate is avoided by using a satin finish instead of a bright finish.

Indirect pylon brackets using lumiline lamps in the troughs, are much more slender than the direct lighting pylon brackets with glass panels enclosing incandescent lamps. They usually have a body diameter of from 3½ to 4½ inches, and an all-over length of 36 inches or so. The reflector trough forming the body of the totally indirect fixture is often half-hexagonal, half-round, plain or reeded.

A third type of pylon bracket fixture is for semi-indirect lighting. Like the totally indirect fixture, it consists of a trough containing the lamps and distributing light upon the wall, but the trough, instead of being entirely of metal, has a glass panel which permits direct light to pass into the room, giving an effect of life and warmth.

There are many very attractive designs in the pylon bracket fixtures. The metal is finished in burnished gold, gold-and-pewter, polished aluminum, satin nickel, and satin bronze; and in the pewter, also in sprayed colors.

A satin finish or a mat color should be used when the design of the fixture is such that reflected glare may be caused by light shining upon the back plate or other parts of bright metal. This point regarding the finish needs to be considered, particularly in the case of totally indirect and semi-indirect brackets, which throw light towards the back plate. Direct lighting pylon brackets of glass panels usually can be in a bright finish if desired, as the light does not strike the metal sharply. It is often well to have the fixtures spray-finished in the same color as the wall so that they will tone in with it.

By using pylon brackets wired with two circuits, one for the low intensity show light and the other for the stronger house light, a complete job of auditorium lighting can be done. If desired, other circuits can be included to permit changing color effect.

There are somewhat smaller and quite simple wall brackets that are of sufficiently low-surface brightness for auditorium lighting. Among these are the half-cylinders and similar forms of opal glass, each enclosing a lumiline lamp. They are softly luminous, in excellent taste and do not interfere with the screen illumination.

PUNCH LIGHTS

When the wall bracket units or other light sources do not have a second circuit with more powerful lamps for lighting the house when the picture is not being shown, one of the newer methods is to use "punch lights" recessed in the ceiling to furnish the house lighting. These units often consist of a reflector containing the lamp bulb, and a louver of concentric metal rings to prevent the glare of the bulb from striking into the eyes of the audience from any ordinary point of view. These units project light directly downward into the auditorium. Then there is an excellent type of recessed punch light that has a prismatic glass plate, or "controlense," in place of the louver to direct the light and prevent glare.

Right: An ornamental ceiling fixture by the Nation-Wide Equipment Manufacturing Company of New York, as installed in a lobby. It consists of three sections of flashed opal glass, supported by solid aluminum. It may be used on several color circuits.

FOYER FIXTURES

When the foyer is practically a part of the auditorium, being merely the space back of the standee rail, care must be taken to avoid any form of lighting in this space that might interfere wtih comfortable vision during the showing of the picture. The light should, as a rule, shine downward. Therefore soffit units recessed in the ceiling of the foyer, shallow drums, with louver sides and glass bottoms and other types that deliver downward light that is glare free and of moderate intensity are desirable.

Where the foyer is quite definitely separated from the auditorium by a wall and doors, more freedom in the choice of lighting fixtures and a higher level of illumination are permissible. Though the fixtures may be handsome in a conservative modern way they should be essentially functional.

LOUNGE FIXTURES

Where there is a general lounge used by both men and women, pendent, semi-ceiling, or ceiling fixtures of handsome, but conservative design may well be used for semi-indirect, direct or totally indirect lighting. The light should be strong enough to make the room bright and gay, but soft and free from glare. If the fixtures contain panels of frosted, etched or warm-toned glass of such character as to softly diffuse the light, they add to the cheerfulness of the general effect of the lounge, which should be intimate and homelike.

• These five designs for ceiling and wall fixtures, by the Roman Art Company, employ, for the most part, metallic forms and in all cases include the filtering of colored light for the purpose of creating and reflecting blends of colors. Louvered metallic members enclose the light sources. In some types the louvers exclusively emit the light; in others direct light is available through translucent glass. In all of these designs the ornamental character of the fixture is importantly derived from the reflection of light, which traces the forms and lends them iridescence.

where the large opening can be tied in with the design. The efficiency, and utilization factor of the light as well, is approximately 30%, and the spread of light 30°.

Reflectors with silvered bowl lamps (Figure 2) are suited to special lighting, decorative in itself, for beneath marquees and in lobbies. They have an efficiency and light utilization of approximately 50%, and a spread of light of 30°.

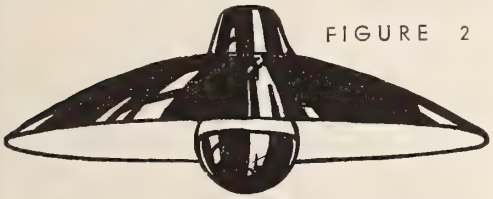

FIGURE 2

Elliptical reflectors (Figure 3) collect a large part of the light from a lamp and direct it back through a fairly small hole placed at the second, or conjugate, focus. They have an efficiency and light utilization of approximately 35%, and a spread of 60°. This system is suitable for auditorium use where small inconspicuous holes in the ceiling is desired.

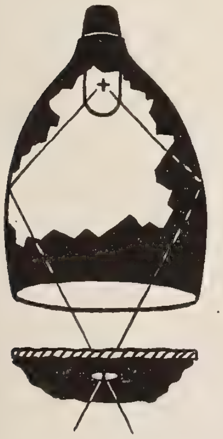

FIGURE 3

Lens downlights with plano-convex lenses and spherical reflectors (Figure 4) have an efficiency and light utilization of approximately 15%, and a spread of 5° to 20°. The lens brightness is high, and therefore should be used for high ceiling auditoriums or for special applications such as corridors or arcades leading from entrance to theatre proper.

Objective lens equipment (Figure 5) provides good control and can be directed through small ceiling holes that are unobtrusive and well suited to auditorium lighting. Spreads up to 90° are obtainable, though the efficiency is low—approximately 10%.

Lens plate lighting (Figure 6) is now a familiar method. It is suited to many special applications, but the lens brightness is rather high for auditorums. Spread of 5° to 30°, and efficiency of 20% are readily obtainable. By using a spread lens the beam can be elongated in one direction.

Elliptical reflectors with lenses (Figure 7, page 38) project light through holes which are unobtrusive, and hence such equipment is well suited to auditorium lighting. With this system efficiencies up to 40% are possible. Spreads are limited to aproximately 60°. This system requires considerable space above the ceiling.

the ceiling line. The equipment should project down below the ceiling as little as possible, and should be decorative, since patrons seated in this location cannot enjoy the beauty of the auditorium proper.

CONCEALED LUMILINES

Figure 8 illustrates a stepped ceiling, which has a light cutoff at the vertical, and projects the light forward toward the front of the auditorium. Lumiline lamps may be concealed in the cavity for this purpose, or the cavity may be covered with a semi-diffusing glass such as a ribbed or configurated glass.

These systems can be coordinated with the design in a number of different ways. They may be continuous lines of light carrying from one side wall to the other, or they may be arranged in short lengths over the aisles alone.

ing and supporting members of metal, may be attached to the walls all around the room at some distance below the ceiling, to project light upward and outward upon the ceiling and direct light into the room through the translucent glass. These units are made to take lumiline lamps, and they come in sections ready to install. These luminous cornices are new and very pleasing.

For the women's lounge and powder room there are many attractive fixtures, including ceiling drums, semi-ceiling and pendent fixtures, and indirect wall urns. Fixtures that have grace combined with the smartness of simple forms are especially suitable. A typical pendent fixture for indirect lighting has a reflector cup of metal at the bottom of the stem, surrounded by a disc of plate glass, while crystal balls, suspended on strings of crystal beads above the light, supply the note of sparkle and charm.

Sometimes smartly severe, essentially functional fixtures are preferable.

Various forms of lighting are available for the make-up mirrors in the powder room, including simple cylinders of frosted glass containing lumiline lamps at the sides of the mirrors. The light should be delivered at face level, be sufficiently strong, and be free from glare.

In the men's lounge, or smoking room, fixtures of simple functional design are the most suitable, such as ceiling drums with translucent glass set in heavy metal, and rib-like half-rings of metal in bright or satin chromium finish. There is an almost unlimited variety of direct, semi-indirect and indirect units that have this straightforward, substantial modern character.

MAIN LOBBY LIGHTING

Trough fixtures suspended from the ceiling are widely favored for lighting the inner lobby. They are big enough to be in scale with this space and therefore are usually of more satisfactory appearance than a row of separate pendent or semi-ceiling fixtures, which tend to look fussy and to make this comparatively long and narrow room appear even longer. Excellent stock designs are available in trough fixtures for lobbies. Those that have glass troughs in metal frames for semi-indirect lighting combine glareless illumination with the lively appearance of the luminous glass and the gleaming metal. Some have louvered troughs. Oblong box-shaped fixtures suspended on four stems of semi-ceiling length and other types suited to the shape and decorations of the lobby.

There are severely functional designs in lobby fixtures that are very smart and especially designed for such spaces; for example, a ceiling unit consisting of a quarter-cylinder of opal glass set in polished metal arcs to project light towards the center of the lobby while there are panels of opal glass in the opposite side of the unit to project light downward upon the wall. These units are mounted on the surface of the ceiling, in two rows at some distance from the side walls.

INTENSITIES OF ILLUMINATION

In selecting types of fixtures, it should be remembered that lighting of the various spaces in the interior of the theatre should be graded down from the intense light of the outer lobby through the less brilliant illumination of the inner or main lobby, and the moderate lighting of the foyer to the low level of illumination in the auditorium, so that the eyes of incoming patrons may adjust themselves gradually to the change.

This discussion has indicated, I think, that the term "lighting fixture" has a different and broader meaning than in the past. Lighting fixtures for theatres are no longer ornamental lanterns, chandeliers, wall brackets with branching arms, and they are no longer modernistic curiosities of glass plates, rods and ornamental metal in eccentric designs. The old familiar forms have largely disappeared and have been replaced by new functional, clean-cut forms. Though many fixtures are still suspended from the ceiling, there are also many that are mounted upon it and many that are recessed flush.

THEATRE ACOUSTICS TODAY

3. Influence of Furnishings

● Considering the effect of seating, carpeting, fabrics and materials on sound for all audiences and frequencies—the third article of a notable series

By C. C. POTWIN

IN PLANNING surface acoustic treatrment for theatres, the selection of the correct type and quantity of sound absorbing material to be installed and its proper placement on the various surfaces within the auditorium are considerations of the utmost importance.

Four fundamental factors determine the requirements for treatment of a given theatre; namely, its (1) size, (2) shape, (3) method of construction, and (4) the quality of furnishings installed. As explained in the preceding sections, if size, shape and method of construction are efficiently controlled from an acoustical standpoint in the original design of new theatres, the most economical selection and best disribution of treatment can be assured in final planning.

In the modernization of existing theatres, however, these three determining factors are usually fixed, and more stringent requirements must, therefore, be placed on surface acoustic treatment. This is particularly true in those cases where the physical characteristics of the auditorium depart widely from the best acoustical features of design.

AUDITORIUM SEATING

The fourth determining factor; namely, the quality of theatre furnishings, is one which may be readily controlled in renovation as well as in new construction.

In classifying theatre furnishings with respect to their acoustic properties, the sound absorbing efficiency of the seats is the first and most important element to be considered. It is definitely accepted that upholstered seats contribute to good acoustics in theatres, particularly if the sound-absorbing value of these seats is high, so that when unoccupied they compensate to a large degree for the absorption ordinarily provided by the audience. An upholstered seat of the modern type, having, perhaps, a leather-covered spring bottom, and a fully padded back with, say, mohair or leather or velour covering, absorbs approximately two-thirds as much sound energy as the average person, whereas a plain wooden seat provides only about one-twentieth of the equivalent sound absorption.

With the installation of upholstered seats of the above type, or of other types such as the modern deeply upholstered chair with full spring construction, which has even higher acoustic efficiency, variations in the degree of reverberation with changes in the size of the audience are small, and the time of reverberation is thus more nearly constant for all audience conditions.

When inefficient seats having very little or no upholstery are used, there is always a wide variation in the time of reverberation between small and large audiences. To offset the unfavorable condition resulting from this defect, it is usually necessary to increase the quantity of sound absorbing material to be installed. This additional material only partially corrects the condition, however, since in treating the theatre to provide good acoustic conditions for probable average audiences, the theatre is often still somewhat reverberant for very small attendances, and slightly "dead" for a capacity house. Therefore, the installation of efficient upholstered seats is the first requirement in the selection of furnishings for either new or existing theatres.

CARPETING

Carpet and drapes also fall under the classification of furnishings, and the quantity and quality of these materials installed affect the requirements for surface treatment. The carpet used in all aisles throughout the theatre and in the standing space should be of a heavy grade and should be lined with at least a ½-inch thickness of carpet cushion. The efficient carpeting will provide a limited amount of sound absorption and will effectively reduce impact noise.

If there is a large amount of open floor area between the first row of seats and the stage, as is often the case in theatres where the stage is shallow, this area should also be carpeted to eliminate sound reflections which may originate at this point, strike the ceiling, and ultimately reach the seating area at the rear of the auditorium. Such reflections, having a "time-lag" sufficient to produce marked interference at the rear seats, are encountered frequently in cases where carpet has been omitted from this front section of the floor area.

USE OF DRAPES

The present trend in theatre architecture is toward the use of very little draping material in the auditorium-proper. This is desirable from an acoustic standpoint because most forms of draping material, while efficient absorbents of the high frequencies, provide very little sound absorption at the low frequencies.

If materials such as heavy velour or lined damask are hung in folds and spaced several inches away from the surface over which they are installed, their low frequency absorption value is somewhat increased. However, this increase is not sufficient to permit the use of drapes, exclusively, as a form of acoustic treatment for the average theatre. Even in cases where only moderate quantities are used, it is sometimes difficult to compensate for the inherent deficiency in low-frequency absorption when planning for surface acoustic treatment.

If, in special cases, drapes must be used to complete the decorative scheme, they should be of a heavy grade, should be hung with at least a one-third gather, and should be spaced several inches away from the surface to be covered. In all cases, this draping should be limited as far as practicable to doors or other openings, to standee rails, and to the proscenium opening.

Very light-weight fabrics may be used as a decorative covering for certain types of acoustic material (such as rock wool) to be described in a later section. For this purpose, the fabrics must be both thin and porous, and must be stretched tightly over the surface of the acoustic material. These qualities and method of application are necessary, to insure that the sound absorbing value of the treatment will not be materially affected or altered by the covering.

Back-stage draping, which we formerly implied would be required in most theatres, is a separate and distinct consideration. While this particular draping is in many cases a contributing element to good acoustics, it does not usually influence the requirements for treatment of the auditorium proper.

SELECTION OF MATERIALS

Having enumerated the various important factors governing the requirements for surface treatment, careful consideration must now be given to the proper selection of materials with respect to their sound absorption values throughout the frequency range. In a previous article in this series [June 26th issue] we explained the fallacies of the 512-cycle analysis and stressed the importance of making acoustic analyses of theatres for the full frequency range instead of for this single frequency. This more complete analysis is indispensable, to ensure that the proper balance and correct quantities of absorpation will be provided for the extremely wide range of frequencies reproduced with present high-quality sound systems.

Our experience indicates that two major errors are frequently made in this phase of acoustic planning. First, the type of material which the exhibitor or his architect selects for treatment of a given theatre may have the correct absorption coefficient at 512 cycles per second, but may deviate widely from the actual requirements at the other frequencies. In most cases these discrepancies are found for frequencies below 512 c.p.s.

Second, there is a tendency in the field to "overtreat" theatres; that is, to install more acoustic material than is actually required. If the first error is made in selecting the type of material for treatment, the resulting inferior condition can be seriously aggravated by the second error; namely, the introduction of an excessive amount of absorption for only a limited portion of the frequency range.

METHODS INDICATED

While it may be possible to change acoustic treatment readily and inexpensively in the early stages of new design, if an analysis indicates that it will not meet the sound absorption requirements at all frequencies, such changes cannot be made so easily after the theatre is built and the treatment has been installed. In this latter case, one of two major alterations may be necessary. If the material used for treatment is extremely deficient at the low frequencies, it may be necessary to remove the entire amount and replace it with another type which has more uniform absorption values with respect to the entire frequency range.

If, on the other hand, the treatment installed is only moderately deficient at the low end, it may be possible to obtain the proper balance of absorption by retaining a portion of this material, provided another type which will compensate for its deficiencies is substituted in the remaining areas. In either, case, the unit cost of treatment is frequently more than duobled as a result of these substitutions, and furthermore, the decorative scheme is invariably impaired. Consequently, the original treatment must be planned carefully and correctly in the early stages of both new design and modernization, if radical and costly changes are to be avoided.

[Mr. Potwin's next article will consider and explain optimum reverberation time as a function of the frequency range and theatre volume, and he will also discuss the correct methods of distributing acoustic treatment in theatres of various shapes and proportions. Mr. Potwin is a member of the technical consulting staff of Electrical Research Products, Inc., dealing with acoustic problems.—THE EDITOR.]

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS

and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

CARELESSNESS IN PROJECTION IS BOTH COSTLY AND DANGEROUS

A VERY interesting letter came to me recently from a man who employs many projectionists, in response to which I have prepared the remarks below. First, however, I quote a paragraph from his letter:

"There is one topic I would like to present for consideration as a subject for discussion in your columns. I have found a considerable proportion of projectionists are inclined to be rather careless whenever some labor may be avoided. I therefore respectfully suggest that if you can see your way clear, you discuss the effect of such carelessness upon the box office. I believe the effect, in event you follow my suggestion, will be somewhat greater if the source of the suggestion is not divulged. It might make no difference, but men are queer and I have noticed that projectionists will consider and usually accept arguments put forward by yourself, whereas if the same thing is advanced by one in my position the reaction is very different. They seem to think there is a 'catch in it' somewhere."

Careless work is poor work and poor work depreciates the value of results produced. That is equivalent to saying one plus one makes two. It then need hardly be added that poor projection work does reduce box office receipts. That is the natural sequence, viewed over an extended period of theatre operation.

If the projectionist is careless in attaining and maintaining critically sharp focus, in the very nature of things it means added fatigue for the eyes of theatre patrons. And faults such as this represent carelessness, for by proper care and effort the focus of a motion picture theatre screen image can be maintained critically sharp, though it means added work, for that man does not live who can fix definition at critical sharpness at a distance of 75 or 100 feet from the screen. Much the same injurious effect is produced by lack of care in testing at least once a week for faint travel ghost.

A dirty projection room, in which the air is impregnated with dust, tends to result in deposits of that dust upon the films, with result that ground noises appear in the sound and "rain" in the screen image. Carelessness in care of motor-generator commutators may affect the sound. Carelessness in lubrication tends to spread oil on the films, especially if a desire to "do it the easiest way" has prevented establishment of proper swabs to catch oil from the oil well and bearings.

And so I might go on for pages. We all surely must know that only conscientious, proficient projection work produces adequate results. Carelessness cannot be tolerated in a function like projection—indeed, in projection carelessness is usually costly and always dangerous.

METALLIC AND FILM FUSE LINKS

J. R. PRATER, projectionist of Palouse, Wash., writes, "May I offer a suggestion with regard to the article in the May 29th issue on port fire shutter control? While it is freely conceded that metallic fuses will not release the fire shutter master cord as quickly as will a film link fuse when the latter may be exposed to the direct action of flame, still metallic fuses are available that will melt at a far lower temperature than would be required to ignite film not exposed directly to the action of flame.

"For example, if the fuse is outside and the fire inside a closed magazine, sufficient heat would be produced to melt a metallic fuse long before a film fuse would let go, since no flames could possibly reach the latter. Whether a metallic or a film fuse will act the more quickly will therefore depend upon circumstances. So why not use both?"

Friend Prater then describes the method of installing a fuse system employing both film and a metal fuse, but a description seems hardly necessary since the process is fairly obvious. Not only that, but I have never proposed using a film fuse link except that it be so placed that the blaze will reach it almost the instant the fire starts.

Up to this time there has never been any reason advanced why a narrow slit a trifle wider than film cannot be provided in projector mechanism casings, with a suitably planned recess at its inner end, this slit to be placed either immediately over the aperture opening or close to the upper loop. A loop of film is inserted through the slot, with a round rod 1⅜ inch long laid in the loop, which would do two things; namely, prevent the film loop pulling through the opening, and close the slot if the film fuse be not used, the floor of the recess sloping toward the slot, the film loop itself of course forming a section of the master cord of the port shutter itself.

Such a scheme could very easily be arranged by projector manufacturers. It would add almost nothing to cost of manufacture and could easily be so made that the short metal bar could not be removed, hence the slot would be automatically sealed when a film fuse was not used. It is evident that with such an arrangement, in case of an aperture fire, the fuse would be ignited the instant the fire got away from the aperture.

SCREEN THICKNESS AND ATTENUATION

J. L. MANNING of San Francisco, writes, "I have been advised that the thickness of a screen has an effect upon frequency losses. Is or is not this true? Have had several answers from those supposed to know, but the answers differ."

Yes, screen thickness does affect sound transmission variously according to frequencies per second. Mr. H. F. Hopkins of Bell Telephone Laboratories, New York, discusses such matters in a monograph entitled, "Design and Testing of Motion Picture Screens for Sound Motion Picture Work." Following is an excerpt which I publish here with the permission of Bell Laboratories:

"In regard to the acoustic properties of a screen interposed between a sound source and an observer, it is to be expected that sound may be transmitted in various ways. The screen may be made to vibrate as a diaphragm under the driving influence of the sound waves that ultimately reach the observer. As a second possible manner, the original sounds may be transmitted through air passages in the material. A third possible way would be by wave propagation in the screen material as a conducting medium. Because of certain practical limitations to the permissible thickness of a screen, however, and because of the physical properties of the materials that might be used in its construction, the power so transmitted would be small in comparison with that transmitted by either of the other two methods."

Mr. Hopkins then continues with a general discussion of screens from the sound transmission viewpoint, pointing out that while it is quite possible to use a thin screen of proper material as a diaphragm, acting as such as a whole, it is impractical for the reason that so much of the sound wave power incident thereupon would be used up in accelerating such a huge diaphragm that relatively little would remain for moving the air load upon the opposite, or audience, side.

With regard to perforated screens, it is shown by oscillographic record that a screen having half of its total area (special screen for laboratory research) eliminated by perforations of 0.0013 of a square inch in area each, and having a thickness of 0.013 of an inch, passes all frequencies fairly evenly (not more than 1.2-decibel variation) from 100 to 4000 frequencies, but from 400 to 5000 there is a drop of about 2.5 decibels. Beyond 8000 there is a fairly gradual drop to 5 decibels at 8000 frequencies per second.

Examining the record of a screen, presumably of like characteristics, having perforations of the same area and an equal total perforated area, but a thickness of 0.030 of an inch, we find that up to approximately 3100 frequencies the record is much the same, but the drop-off in highs starts earlier and goes a bit lower, reaching approximately 7 decibels at 10,000 cycles. At about 4,200 cycles, it reaches perhaps 2.5 decibels, remaining fairly constant until the 6,000 mark is reached. The drop then is gradual to 10,000 cycles, which is the limit of the record. However, at that point the line begins to drop sharply.

In this connection it is only fair to quote from the report of the Projection Screens Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers (June 1933 issue of the Society's Journal) as follows:

"When the committee first reported upon screen transmission it included the statement that screens that are satisfactory up to 6,000 cycles are usually found to attenuate less than 4 decibels at 10,000 cycles. Inasmuch as this value does not represent excessive attenuation, and since lesser amounts would be difficult to obtain with commercial screens, this committee feels that it can recommend it as representative of good practice."

PROJECTION GIVEN DUE RECOGNITION

IT IS BECOMING increasingly evident that theatre managements and the higher-ups of theatre circuits are realizing that excellence in projection is of high importance to the box office. That this is true is made evident by increasing willingness of theatre managements to devote real thought and study to its affairs, a thing unheard of a comparatively short time ago. Not only this, but there is an increasing willingness to expend real cash money in the effort to secure excellence both upon the screen and through the loudspeakers.

During a recent 4,000-mile motor trip, I found many theatre managers not merely willing, but eager to listen to an address devoted entirely to projection affairs, and to have the projectionists in their employ do so as well.

Upon my return I called upon my good friends Lester Isaac, director of projection of Loew's, Inc., and his assistant M. D. O'Brien. To my surprise I found their former somewhat over-crowded quarters in

Revised Sixth Edition

F. H. RICHARDSON'S BLUEBOOK OF PROJECTION

The sixth edition of F. H. Richardson's Bluebook is now in its second printing, for which it has been extensively revised. In addition to revisions in text, it contains a supplementary chapter devoted to developments which have become important in projection room technique and servicing methods since the first printing.

The revised edition includes 736 pages of up-to-the-minute text, charts and data with detailed description of assembly, wiring and functioning of all modern sound and projection apparatus. It is a practical "trouble shooter," cross indexed for immediate reference in any projection room emergency.

If you wish a copy of this essential book, it will be necessary that you fill in and mail the coupon without delay.

the Loew State Theatre Building in Times Square, occupied by others. I was directed to new projection department headquarters on 46th Street, just around the corner, where the department is now installed in six large, pleasant offices, all facing on the street and having 2,200 square feet of space. A large workshop is included.

Mr. Isaac has a commodious office, as also has Mr. O'Brien and William Boettcher, sound engineer. In all, the department employs eighteen persons, some of whom have been with it almost since its inception.

To give credit where credit is due, I compliment Mr. Charles Moskowitz, Mr. Isaac's superior, who had the foresight to realize that projection is not a sort of hit or miss affair—that it deserved careful, expert attention and constant supervision.

Each of the eight engineers employed in Mr. Isaac's department is equipped with a complete trouble shooting kit, containing all tools and instruments required for emergency repairs, tracing and locating trouble, etc. Voltmeters, ammeters, oscillators and tube analyzers are included. Any one of these men can enter a theatre projection room, make complete tests of its equipments and make any necessary emergency repair.

In Mr. Isaac's office, changed monthly, are records from which, at a glance, the exact age of any equipment in any Loew theatre (and they are scattered far and wide in many lands) may be ascertained. Not only that, but the age and approximate present condition of each of the component parts of any equipment may be determined. This is representative of a system built up under the supervision of Mr. Isaac, with the aid of Mr. O'Brien, to enable projectionists in Loew theatres everywhere to place before audiences consistent excellence in both visual and sound elements of the performance, and to do so with maximum efficiency.

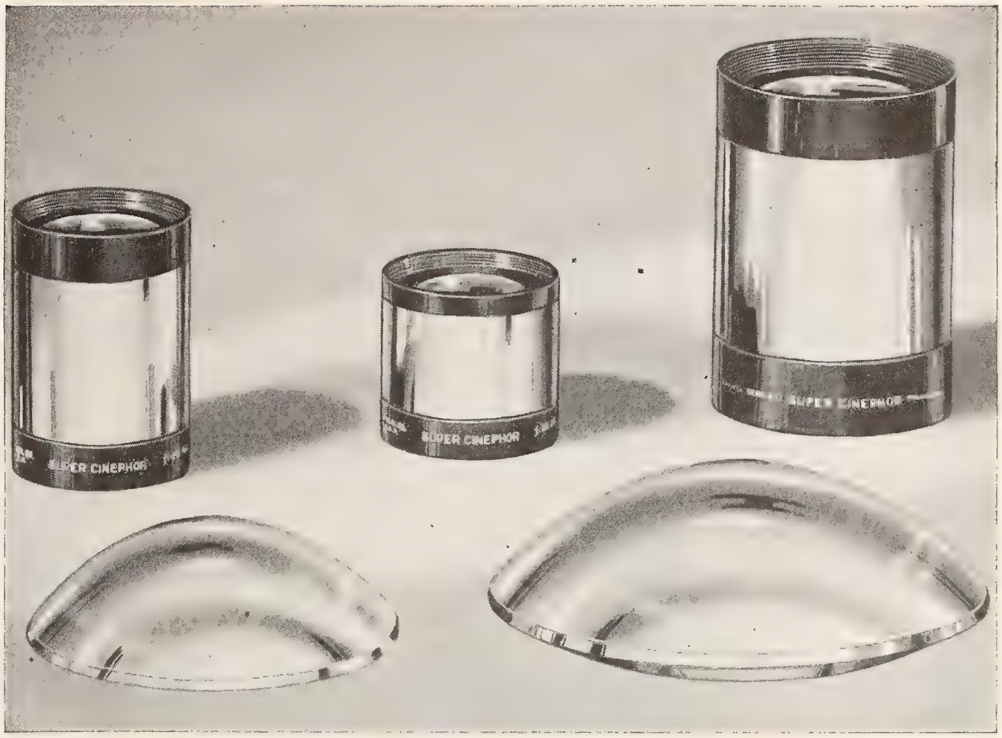
A GROUP OF UNUSUAL QUESTIONS

R. F. GEESLIN of Macon, Ga., asks these unusual questions: "Have your bluebook of projection and read everything you write both in the HERALD and BETTER THEATRES.

"Do you believe the industry will eventually adopt 70-mm. film as standard? Do you think rear projection and the translucent screen will ever displace present methods? Why would it not be better to locate the loudspeakers at top or sides of screen and use a solid screen? Do screen perforations serve any purpose other than sound transmission?"

As to the 70-mm. film, I do not think it will be adopted, at least for a long, long time. It was laid aside partly because of the immense expense that must attend the introduction of wider film. The Society of Motion Picture Engineers prefers 50-mm. to 70-mm., because it is possible so to alter present projectors that both 50- and 35-mm. films may be projected with them.

I regard it as very highly improbable



WITHIN MILLIONTHS OF AN INCH

The accuracy of the lens surface curvature of Super-Cinephor projection lenses is held to within a few millionths of an inch. That is why they have such superior covering power, critical definition and ability to project a wide angular field. They are the first true anastigmats offered for projection purposes.

They're color corrected, also, for the maximum in true rendition of the tone values of today's color films.

that rear projection will ever come into general use. That opinion is based upon several factors, one of which is that either there must be added theatre length or restricted seating area.

Regarding location of speakers, I hold that while such position as you ask about would be objectionable in some theatres, in others a solid screen with speakers located above, below or at sides of screen, (depending upon local conditions) would be satisfactory.

Screen perforations are intended to serve solely as a medium for sound transmission.

SOME POSSIBLE CAUSES OF HUM

FROM PRITCHETT, COLO., comes the following, over a signature more or less illegible:

"Am operating two projectors having 900-watt, 30-ampere mazda lamps. Each projector takes current through its own transformer. Exciter lamps are 27-volt, 1-ampere. Machine current of course a.c. Use a 6-tube amplifier and 500-ohm speaker. Some while ago projector No. 2 developed a hum that I have been unable to locate. Have changed exciter lamps, p.e. cell, cable leading from p.e. cell to amplifier and done everything I am able to think of that might remedy the trouble, but without success. Have learned very much from your most excellent Bluebook of Projection, but it does not seem to cover this particular trouble. The man who operates the local radio broadcasting station has tried to help me, but without success.

"The hum is not steady in intensity, but varies from time to time. The radio broadcast man said it was a job for a technician. Very seldom am troubled with it on newsreels, and if I am it is very light. I keep the projectors and equipments perfectly clean."

I referred this problem to Aaron Nadell, sound engineer, who replies:

"First, in spite of the careful examination the equipment has already had a striking point is that the hum varies in intensity and with some types of pictures, such as newsreels, is not heard at all. It therefore is possible it is only sprocket hole or dividing line noise caused by projector No. 2 being out of alignment in such manner that the film travel is affected.

"Second, whether or not the engineer inspected the amplifier interior is not indicated. Input from the two projectors goes through two separate circuits, possibly through two separate tubes, before reaching the amplifier circuit. A loose connection in the No. 2 input circuits, ahead of the point of junction, would cause pick-up of a.c. hum from the amplifier's power circuits.

"Third, is there a ground connection on both projectors? If so, are all connections of No. 2 ground clean and tight? Bad ground to earth might cause such trouble.

"Fourth, are exciter lamps a.c. or d.c operated. If d.c., the filter of No. 2 ex-citer lamp may be defective. This may be easily checked by transferring condensers of the two projectors.

"Fifth, there probably are separate condensers in the amplifier that filter the p.e. cell voltage supply. Intermittent loose connection of No. 2 filter condenser would account for such a trouble.

"Sixth, excessive sparking of brushes (if any), or other defect in No. 2 drive motor, might do it, or same in motor-generator, if there were one, would do the same thing. Remedy is to clean brushes and commutator, or do such other thing as may be necessary to stop sparking.

"Those are only a few of the possibilities for such trouble, but the changes and inspections already made rule out many of the others. If the trouble is not located in any of the above, let us have further details, especially a description of the hum (whether 120-cycle or what) and of conditions under which it is loudest or weakest."

ADAPTING EQUIPMENT TO PUSH-PULL TRACKS

ALLAN E. MULLER, manager of the Community theatre in Arlington, Minn., writes:

"I am now on a spot and do not know quite what to do. Have a set of Lincrophone soundheads purchased new in 1934. Amplifier is of Webster Electric (Racine) make, type WB51-RN-1. It has the following frequency range: with tone compensator at high, 150 to 9000 cycles; at low, from 300 to 9000 cycles. We use a 12-inch Jensen speaker. Sound was good until we received the new push-pull recordings, then became poor. Amplifier rating is maximum undistorted output 6.5 watts.

"Have been told that to secure good reproduction I must install a new type lens system in the heads and use a new type exciter lamp; also, must have an amplifier of much greater maximum output to take care of the new recordings. Please advise as to what to do to clear up the trouble; also, what specifications should the new amplifier have? Also, will a change of exciter lamps and their optical systems reproduce the old type sound tracks as well as the new push-pull?

"In answer to Bluebook School Question 53 in the HERALD it was stated that one should use an output meter in the monitor circuit. Exactly what is meant by this? Is anything necessary for this test aside from the meter?"

I referred this to that very able sound engineer, Aaron Nadell, who answers:

"I cannot understand why a meter on the monitor circuit was advised. Perfectly correct, but is not standard practice. These meters usually are built for 500 ohms, whereas monitor circuits are almost always something else. Such a meter would not give a true reading except on a 500-ohm circuit, hence for other than 500 ohms a correction must be applied; that is, unless the meter is especially calibrated for the circuit. Commonly they are connected across the 500-ohm taps of the output transformer of the power amplifier.

"My advice to Mr. Muller with regard to push-pull is that he let the big theatres do the experimenting, instructing his exchange to supply him with only standard prints. Push-pull is not as yet established as standard practice. There is the chance that it never will be.

"If, however, he feels he must have it, he most certainly must have soundheads designed for it. Whether or not his present heads can be adapted to it is a matter to be decided by their manufacturer. A soundhead adapted to run push-pull may be changed over to accommodate standard track and back again to push-pull, and that, too, with comparatively little trouble. In some types it can be done between reels and with no difficulty at all. What can be done with the heads he has I cannot say.

"Nine thousand cycles will serve at the upper limit of his amplifier under any circumstances, but for best results the lower limit must be less than 150 cycles. This in turn means d. c. exciter lamp supply and will probably require the replacement of his 1934 loudspeakers. I would suggest a new amplifier, new or modified soundheads, d. c. exciter lamp supply, and a Jensen 18-inch speaker. If it can be secured (doubtful), there would be an advantage in an amplifier of considerably more than 6.5 watts output that incorporates volume expansion.

"As to the last question, the output meter alone is not of much use. It calls for a calibrated multiple-frequency test film such as is put out by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. With such a film, the meter checks response at various frequences."

NEW FILM END WARNING DEVICE

R. L. TANSON, member of the Oakland, Calif., projectionists' union, Local 169, has invented a film end that has some interesting departures from previous schemes. Brother Tanson has named it the "Can't Scratch Film End Warning." It is intended to be mounted upon both projector upper magazine supports, connected with power by means of a double-throw switch by means of which either device may be energized and put into action.

The diagram should make the action plain, the part at the right showing the interior of the oblong casing, which is shown mounted, ready for action, at the left. It is not a change-over signal, but a warning that the time for changeover approaches, the intention being that the usual SRP changeover markings be used to signal for the actual act, just as now.

Referring to the diagram: At the right note friction wheel 8 bearing upon broken line wheel 2 (also 2 at left), the latter mounted upon the upper magazine spindle. Part 9 is in fixed position. To it, weights 11-11 are attached by pivoted sleeves, the lower ends of which attach to part 10 through its upper end 12. The lower end of this part carries the small friction wheel, the speed of which, it is evident, depends wholly upon the speed of the upper magazine spindle which carries wheel 2.

Now, as we all know, as projection proceeds, the speed of the upper reel rotation (hence the speed of wheels 2 and 8) must increase, whereupon weights 11-11 will be thrown outward further and further, pulling part 12, and wheel 8, upward, until finally flange 10 contacts surface 13, which closes an electrical circuit and sets off an alarm. The exact speed at which such contact will be made may be regulated by screw 7.

Careful examination discloses the fact that the action is positive; also that since the action is in no manner connected with the film, but wholly dependent upon the upper reel speed, there can be no possibility of film damage. It is obvious, however, that the upper reel must have enough brake friction applied to prevent over-running, but that should be the case in any event.

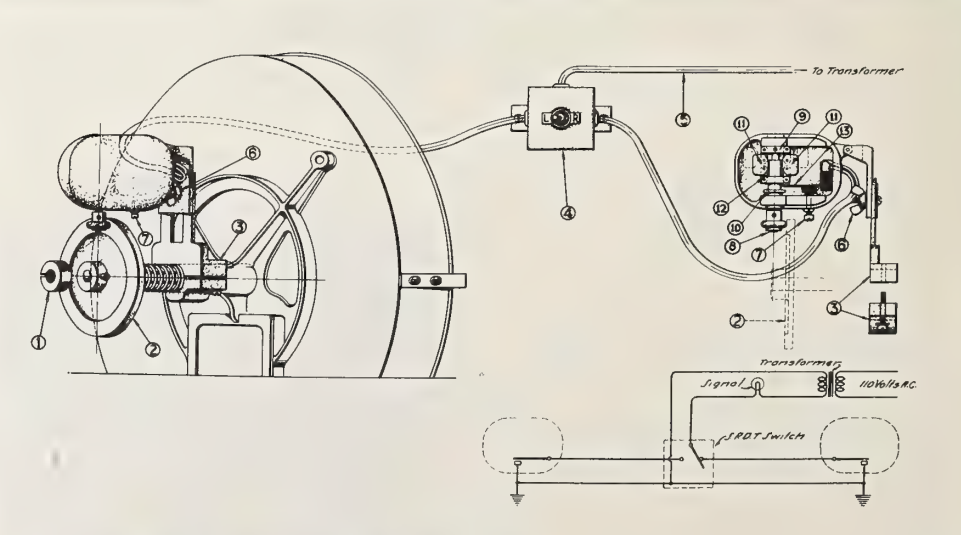

Diagram illustrating action of film end warning device.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

Vol. 128, No. 4

July 24, 1937

WHAT UNCLE SAM WOULD TAKE OVER

THE motion picture as a technological industry has a special interest in the activities and report of the National Resources Committee to the President, with its 450,000 words on "technological trends and their social implications."

The fact of the existence of the committee and the functional purpose of the report are considerably more important than the report itself.

The document is explicable only as a part of a pattern made exceedingly conspicuous in the dictator-ruled totalitarian regions of Europe.

In Europe the program is specifically addressed at preparation for the next big war. In the United States the pretext is concern lest inventions upset industry and create unemployment.

Possibly this alarm is unnecessary. Inventions come from free people in free industry, encouraged and inspired to enterprise. Dictatorship in all history can claim only one signal piece of technology, the evolution of the sugar beet for Napoleon. It has been a pain in the neck to the world trade in sugar ever since.

THE report to the President is a-twitter about television with the fear that it might become a vehicle of propaganda, unless government controlled. That is the most humorous part of the document.

The arts of expression, including the press, the radio and the motion picture, have problems enough in maintaining their freedom now. Only the other day a secretary to the President issued a ukase to the Associated Press in attempted punishment for its pictorial enterprise. It happened not to stick, because within the week there was a wedding in the family that just had to be photographed.

If it chances that television makes its commercial debut at last with Uncle Sam as editor, we may have a neat little design which reads "C.I.O." on one end and "Oh, I See" on the other.

IT'S THE WEATHER

SUMMARIZING current recordings of the press one finds a fine flow of epochal news. . . . Mr. Nikola Tesla, still worried about when his birthday is, having been born at midnight, decided on July 12 and gave out a statement that he was getting somewhere on a radio project to communicate with other planets. No one thought to ask what he had to say that was important enough to transmit—the batting averages maybe. . . . Irwin Wheeler abandoned his new offices in the Paramount building for three days of the heat wave and spent them pitching hay on his Connecticut acres. . . . Dentists in convention at Atlantic City were told by high authority that scolding children was bad for the teeth, by way of thyroid influence on calcium supply. . . . A "young college man" advertised in the New York papers for "week-end employment," saying he had "high potentials and a 1934 Chevrolet." . . . Representative Francis Xavier Coyne of Massachusetts would have a law forbidding "sugar coated, phoney names for stage and screen stars." He ought to go over Mr. James P. Cunningham's list of the real ones before the step is taken. . . . At the Hague the Netherlands government is debating the abolition of the reformed spelling movement for all Holland. That lets stand for history the famous old pioneer Nederlandsche Biographe en Mutoscope Maatschappij. . . . Meanwhile there are a few other spots that could stand some attention in this sector, including, as one may find on page 1104 of the very new International Motion Picture Almanac, the Magyar Mozgofenykepuzemengedelyesek Orszagos Egyesulete, which is the Hungarian exhibitors' association—so help us! . . . A secretary to a secretary in Washington has issued an order that customs inspectors may not have beer with their lunch because "it might be noticed on the breath by the passengers, which would be undignified for a representative of the government." In view of some of the current Federal halitosis the precaution at ports of entry seems futile. The order, however, would be a nice document to frame and hang in the Mayflower hotel bar. . . . A missionary up at Anchorage, Alaska, reports difficulty in Christianizing the Esquimaux of his region because they have to haul driftwood a hundred and twenty miles to keep warm and would prefer to go to hell for a rest. . . . Over the week-end mink, or minx, got into Mr. Colvin Brown's poultry run at Mulberry Ledge, a handsome adult Mephitis Mephitis invaded Mr. Martin Quigley's Islandhearth estate, and a deer browsed through Mr. Terry Ramsaye's Silvermine sweet corn patch. Monday morning the mail brought the editor a solicitation to subscribe to a fund "to save our wild life."

"ALL COLORS"

IT is pleasantly flattering to have inquiries come from all manner of persons and all manner of places, asking Motion Picture Herald for information pertaining to the industry which it serves. That gives a sense of being a world institution.

However, at times this tide of inquiry brings in perturbing items. For instance, here is one from a worthy housewife of the village of Alma way out in Harlan County, Nebraska, who asks:

"Will you give me advice with full details. I wish to learn to make all color film, namely red, gold, green, sky blue and cloud effects and on fast movie reel type film. In the commercial and professional work I wish to learn for theatrical movies, the best obtainable. . . ."

That is ambition.

"THE first film ever made was a picture of the Empire State Express," writes Mr. Laurence Stallings, opening an imposing article leading the motion picture number, the July issue, of Stage, a New York monthly. As Mr. Stallings' secretary might have discovered at any public library, "The Empire State Express," photographed for the American Mutoscope Company by W. K. L. Dickson, was made seven years after the birth of the art, and was in fact a historically famous infringement by Mr. Dickson on his prior labours at the Edison Laboratories. Mr. Stallings' theme was "tempo" and he made some history to fit it. That is known as the art of writing.

This Week

Sweet Tooth

Assuaging the sweet tooth and appetite of the theatre patron while his mind is occupied with whatever fare is being offered on the screen has become an important by-product of the exhibition branch of the industry. Since the days when silent pictures were shown to the accompaniment of the constant clicking of the chocolate candy vending machines on the backs of every other chair the sale of confections to the ever hungry patron has progressed to a $10,000,000 business. A survey of the field does not indicate whether the increasing gross revenues from concessions can be connected with the spread of double features and longer programs.

An analysis of the business and city by city reports on its operation start on page 12.

3 Per Cent Tax

Chicago's City Hall, in an attempt to meet a $3,000,000 deficit, proposed a three per cent tax on the gross receipts of theatres. Enactment of the legislation, theatre owners contend, would increase the city's revenue from theatres about $400,000 annually. The theatremen have protested against the measure and are conferring with city officials in an attempt to bring about a compromise which may involve the return of the so-called chance games.

William Crouch explains the entire situation on page 28.

Research Project

The National Bureau of Standards' research project on the preservation of motion picture film has been extended for three years and is now being carried on through private contributions. A seven-point program for future study has been adopted and includes such topics as stability of film, effects of light on film, expansion and contraction of film, conditions of storage, accelerated aging tests and preservative and protective treatments.

The program is more completely described on page 70.

Television

The question of "who is to pay for television?" is now the chief problem in its development, according to a report filed with President Roosevelt by the National Resources Committee. The committee recommended a federal committee be appointed to keep abreast of technological changes and to forecast changes that may affect national life. It also warned of the dangers of propaganda with the advent of television.

The report and other developments in the field of television are discussed in an article on page 15.

Marconi Dies at 63

Guglielmo Marconi, who developed wireless telegraphy, parent of the modern radio, died in Rome Tuesday of a heart attack. The scientist was 63.

After a year of experimentation, Mr. Marconi succeeded in transmitting the first messages by wireless in 1895, when he was 21 years old. Two years later, Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Company, Ltd., was formed. From that point, success heaped upon success until Marconi had wed the two poles and made neighbors of hemispheres.

When trans-Atlantic wireless was shown to be practicable, in 1907, Marconi's Wireless opened American offices. It was as a wireless operator for that company that David Sarnoff, president of RCA, set a record by remaining for 72 hours at his post atop Wanamaker's, taking reports of the sinking Titanic. Mr. Sarnoff was commercial manager of the Marconi company when RCA absorbed it.

Publicity Mystery

Executives of Motion Pictures Producers and Distributors of America are at a loss to explain the reason for the lack of newspaper notices on a plan to supply pictures to schools on a wholesale basis. The plan was announced at the National Educational Association convention in Detroit July 1st but it was not until July 15th that articles appeared in New York City newspapers. The project, publishers say, will not injure the text book publishing business.

The publishers' viewpoint on the matter with facts concerning a press release on the announcement are reported on page 30.

Standardized Equipment

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers will direct its efforts to establishing minimum standards in non-theatrical equipment to be used by schools in the showing of educational films. The twofold means of achieving this aim will be a bureau to advise school authorities on technical problems, and the rental of test films for measurement of apparatus efficiency.

The story appears on page 30.

Legal Giveaways

Claude Ezell, sales manager for Affiliated Enterprises, parent of the much discussed Bank Night, told interviewers in New York that his product has been established as definitely legal by court definition in 12 states. In others cases are still pending to determine the legal status of the giveaway or to uphold claims of infringement.

Chance games reports from the country are collected in the story on page 40.

19 Agreements

With an official of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees designated to act for all locals, avoiding the necessity of representatives being sent to New York from each union, negotiations with home office distribution executives on wage and hour agreements for exchanges continued. A total of 19 agreements have been drawn up.

Quota "On Results"

Whether the British Quota is to be on a footage basis, with the right to cancel footage by increasing individual costs, or on a straight ratio between foreign films and money spent in British production, Bruce Allan in London finds that the important point of latest developments is the indication of a united front of all distributors in opposition to a rigid footage basis.

Trailers on Plays

Broadway plays, financed by Warner Brothers and designed for ultimate picturization by that company, will be promoted by trailer-short subjects, as a means of keeping public interest alive during vehicles' transition from stage to screen. Exhibitors will soon be approached with the idea of showing the shorts by touring company advance agents.

Argentine Decision

by N. BRUSKI

in Buenos Aires

Judge Artemio Moreno, ruling in the suit charging violation of the anti-trust laws against the Argentine Film Distributing Association, on Wednesday ordered an attachment of individual property of member companies to the extent of 15,000 pesos each. Distributors affected are Warner Brothers, United Artists, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Columbia, Paramount, Fox, Radio and Terra Joly.

Net Doubled

Warner Brothers reported a net income of $5,561,032 in the 39 weeks ending May 29, 1937, compared with $2,554,772 in the same period in 1936.

The Warner financial statement and consolidated balance sheet appears on page 27.

Profit in Vienna

American films, competing with German product for the Austrian market are expected to have the edge during the 1937-38 season since the Reich will produce only about 100 features for export. Austrian production itself is at low ebb, chiefly because of its dependence on Germany, graphically illustrated recently by the receivership of Mondial, largest production organization, following the banning in Germany of a $100,000 picture.

Hans Lorant reports the news from Vienna on page 30.

On Motherhood

A treatise on motherhood by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is to be included in an advertisement to appear nationally in women's magazines before the release of Samuel Goldwyn's "Stella Dallas." Erroneous reports in the press had said that the President's wife, who has ventured considerably far in the journalistic field, was being employed by Mr. Goldwyn to write copy for an exploitation campaign for the picture. Mrs. Roosevelt, speaking through her agent, was "considerably vexed" by the stories.

The newspapers' misconception of the story and the facts of the matter are explained on page 18.

RKO in Hollywood

Discussions anent the long pending RKO reorganization were transferred to the coast where Leo Spitz, president, has been examining the company's studio properties. In deep conference with him have been A. H. McCausland, trustee and Irving Trustee representative; Floyd B. Odlum, William Merrill and Edwin Weisel. In New York replies to briefs on rehabilitation of the company will be heard by a special master on July 26th and an additional hearing has been set for August 5th.

Consent

Only formalities stood in the way of approval of the reorganization plan for the Roxy, New York, under which Twentieth Century-Fox will take over operation of the theatre. The second mortgage bondholders last week filed the necessary two-thirds consent and the court was momentarily expected to approve.

Legal ramifications are in the story on page 38.

Tax Stalled

Protest action was deferred on Mississippi's ten per cent amusement tax following a joint meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Mississippi. Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, in the feature address complained, "It's becoming almost impossible to run one or two theatres."

Results of the meeting are recorded on page 14.

Better Theatres

Modern methods of illumination and how they can be installed during general remodeling operations are the motif and theme of the July 24th issue of BETTER THEATRES. Fixtures, marquees and signs and auditorium lighting are given special treatment in articles by Francis M. Falge, Eugene Clute and J. T. Knight, Jr. Selected examples of what has been done by exhibitors in the field are given extended treatment in an enlarged pictorial section. The regular features of the magazine include descriptions of two new theatres and one of a series of articles on acoustics by C. C. Potwin in which the effect of decorations and furnishings on sound is treated.

Radio Revenue

Accurate estimates of the revenue accruing to radio stations from advertisers is furnished from time to time by the National Association of Broadcasters. Their most recent statement shows a total gross income for May of $11,325,165 for national and regional networks and local stations. The figure was a slight increase over the total for April.

The statistics are analyzed on page 40.

Children's Films

A special committee of the British Film Institute has selected a group of 85 feature pictures which it believes are suitable for showing at children's matinees. The list includes 50 western pictures of American origin, 12 comedies and 23 "story films." Care should be taken in selecting cartoons for children, the committee warns.

Additional information on the Institute's selections is on page 68.

Expects $10,000,000

Twentieth Century-Fox net earnings for 1937 are expected to total $10,000,000, Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the company's board, said in New York just before sailing for Europe.

In 1936 the net was $7,222,955. The company's fiscal year coincides with the calendar year.

NICKEL CANDY SALES DO $10,000,000 BUSINESS

Net Profit from Concessions Reported at 40 Per Cent for Theatres; Leasing of Space Most Common Arrangement

The concession business, vending of countless sorts of candy as well as cigars, cigarettes, soft drinks and chewing gum by machine or from lobby stands, always an active step-child of exhibition, is growing up to a stalwart son and breadwinner. In the last year the annual gross revenue from such sales is estimated to have passed $10,000,000, derived for the most part from the sale of candy, boxed and in bars, and concentrated chiefly in eastern and midwestern territories.

The United States Treasury Department recently estimated a gross of $12,500,000 from the sale of candy and other confections in 15,000 theatres. Circuit executives and concession operators in New York believe this figure too high but quote $10,000,000 as more nearly correct.

The average profit for theatres is set by concessionaires at 40 per cent, or $4,000,000.

The sale of confections comprises almost 90 per cent of the aggregate business, particularly in the larger metropolitan centers where candy sales overshadow all others, even cigarets and chewing gum. In smaller cities and rural theatres popcorn is the most popular merchandise.

Leased Concessions Preferred

The annual gross for the business in Chicago is estimated at nearly $9,500 a week, while in New York the total is slightly over $10,000 in the affiliated theatres, with independent houses accounting for another $4,000 weekly in Manhattan, slightly less in the midwestern city. The combined Chicago annual gross would total, according to these estimates, more than $675,000, while the New York figure would approximate $1,000,000.

Circuit and independent theatre operators are divided on the question of whether to operate the candy machines or counters directly or lease space in the theatre on a concession basis. Most of the circuit executives and many individual exhibitors contend that leasing of the concession is the best policy because the concessionaires are better equipped to service the machines, can buy candy at lower figures, and know the likes and dislikes of the public. The Paramount theatre partners, however, including the Mullin and Pinanski circuit in New England and Balaban and Katz in Chicago, handle the sales directly.

10 Per Cent Use Stands

In the middle western states Confection Cabinet Company is prominent in the concession field; in New York the leaders are Sanitary Candy Corporation, headed by Charles O'Reilly, and Peoples Candy Corporation, operated by George Smith. Sanitary Corporation has contracts for all the concession business in the Warner Brothers and RKO circuits as well as numerous independent circuits and theatres. The Peoples Company operates stands in the Loew and Skouras houses and in 400 independent theatres in the New England and other eastern states.

CONCESSION INCOME SEEN 'PURE VELVET'

Among all the exhibitors questioned in a survey to determine the extent of the concession business there were few complaints. Most operators agreed that the receipts from the companies which install and service the machines were "pure velvet". For some it paid the annual coal bill, for others it covered the price of tickets, and all without fuss or feathers.

Most of the candy is sold through machines. Only about 10 per cent of the theatres, the larger ones, use counters in lobbies or lounges. Attendants employed to operate such stands are paid an average salary of $15 a week.

No official of either of the large concession companies in the east would discuss the amount of annual business. Max Schosburg, in charge of concessions in the Paramount theatres, also refused to estimate any total for the business. He inferred, however, that operation of the concessions was profitable.

Although exhibitors in the East report profits from the business whether handled directly or through concession, practically no theatres in the South have candy vending machines and only a few in such cities as New Orleans, San Antonio, Birmingham, Atlanta and Houston have counters. These stands usually are operated by the exhibitors as a "convenience" for their patrons and for the most part the margin of profit is small.

In California and the northwestern territory none of the theatre operators, according to reports, has concessions for candy or other merchandise. West Coast Automatic Candy Corporation, however, recently opened offices in San Francisco. Harry Cohen, representing the company, has been conferring with independent exhibitors and circuit heads on installing his vending machines in their theatres.

Substantial Revenue In Chicago Theatres

Candy concessions are operated in 98 per cent of the theatres in Chicago, and confection sales comprise the bulk of the business, although weighing machines, popcorn and soft drinks are popular. The sale of cigars and cigarets is prohibited by law.

The Balaban and Katz circuit, operating approximately 40 houses, owns and operates its candy machines and candy counters, buying merchandise wholesale through a special department. The majority of other houses, however, lease the concessions, which are handled on a percentage basis.

The gross concession business in the circuit houses is approximately $9,300 per week. In independent theatres it is $3,800 a week. The combined gross on the concessions averages from $12,500 to $14,000 per week. The annual gross, therefore, would approach $675,000 a year for both circuit and independent theatres and the circuit gross would be about $465,000 a year. Of this amount, the B and K Theatres do about $300,000.

The B and K circuit owns and operates the machines in all its theatres. Downstate in the Publix-Great States Circuit, the machines are owned by the Confection Cabinet Company and a leasing arrangement is made under which the theatres receive 40 per cent of the gross. B and K buys its candy from wholesalers. In the other theatres the vending company services the machines.

The gross from candy and other concessions for the first five months of this year is 36 per cent above that for the same months last year and it is expected that a 30 to 40 per cent increase will be recorded for 1937 over the gross for 1936.

Candy sales are 90 per cent of the Chicago concession business. Weighing machines account for five per cent. In Balaban and Katz houses, and in other large theatres, each weighing machine averages from $3 to $5 a week. Other types of concessions make up the other five per cent. In downstate theatres and in small towns popcorn takes a goodly portion of the concession trade and in its best spots is said to gross about 30 per cent of the concession revenue.

The best day's business on candy at a loop theatre was the $510 gross at the RKO-Palace during the record-breaking Sunday business of Eddie Cantor's personal appearance. Other loop theatres have nearly reached the $400 mark on several occasions.

Machines Popular In Cincinnati

A territorial survey of the Cincinnati trade area shows that 75 per cent of the theatres, both circuit and independently operated, dispense merchandise in the lobbies and lounges through machines and over counters, with the machine predominating.

The annual gross sales of the circuit houses for candy and similar confections merchandised under both plans, it is estimated, is $750,000, while the independently operated theatres account for $1,000,000. Roughly, the same proportion of houses in both classifications have installed automatic penny-in-the-slot scales, which yield the circuit houses an annual revenue of $12,000, and independents $17,500.

In the final analysis, the vending machines are looked upon as the better revenue producers for the theatres, since their installation and operation entail no expense. In both the automatic merchandise vendors and scales, the devices usually are owned and installed by a local individual or company having the manufacturers' franchise. The owner of the machine provides the stock, services the machines, makes collections at regular intervals, and gives the theatre the percentage, as agreed upon. Very few, if any, theatres lease or rent machines to operate themselves.

On the other hand, the comparatively few exhibitors who merchandise candy and similar commodities through stands in the lobby are able to do a somewhat greater volume by reason of the fact that the eye appeal of the display tempts the patron and results in a sale not previously contemplated.

Here, however, a certain fixed expense is entailed, such as the initial cost of the stand, investment for merchandise from a local dealer or jobber, salary of attendant, and, in Ohio, a vendor's license along with the advance purchase, from the state, of retail sales tax stamps, which must be given with every purchase of 10 cents, or over. In any event, Ohio theatre managers must pay the state a three per cent sales tax on the gross sales.

Receipts from concessions, both from vending machines and stands, are considerably ahead of last year, although they invariably are lighter in the summer than in winter.

None of the theatres in the Cincinnati territory, so far, has attempted to sell ice cream or soft drinks, but a large number of exhibitors plan to branch out into these fields this summer, using present lobby space.

Two Firms Active in Cleveland Concessions

Verlo Vending Company and Vendola are the two companies operating machines in the Cleveland area. Of the 104 theatres open in the area, Verlo is serving about 75, Vendola six.

With only two exceptions, all the theatres sell merchandise through the medium of machines. Loew's State and the RKO Palace have both the machines and counters with girl attendants.

Of the 80-odd Cleveland houses using concessions, only four own their own stands. These are the Alhambra, Strand, Standard and Metropolitan. These houses own and operate their own machines.

Denver Concession Business Is Small

Candy and merchandise machines, as well as scales, are installed in about 20 of Denver's 26 theatres. The percentage of the gross going to the theatres on candy sales amounts to 20 per cent. The returns from cigarets total 10 per cent and the scale revenue is 25 per cent of the gross.

The 10 Fox Intermountain houses, including four first-runs, report their percentage runs to about $1,000 a year. Harry Huffman, city manager, added that the machines are installed only as a convenience to patrons because the margin of gain is too small.

Iowa Circuit Has $1,000 Weekly Average

Candy vending machines for the Tri-State circuit of theatres, which include the seven leading houses in Des Moines, Iowa, aggregate $1,000 a week. Some houses may gross $60 to $75 a week while others take in as little as $6 or $7. The business is done chiefly through machines, all of which are rented from Confection Cabinet Company.

Popcorn is sold in seven of the houses in the Tri-State circuit and in these cases the machines are owned by the theatre company. These popcorn machines bring in from $400 to $500 a week for the seven theatres.

Many of the buildings in which theatres are housed have adjoining office space which is leased by the theatre, but in every case Tri-State subleases the adjacent space to others.

Gross receipts in the 40 theatres are between $500 and $800 a month. In but one case, at Centerville, Iowa, does the theatre operate the adjoining candy store. Barber shops and other businesses rent space from the theatre.

Twice the amount made on candy is cleared in the houses where popcorn machines are owned and operated by the theatres. There are six such theatres of the Central States circuit operating popcorn machines which gross $450 to $500 a week.

TINY FILM SPOOL MAY REPLACE SHEET MUSIC

Tiny spools of film, on which entire musical compositions can be recorded may replace sheet music, R. H. Carruthers of the New York Public Library predicted in addressing the Music Library Association and the American Library Association at Columbia University.

The film spools, known as microphotos, are projected, and in this way whole communities will be able to learn rare music, Mr. Carruthers said. He also said the spools will record whole books which will be projected for readers.

Individual reports show that candy sales vary from night to night and from one location to another as much as from $6 to $60. In general, popcorn offers a profit of 100 per cent but it is not found advisable in houses where less attention is paid to attracting juvenile audiences.

Candy Sales Lead In Indianapolis

Vending machines in Indianapolis theatres do an estimated gross business of $58,700 a year, virtually all sales being in candy. Popcorn is next in volume, but much of this business is outside the theatres.

Of this total, probably $15,000 is done by the downtown houses, both small and large. For the city as a whole, receipts are up 10 per cent over a year ago. With better times there has come a pronounced drift of attendance to downtown theatres, so that it is estimated the downtown gain in some instances may reach 12 per cent, while that in a few neighborhood houses may not be more than five per cent.

About two-thirds of Indianapolis' houses have vending machines. Only a half dozen or so have stands in the lobby, such as popcorn machines. In many instances confectionery stores are located in the same building with the theatre and either through lease provisions or through agreement the house does not sell in competition with the store.

None of the theatres handles cigarets, cigars or perfumes. A few have soft drinks but most find that the margin of profit is small. Weighing machines have been tried, only to be removed after a short while.

So far as could be learned, local theatres are not developing adjacent space for concessions. It is reported, however, that a number of small theatres in Indiana are active in this direction.

Operation by the theatres pays markedly better than leasing, and few theatres even consider leasing. In most cases the machines are installed free by manufacturers, the theatre men service them themselves and supplies are delivered by truck. Candy is purchased from both Chicago and Indianapolis manufacturers.

Popcorn probably accounts for $12,000 of the total gross. Its sale is favored because of the wide profit margin, but the necessity of maintaining a stand for popcorn often offsets this.

According to one manager, who has operated candy machines for 27 years in Indianapolis, the average neighborhood house should show a net of $500 a year on its candy vending machines, which, in some instances, may be as many as four machines in one theatre. He has found this true, he said, regardless of whether the house was in a low-income or in a high-income neighborhood. The most business of all is done with the children at the Saturday matinees.

Profits Increased In Kansas City

There seems to be little effort on the part of exhibitors in the Kansas City area to widen their concession activities. Exceptions are the Commonwealth Circuit of 28 houses in Kansas, Missouri and Iowa, and the Mutual Theatres, W. D. Fulton's group, with nine houses in Greater Kansas City and Kansas. Individual exhibitors report some improvement in gross from concessions over a year ago. About half of the exhibitors operate their own concessions.

Fox Midwest Theatres, operating more than 100 houses in the area, has an arrangement with Confection Cabinet Corporation whereby it handles the concessions in Fox theatres and lobbies. The circuit's share of the receipts is used for the circuit's employees' benefit fund.

In some of Fox Midwest's smaller houses, especially in the smaller towns, popcorn machines are operated, usually under lease.

The circuit does not use any form of concession directly competitive with local business, a policy followed in order to maintain good feeling among local merchants.

Ed Dubinsky Durwood, head of the Dubinsky Brothers Circuit, regards concessions as "the poor relation" of the theatre business. Mr. Durwood said that his theatres operated concessions, but added the practice could be overdone. When they are unobtrusive and a convenience and not much more than that, they are successful, he said; made too prominent in the theatre scheme, they bring objections and the practice is harmful to theatre grosses as well as to the concessions, he explained.

Glen W. Dickinson will have no concessions in his more than 25 houses in Kansas, Missouri and Iowa. He feels the practice litters the theatre lobby. In some instances, however, the circuit has leased rooms adjacent to the theatre for popcorn and other concessions.

Mutual Theatres has found the operation of popcorn machines profitable because of the long margin, well over 50 per cent, on the item, according to Joseph Green, general supervisor. About half the Mutual theatres operate their own concessions.

The concessions handle candy and popcorn, but no tobacco because it is considered a short profit item and calls for an expensive license. No bottled goods are sold. For leased concessions, the theatre gets a flat rental.

The circuit finds it 25 per cent more profitable to operate the concessions itself, and may take over all of them. The gross from concessions this year is about 15 per cent above that of last year.

By concentrating upon operation of its concessions, Commonwealth has improved the gross more than 15 per cent over a year ago, according to C. A. Schultz, head of the circuit. Pictures have failed to respond to promotion and gross from the box office is less than in the same period last year, he said, but the increased returns from the concessions and film ad rentals has brought the total gross for the circuit above what it was for the same period in 1936.

POPCORN AND SCALES ARE POPULAR

Commonwealth management has found the sale of merchandise by concessions other than popcorn of very little profit. In almost all its theatres, however, it has popcorn stands. The company operates its own stands in 50 per cent of the theatres. In 30 per cent of the remaining houses, concessions are leased.

Mr. Schultz estimated that concessions and screen advertising produce about 10 per cent of the circuit's total gross income.

An independent operator said that an average theatre of 1,000 seats should gross $4,000 a year on popcorn alone.

Milwaukee Has Yearly Gross of $75,000

Lobby vending machines in theatres in Milwaukee county grossed for exhibitors approximately $75,000 last year. Practically all theatres in Milwaukee have machines, the majority of which merchandise box candy and bars exclusively.

In line with the general improvement and increased box office receipts, business for these machines in the past year showed an increase over the previous year.

A city ordinance prohibits the obstruction of theatre lobbies; consequently the machines are placed in out-of-the-way locations.

Milwaukee theatres are serviced by the manufacturers and receive up to 40 per cent on the gross sales of the machines in rental fees. Candy is purchased from the owner of the machine and the exhibitor is billed once a week for the merchandise.

Connecticut Houses Gross $60,000

Approximately $60,000 is grossed annually in Connecticut theatres from candy and nut machines and concessions, with upwards of $1,500 added from weighing machines. Of the 85 or more theatres which take in this total, 38 are Warner houses which use the candy machines, and 14 Loew houses, which are paid a flat rental by a concessionaire. Sanitary Candy Corporation services the Warner houses while the Loew concession is held by People's Candy Company.

Only a few of the Mullin and Pinanski theatres in Connecticut have candy stands, and these are operated by the circuit.

Theatre operation of the candy and popcorn stand is used to some extent in Hartford, Waterbury, New Britain and other cities and is reported the most profitable. Several exhibitors said this venture has paid the theatre coal bill. One exhibitor reported a gross take of $100 in one week recently.

However, because of the ease of operation and lower cost, the candy machine is still the most popular form of vending.

The machine is installed by the jobber's representative, who services and refills it, usually once a week. The merchandise is billed to the theatre, in accordance with the provisions of the Robinson-Patman Bill, at a minimum of 25 per cent under the selling price. Five cent candy bars and peanut bags are the leaders. On weighing machines a commission of between 25 and 35 per cent is paid.

An incraease of at least 25 per cent over last year is reported by most exhibitors in this adjunct of the theatre business, commensurate with the general increase in attendance.

St. Louis Field Is Still Undeveloped

The concession field has not yet attained the emphasis in St. Louis theatres that it has in other parts of the country, but it is important so far as annual receipts are concerned.

Operating almost exclusively on a percentage basis from the vending company, the usual allowance being 25 to 30 per cent, the total volume for the 90 local houses is estimated at $200,000.

In recent months the growth of the concessions has been such that some of the local exhibitors are considering the advisability of installing their own equipment.

Gum and candy are the biggest items in the motion picture houses, although in the summer months soft drinks are popular, as are ice cream, popsicles and similar merchandise.

In the Municipal Theatre in Forest Park during the Municipal Opera season, now in session, the soft drink, candy, cigarets and ice cream concession is a big business. In the 12 week period it will total upwards of $150,000.

Court Allows Fees Totaling $132,781

Fees and disbursements amounting to $132,781 were allowed by William Bondy, United States district court judge, in the reorganization of the Flatbush Avenue and Nevis Street Corporation, owners of the Fox Brooklyn Theatre and office building.

The largest amount, $47,000, was granted Garey and Garey, attorneys, as legal fees. Rosensen and Lorence, special tax counsel, were allowed $15,000; the independent bondholders protective committee, $10,000 in fees and $9,367 in disbursements; Reavis and Pantaleone, attorneys for Fabian Enterprises, Inc., $7,000. Other awards went to the Continental Bank & Trust Company and bondholders' attorneys.

Circuit Adds Two New Houses

The Minnesota Amusement Co., Paramount subsidiary, has closed deals ending competition in the Minnesota cities of Winona and Mankato.

In Winona, the circuit made outright purchase of the Broadway from Harry A. Rohlbiecke. Purchase of the Urban, in Mankato, is a partnership arrangement under which Don Grenge is to continue as manager under the supervision of his brother Sheldon.

Nazis Ban Film

The Hitler Government, in Berlin, this week banned the American film, "Stage Door Romance," without specifying the reason.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD's records do not list a "Stage Door Romance." The title of the film was probably of another nature in the U. S., and changed when the film reached Germany.

Committee to Act On Tax Question

Formal action against Mississippi's 10 per cent amusement tax was referred to the legislative committee this week when a joint convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas, Mississippi, and Tennessee, and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Mississippi was held at Biloxi. It was proposed that a general two per cent sales tax be substituted for the 10 per cent levy.

Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, was one of the principal speakers at the meeting. He declared "it's becoming almost an impossibility to run one or two theatres.

"There will have to be an arrangement of some sort, either in disposal of theatres or a merger of buying combinations."

R. X. Williams was reelected president of the MPTO of Mississippi. W. S. Taylor and Grady Cook are vice-presidents, and W. S. Tyson, secretary-treasurer. Board members are Homer Williams, M. Solomon, J. E. Alford, W. N. Rush, C. E. Noble, M. A. Lightman, B. V. Sheffield and Harvey Hunt.

National Decency Legion Classifies 13 New Films

The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Blazing Barriers," "Born Reckless," "The Californian," "Heart's Desire," "Range Defenders," "Riders of the Rockies," "Rustlers' Valley," "Super Sleuth." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Ein Seltsamer Gast" (German), "It Can't Last Forever," "Toast of New York," "War Lord." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Two Who Dared."

Anti-Trust Action Against ASCAP Ended

The action of the Pennsylvania Broadcasting Company, which operated Station WIP in 1933, against Gene Buck, Louis Bernstein, Jerome Kern and E. C. Mills, officers of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, was dismissed by Federal Judge John C. Knox for failure of the plaintiffs to prosecute the action.

The suit charged illegal combination and demanded cancellation of a contract made with the Society.

ICKES ASKS ROOSEVELT: "WHO'S GOING TO PAY FOR TELEVISION?"

And National Resources Committee Raises the Question Whether It Should Be "Under Direct Government Control"

While engineering problems in television are not yet a thing of the past, the invention has been developed to the stage where now the question as to who is to pay for it arises as a potent factor, according to a report filed with President Roosevelt by Harold L. Ickes, chairman of the National Resources Committee, and Secretary of the Interior. The committee consists in the main of cabinet officers and is appointed by the President.

The next corner to be turned in the development of television, the report said, "can be stated briefly in one short sentence—'Who is to pay for television'." At the same time, the committee reported, the advent of television will magnify the dangers of propaganda in schools and, to an even greater extent, in homes. The report raised the question whether television should be in the hands of private capital or "under direct government management and control."

The committee, in its 388-page report, dealt with new inventions and their social implications in all fields of national resources, and called attention to the need of planning to meet the new employment situations caused by technological advance.

Attempting to visualize the possibilities of the next 20 years, the report recommended establishment of a federal committee to keep abreast of technological changes and to forecast imminent changes that may affect national life. It also urged a series of continuous independent studies of such matters as television and advances in other industries.

"Since 1929, television as a scientific tool has been in a rapid process of development in many large and small laboratories in this country," the committee said. "From time to time predictions have been made that 'it is just around the corner,' and the particular corner usually referred to was an engineering one. A number of laboratories in this country have now developed the technical phases of this art to the point where it can safely be said that, although many, many technical problems remain to be solved, it is, nevertheless, possible to transmit over a local area of 10 to 20 miles radius fairly good pictures having the clarity and details of the average home moving picture.

"The next corner to be turned, however, is an economic rather than an engineering one. . . . Will the public accept a television service based upon a continuance of the present system of commercial aural broadcasting and its extension into television? Will a 'looker-in' be willing to sit in a darkened living-room at home intently peering into the screen of his television receiver?"

Color television already is a laboratory accomplishment and may become practical before long, while developments have been started in three-dimensional sight and sound.

COMMITTEE FORMED TO DRAFT PROGRAM

The National Resources Committee was established under the National Industrial Recovery Act to prepare and present to President Roosevelt a program and plan of procedure dealing with the physical, social, governmental and economic aspects of public policies for development and use of land, water and other national resources.

While the report released this week covered matters not listed as national resources, they were investigated because of their impingement upon that field; broadcasting and television, for instance, being large users of copper.

On the committee are Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, chairman; Harry H. Woodring, Secretary of War; Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture; Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce; Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor; Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator; and Dr. Charles E. Merriam.

"If we consider past programs in this field," the report asked, "is it too much to expect that a future generation of Americans will be able to sit at their firesides and see reproduced before them in actual colors and in three dimensions, both visually and acoustically, scenes which are being instantaneously transmitted from the interior of some forest, accompanied with all the fragrant odors of nature, and eventually the addition of a vicarious, tactual sensation?"

In warning of the propaganda phase, the committee said:

"When to the spoken word is added the living image, the effect is to magnify the potential dangers of a machine which can subtly instill ideas, strong beliefs, profound disgusts and affections. There is danger from propaganda entering the schools, and perhaps much greater danger from propaganda entering the home.

"How great is the power in the control of mass communication, especially when helped by modern inventions, has been made clear recently in countries that have had social revolutions and which have promptly, in a very short period, brought extraordinary changes in the expressed beliefs and actions of vast populations. These have been led to accept whole ideologies contrary to their former beliefs, and to accept as the new gospel what many outsiders would think ridiculous."

Power to Mobilize Talent

The committee also pointed out that television will have the power of mobilizing the best of writers and screen designers, "the most winning of actors, the most attractive of actresses."

Two questions of national policy were cited by the committee:

"What ideas, whose ideas shall be mass-communicated? Who shall control television?"

Then, to amplify the situation, the report continued: "To control the doors to people's minds, even of the child in the home, is to have considerable power to control their minds. Whatever body wields such power might conceivably be able in time to undermine all opposition to its power. The question is evidently raised whether the control should be in the hands of private capital, presumably under government supervision, or under direct government management and control."

As a summary of the possibilities of television, the report said: "For good or for ill, a new day is dawning in entertainment, and eventually will dawn in school education. Technology has provided the power to enrich the leisure hours, to promote family solidarity by bringing the theatre into the home, to develop national uniformity and unity at the cost of provincialism, and to widen man's knowledge of the world in which he lives."

Sees Amateur Musicians Aided

The report, dealing exclusively with technological developments, made no attempt to gauge the effect of television upon motion pictures, but in a review of the development of broadcasting had the following to comment:

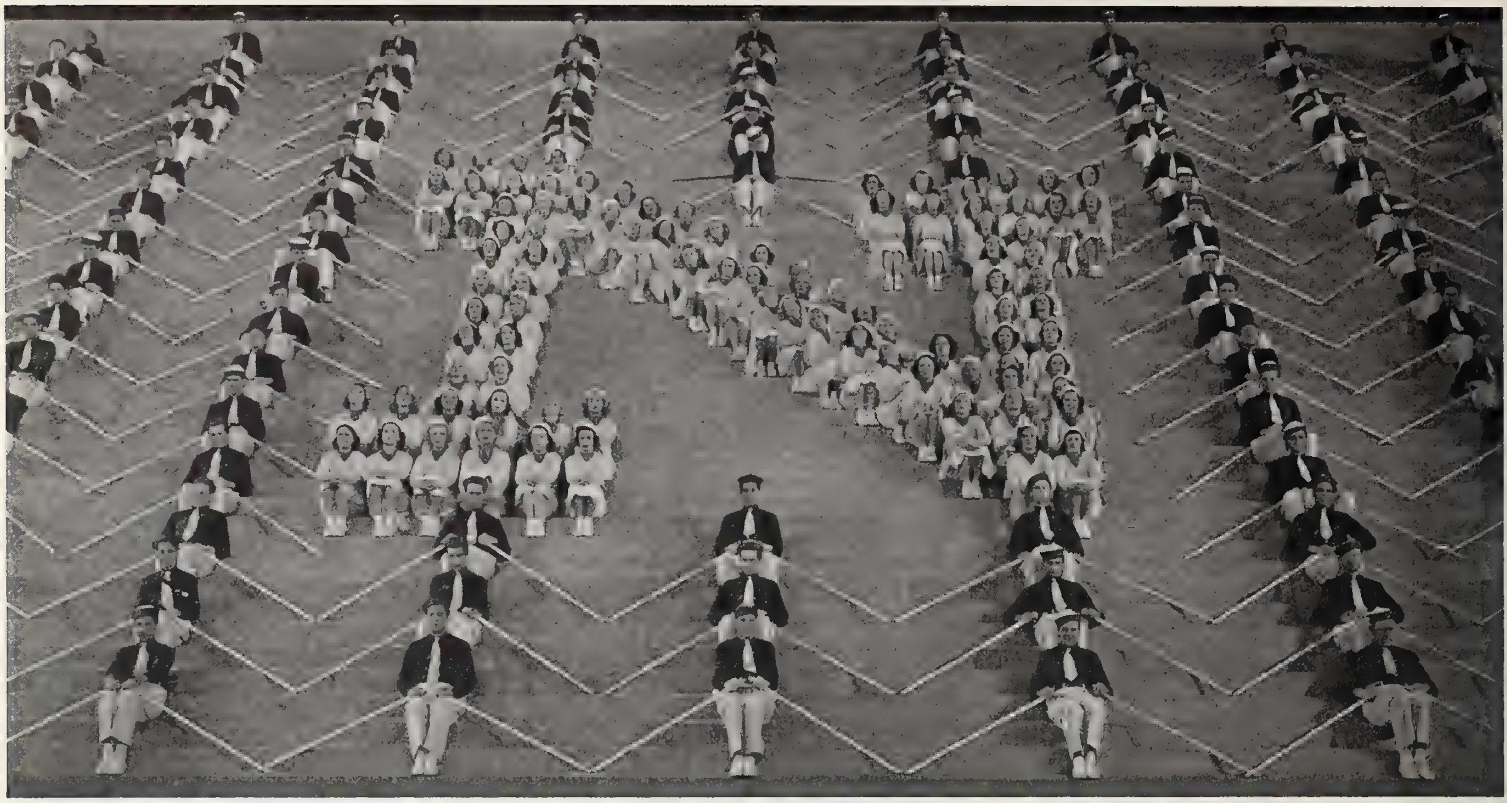
"As the intensive growth of broadcasting has coincided with the growth of sound movies, it is difficult to evaluate separately its effects. Many of the musical activities which were previously confined to the concert hall have been transferred to the motion picture and radio studios. This has helped to make tremendously popular outstanding members of the musical world. It has raised the taste of the public in musical performers and in so doing adversely affected the small itinerant musical organizations which were known 15 to 20 years ago. In spite of this and the decrease in demand for musical individuals and organizations, since the advent of broadcasting and sound pictures, it is believed there is an increased interest in the production and enjoyment of music by the amateur musician and music lover."

$400 Receivers Seen in 1938

The Farnsworth Company has predicted that by 1938 television receiving sets will be on the market for less than $400.

On the other hand, as proof that technical difficulties are not fully overcome as yet, the Don Lee Broadcasting System, of Los Angeles, is seeking to widen experimental research by giving amateurs information on the construction of television sets and asking them to report on conditions of reception and other elements for tabulation.

"VARSITY SHOW" BIDS



ALMOST everyone agrees that the musical motion picture is the most consistently popular form of screen entertainment. Sometimes, when well done, such films win merit awards for the persons appearing in them or for those responsible for them. Usually they prove money makers in all classes of theatres. The reasons for this popularity are easily perceived. Musicals, generally, embrace the forms of entertainment necessary to engage and satisfy the interest of widely diversified audiences.

Warner Brothers, eminently successful in the production of musicals, intends that "Varsity Show" shall uphold that reputation. The plan, although the studio has been very secretive about details, is that the picture will result in a surprise commercial and entertainment attraction that will add to the company's prestige.

The elements being spun into "Varsity Show" are those common to all musicals. Besides both vocal and instrumental music they are love interest, comedy, contrasting light melodrama, solo and group dancing, production spectacle, a story premise, of course, and logically personalities. All are being woven into the skein so that a rich design of youth, glamour and speed will be attained.

The student body of a small country college want to put on a modern musical show. The faculty desires that the students confine their efforts to interpreting the classics. Not without difficulties which should make for lively amusement, the coeds win.

The name star in the picture is Dick Powell, lately reported sixth ranking box office figure. With him are Fred Waring, noted both as a radio broadcasting favorite and dance band leader, and Rosemary and Priscilla Lane, long featured on his programs. Familiar screen names listed are Lee Dixon, Roy Atwill, Walter Gatlett, Ted Healy, Scotty Bates, Sterling Holloway, Ben Weldon and Emma Dunn. From fields alien to motion pictures come a host of other performers whose efforts are being counted upon to accentuate the air of modern collegiate life and gayety.

Behind the scenes influences, depended upon to do their respective bits in establishing the picture as all the sponsoring company anticipates, have enviable records. The story is by Warren Duff and Sig Herzig, who were aided in adapting it by Jerry Wald and Richard Macauley. Music and lyrics are by Johnny Mercer and Dick Whiting, similarly occupied when "Ready, Willing and Able" was prepared. William Keighley, to whom Mervyn LeRoy attributes much credit for the success of "The Prince and the Pauper," directed everything but the spectacular finale, staged by Busby Berkeley.

The production is scheduled for release early in September, a period in which the opening of schools and colleges provokes an interest in campus capers. Other distribution plans presage stern competition, but the executives at Warners are not worried. Such optimism is not uncommon. Prevalent among exhibitors and the public, it is very likely that "Varsity Show" will surprise all who want to be surprised.

MRS. ROOSEVELT WROTE WHICH ABOUT WHAT FOR GOLDWYN AND FOR HOW MUCH?

200-Word Treatise for Insertion in Single Ad for "Stella Dallas" and She's Been Paid Already for Assignment

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President, is "considerably vexed" that Samuel Goldwyn, or his lieutenants, acting in "Hollywood fashion," caused the American press to circulate widely a story that she is writing advertisements for Mr. Goldwyn's "Stella Dallas."

Confusion started when the New York Daily Mirror, for one, published a dispatch from Hollywood, under the by-line of Harriet Parsons, that "Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has been engaged to write advertising for Samuel Goldwyn's 'Stella Dallas' campaign."

"Subbing" for Louella Parsons

Miss Parsons, Universal (Hearst) Service film correspondent, "subbing" in the absence of her mother, Louella Parsons, on a European vacation, asserted that "the president's wife will personally write advertisements of the forthcoming picture for magazines and newspapers." "For this," it was said, "her favorite charities will benefit to the extent of several thousand dollars."

"Mrs. Roosevelt, whose outside activities already include radio broadcasting and column-writing—also with the receipts going to charity—refused a 'ghost' writer for the advertising job and is turning out her own copy for the whole series," Miss Parsons said.

The proofs of the first advertisements to be signed by Mrs. Roosevelt were said in the dispatch to be "ready and it is said to be a workmanlike piece of publicity."

The New York Times, in "a special" Hollywood dispatch, said that "the arrangements were made through Mrs. Roosevelt's agent, George Bye, some weeks ago, and will appear shortly in a national magazine with a foreword that they were written by the President's wife."

Other Reports

The Associated Press asserted Samuel Goldwyn had said he had "employed Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt to write advertising for a motion picture."

The wire service added that Mr. Goldwyn had declared "the advertisements would carry her by-line and appear in newspapers and national magazines."

"He declined to name her salary," concluded AP.

MOTION PICTURE DAILY, on Wednesday, said that "the advertisement—a single advertisement only—which Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will prepare for Samuel Goldwyn's 'Stella Dallas' will appear first in the Saturday Evening Post, issue of August 14th." "This," continued the DAILY, "will be followed by the appearance of the advertisement in other magazines at a total space cost of $50,000 to $75,000.

"The advertisement is illustrated by a still from the picture showing Barbara Stanwyck and Ann Shirley at the top above a streamer which reads, 'Stella Dallas Inspires a Discussion of a Mother's Vital Problem.' This is followed by text with Mrs. Roosevelt's by-line. The First Lady's picture is centered."

Treatise for Single Ad

Now it seems that it was all a mistake—Mrs. Roosevelt is not going to engage in the business of motion picture advertising copy writing, in that profession which numbers such able copy writers as Howard Dietz and Silas Seadler, Barret McCormick, Robert Gillham, Charles Einfeld and others.

Mr. Bye, as Mrs. Roosevelt's literary agent, said that there was not even a "suggestion that Mrs. Roosevelt would write motion picture advertising, and neither was there any understanding that her writing would appear as advertisements in newspapers and magazines."

Seems that Mrs. Roosevelt, acting on Mr. Bye's recommendations, agreed to write a 200-word treatise on motherhood for insertion in a single advertisement for "Stella Dallas" which was intended for "high-class" women's magazines. Cecil, Warwick and Legler, advertising agents in New York for United Artists, had approached Mr. Bye with the advertising layout completed, including a thumbnail picture of the President's wife, but with the exception of a small mortise intended for Mrs. Roosevelt's motherhood "editorial."

Mr. Bye said that there was no understanding whatsoever that Mrs. Roosevelt was to write the actual ad copy, and that her editorial was to be free from any advertising content.

"If I had known that it would be made to appear that Mrs. Roosevelt had written a commercial announcement for the film, I would have never encouraged her to undertake the assignment," Mr. Bye said, adding, "Everyone was vexed."

Mrs. Roosevelt, nevertheless, has been paid for the assignment, considerably less than reports imply.

And in Hollywood, Samuel Goldwyn is expected to set a release date for the public exhibition of "Stella Dallas" any day now.

Wilcox Sails, to Talk With RKO on Production

Herbert Wilcox, whose departure from London for New York was postponed three times, finally sailed Wednesday aboard the S.S. Ile de France, bringing with him the print of his "Victoria the Great." Accompanying Mr. Wilcox are Eric Fredman, his sales manager, and Charles De Grandcourt, who collaborated on the screen story. The New York opening has been delayed until September.

Mr. Wilcox, it is understood, will stay in New York for two weeks conferring with RKO Radio executives on joint British production.

RKO will release "Victoria the Great."

MGM has signed John Beanes and Arthur Cadler-Marshall, British writers. They are enroute to Hollywood from London.

"Dictatorship" in Films, Radio and Press is Charged

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Less than 300 persons who have "an absolute monopoly in the molding of public opinion through undisputed control of radio stations, newspapers and motion pictures" constitute the real "dictatorship" in America which has been charged against President Roosevelt, members of the House of Representatives were told Monday by Congressman W. D. McFarlane of Texas.

Conditions in the broadcasting industry "are rapidly reaching a point of scandal comparable with Teapot Dome," he asserted, and new perils of monopoly threaten in the development of television, he added.

Charges Chain of Monopoly

Directed principally against the broadcasting industry and a rebuke to the House for not making the investigation of radio monopoly sought by the late Congressman Connery of Massachusetts, Mr. McFarlane's speech linked motion pictures, the newspapers and broadcasting in a chain of monopoly dominated by radio.

"The three chains comprising the radio monopolies which are dependent for their continued operation on patent licenses which are controlled by the American Telephone & Telegraph monopoly and the Radio Corporation of America, also extend their monopoly in the molding of public opinion through their connections with motion picture companies and through their domination of some 200 or more large newspapers in America who own radio broadcasting stations," he charged.

Present conditions, he told the House, are not the responsibility of the Roosevelt Administration. They are a heritage from the Hoover Administration, under which a consent decree dissolving the radio trust was secured in 1932.

Calling attention of the House to the fact that he was counsel to the special committee investigating the cross-licensing and pooling of patents, the Texas Congressman, declaring that "even among these pirates there is no honor," cited the sound-picture situation as an example of the A. T. & T. monopoly spreading to a point where it "even poached upon the monopolistic position of RCA, its erstwhile partner in plunder."

Cites Film Licenses

"A. T. & T. negotiated an exclusive license with seven of the eight largest motion picture producers," he explained. "RCA was able to negotiate only one.

"RCA, furious of violation of their agreement to divide up the field, filed a bill of complaint, charging antitrust violation by A. T. & T. The complaint, however, was never filed in any court but was used as a blackjack against the A. T. & T. As a result of this threat by RCA to invoke the law against the telephone company, the latter capitulated to RCA and agreed to give the 'swag' more even division among two monopolies.

WARNER NET JUMPS 100 PER CENT, TO $5,561,032 FOR 39 WEEKS

Earnings Equivalent to $53.93 on Preferred Stock and $1.42 on Common; Third Quarter Three Times a Year Ago

Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and subsidiary companies on Monday reported for the 39 weeks ending May 29, 1937, a net operating profit of $5,561,032, after deducting all charges including amortization and depreciation and normal federal income taxes, but without providing for federal surtaxes on undistributed earnings. These earnings compare with a net operating profit of $2,554,772, after similar charges, for the corresponding period the previous year.

The net profit from operations for the last 39 weeks, before amortization and depreciation of properties, normal federal income taxes, and federal surtaxes on undistributed earnings, was $10,907,064.33.

Earnings per share, without providing for federal surtaxes on undistributed earnings, were equivalent to:

On preferred stock to—$53.93 per share on 103,107 shares outstanding at May 29, 1937. Dividends in arrears as at June 1, 1937, amounted to $20.21 per share.

On common stock, after allowance for current dividend requirements on the preferred stock, to $1.42 per share on 3,701,090 shares outstanding (after deducting shares held in treasury) at May 29, 1937.

For the third quarter, ending in May, Warners' earnings held close to the preceding periods and ran nearly three times ahead of a year ago in spite of the fact that the spring months are not the best part of the amusement year.

Net profit for the 13 weeks period ended May 29th, last, was $1,520,643, equal to 38 cents a share on 3,701,090 shares of common stock against $578,527, equal to 12 cents a share in the 1936 period.

"Warner's final quarter ending August 31st will probably also run ahead of last year, although of course net will not be as large as in the May period," the Wall Street Journal said, adding: "However, summer income of amusement companies is holding up better than formerly due partly to air conditioning of theatres and partly to improved quality of film releases for summer showing."

For the 13 weeks ended May 29th, last, indicated net profit (based on a comparison of company's reports for the 39 and 26 weeks periods) was $1,520,643 after charges and taxes, equal after allowing for 13 weeks dividend requirements on preferred stock, to 38 cents a share on common stock.

This compares with $1,992,453 or 51 cents a common share in preceding 13 weeks, and $578,527 or 12 cents a common share in like 13 weeks of preceding year.

Current assets as of May 29, 1937, including $3,246,341 cash, amounted to $26,386,339 and current liabilities were $20,019,706, compared with cash of $3,475,010, current assets of $22,304,422 and current liabilities of $17,579,486 on May 30, 1936. Total assets were $175,543,190.50. CHICAGOANS PROTEST 3% TAX ON GROSSES

Compromise Suggested by Exhibitors Calls for Return of Outlawed Chance Games

by WILLIAM CROUCH
in Chicago

Chicago theatre owners sought this week to effect a compromise after a three per cent tax on gross theatre receipts had been proposed by the city to meet a $3,000,000 deficit.

A small group of theatre owners met with the city finance committee Tuesday morning but neither the theatremen nor the committee members had any plan to advance and the session lasted only a few minutes. The exhibitors did not produce figures to show their gross receipts for the first six months of this year and the last six months of 1936, as requested by the committee last week, but no mention was made of this.

Although it was generally conceded that fees for theatre licenses would be increased when they came up for renewal on July 1st, the suggested 3 per cent levy was a surprise and met with immediate opposition.

At the present time the license fees paid to the city total about $100,000. With the proposed tax, it is estimated, the city's revenue from theatres would aggregate more than $500,000.

This amount, theatre executives contend, is much too much.

Since the ousting of chance games last winter, theatremen have not been in particularly good graces with city officials, and for this reason theatre owners are experiencing difficulty in working out an agreeable plan for the collection of extra revenue.

Protests against the tax were voiced last week when exhibitors met with Roger Kiley, alderman and chairman of the city's finance committee. They offered to propose other plans and the finance committee delayed decision. The theatremen agreed to meet with the committee this week and supply figures showing the gross receipts for the first six months of this year and last six months of 1936.

Asks Return of "Games"

At the conference, one of the theatremen suggested a favorable plan might be worked out if theatres were permitted to reinstate chance games, which had been stopped by the city police department. The city, at that time, had fought an injunction request of theatres seeking to continue the games, and had won in state supreme court.

Morris Leonard, legal counsel of Balaban and Katz Theatres, was reported to have said at the meeting that if license fees were increased, theatres should be allowed to use some sort of "gimmick" to stimulate business. He was understood to have meant Bank Night, Screeno and other giveaways, which were said to have accounted for 20 per cent of the weekly gross in theatres using the devices a year ago.

It was learned that city officials were not adverse to restoration of games and that some sort of "agreement" may be reached. Last week Bank Night officials met in Chicago and were reported to have found fairly bright prospects of reintroducing the game. Their action followed a ruling in a district court in Rock Island that Bank Night was not illegal despite the state supreme court decision.

$75,000 in Reserve

Theatres already have cash awards and the necessary equipment. The total amount of money for awards, on hand at the time the games were stopped and never distributed, approximates $75,000, it is said. The average amount offered weekly in Chicago through the giveaway games was in excess of $100,000.

Many exhibitors say that a return of the games would eliminate double features. The reason given for this is that with duals the turnover is much slower than with single bills, and with the giveaway games it is necessary to get as fast a turnover as possible. Duals, according to most theatre owners, have proved anything but popular here, and were it not for the competitive situation they would be ousted immediately.

As for advancing admission prices to meet the increase asked in license fees, it was pointed out that all local theatres are getting what might be considered top prices compared with theatres elsewhere.

At present, theatres are taxed on the basis of seating capacity and admission charges. This system, exhibitors contend, is the fairest way and should be continued.

PENNSYLVANIA MAILS LICENSE APPLICATIONS

Although several large chain store corporations had been granted preliminary injunctions against enforcement of Pennsylvania's new chain store and theatre tax, no motion picture companies had contested the constitutionality of the measure in court up to this week when the first of 200,000 applications for tax licenses were mailed by the Department of Revenue.

The tax is payable August 4th and all companies were notified to remit the tax with the application.

At the same time, J. Griffith Boardman, secretary of revenue, announced steps will be taken to collect more than $1,000,000 outstanding in unpaid amusement taxes. The tax of one per cent on each 25 cents of admission in Pennsylvania expired Wednesday but that, Mr. Boardman said, does not exempt delinquents from paying. Officials have been ordered to proceed with collections, and if payment is not made within 90 days, the matter will be turned over to the Department of Justice.

Stock Changes in Paramount, Loew's

Acquisition in May of 199,000 Paramount three and one-fourth per cent convertible debentures and disposition of 231,000, through Hemphill, Noyes and Company, was reported by Stanton Griffis, Paramount director, according to the semi-monthly summary of the Securities and Exchange Commission. At the close of the month Mr. Griffis' holdings had been reduced to 58,000.

The only other transaction in Paramount securities reported to the SEC was the disposition of 1,000 shares of second preferred stock by A. Conger Goodyear, director, whose holdings at the close of May were 1,000 shares.

A steady building up of its holdings of common stock of Loew's Boston Theatres by Loew's, Inc., was disclosed with the filing of reports from August, 1935, to April, 1937. Starting at the close of August, 1935, with 84,426 shares of the theatre stock, Loew's built their holdings up to 96,929 shares by the end of April of this year.

Delayed reports for 1935 and 1936 were also filed by George H. Eichelberger, New York, director in Trans Lux Daylight Screen, who held 1,100 shares of common at the end of April, 1936.

Neither B. A. Barron or Norman C. Nicholson, New York, officers in Educational Pictures, held any of the company's equity stocks when its registration became effective May 9th, but John R. Munn, New York, director, held warrants for 10 shares of common, it was reported.

No Pathe Film Corporation stocks were held by Albert F. Schwarz, New York, officer, but Charles B. Wiggin, New York, director, held one share of common when its registration went into effect.

MGM to Produce 52 Films a Year

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will release 52 features for the current season but will continue plans for an indefinite number, between 44 and 52, for 1937-38. There will be thirty-two "A" films in next season's group.

All pictures scheduled for this season, including "Captains Courageous," will be released by the end of August. All large circuit deals have been closed, and the company reports sales are substantially ahead of 1936. MGM is not seeking long-term deals, despite a number of franchise agreements recently closed at the insistence of the circuit.

The plan to produce three and four reelers, at one time considered by the company, has been dropped. Widespread demand for double features is the reason given.

Carl Brannberg was elected president of the Swedish Motion Picture Owners' Association, at the annual election, last week in Stockholm.

The Swedish Film Chamber held its annual meeting at the same time and elected Olaf Anderson president. Mr. Anderson is managing director of Svensk Filmindustri.

EXHIBITOR AID SOUGHT FOR STAGE-PLAY FILMS

Warner to Release Trailers Ahead of Road Companies of Shows to Be Filmed

Exhibitors will be approached soon by Warner representatives in connection with the company's plan to release trailers promoting road companies of Warner-backed plays. The idea, recently announced, is to extend public interest in vehicles from the period of stage presentation to release of their ultimate film versions.

The first of the new promotional trailers will be released in the fall and will publicize, jointly, three Warner properties, "Yes, My Darling Daughter," "Brother Rat," and "Tovarich," all to be filmed by the company following their current Broadway and itinerant runs. The short will be released, gratis, just before the touring company's visit in each city booking the legitimate attraction and in cities surrounding the key spot.

Exhibitors will be approached with the theory that wide attendance of the stage show will build advance audiences for the pictorial versions. Warners expects that operators will favor the idea not only on its primary merits but also because many exhibitors own and lease the theatres where the road companies will play, and hence would benefit from promotion given their tenants. Possible exhibitor resentment, on the ground that increased road company business might reduce picture attendance during the legitimate's stay, has been considered but discredited in the face of what are believed to be compensatory benefits.

The first trailer will be produced soon on the Coast at a cost approximating $5,000, which is to be met at least partially by the managements of the stage companies. Charles Washburn, Phyllis Perlman and Bernard Simon, Broadway press agents handling the three shows, will have a hand in the writing of the script. The intention is to invest the short subject with entertainment as well as advertising value.

The idea was formulated by Jacob Wilk and Barney Klawans, Warner executives in the home office. If the experiment succeeds, they intend to make it an established practice.

U.S. Films Lead Austrian Market

by HANS LORANT

in Vienna

The United States is expected to dominate the Austrian market during the 1937-38 season almost to the point of monopoly. Germany, America's only serious competitor, will have only about 100 films for export, most of which will not be ready until the latter part of the season.

British, French and other foreign productions have never seriously competed with the United States and Austrian production is itself at low ebb. Only one Austrian film is in production now and it is improbable that more than 14 will be produced during the entire season.

The receivership of Mondial, large Austrian producer, dramatized the degree to which Austrian production is dependent upon Germany. The only hope for profit on an Austrian film lies in the German market, owing to high production costs and a film customs union with the Nazi state. Mondial was forced into receivership because of German banning of a $100,000 feature.

SMPE to Help Set Standard for School Equipment

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers will direct its efforts to establishing minimum standards in non-theatrical equipment to be used in the new school film program recently announced by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and educators, with the hope that 200,000 schools eventually will be applying motion pictures to their curricula.

The Society's non-theatrical committee, which will be in charge of the program, is preparing to offer its technical counsel to school authorities inexperienced in operation of motion picture equipment.

The technical questions are primarily four, covering virtually all problems likely to face school superintendents unfamiliar with film apparatus. They relate to optical efficiency; sound excellence; mechanical standards, by which is meant durability of equipment; and measurement of the effect of the equipment on the life of the film.

The proposed means of establishing these standards are a bureau that will answer all questions on technical matters that may trouble school officials, and rental of test films, which will enable schools to experiment with the quality of projection equipment in all technical particulars.

These films, which were shown for the first time at the SMPE Spring meeting in Hollywood, are similar to the reels developed by the Society in connection with its previous campaigns for establishment of world equipment standards. The test films, which are 400 feet long, are two in number, one for measurement of sound and one for visual excellence.

Announcement of the new school program which, once underway, would heavily influence demand for projection equipment, is understood to be encouraging manufacturers to redoubled efforts to find ways of reducing the cost of projectors, so that equipment now costing $300 to $500 would be scaled down to $200. This is considered possible ultimately if the demand permits manufacture on a mass production basis.

Publicity Mystery Veils School Field 'Invasion' Plans

On Thursday afternoon, July 1st, Dr. Mark A. May, director of the Institute of Human Relations at Yale and head of a committee of educators working with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, read an announcement of a plan of the organized industry for "wholesale invasion" of the educational films field, to the Detroit convention of the National Education Association.

On the same date, the MPPDA delivered several hundred copies of Dr. May's speech to Belmont Farley, NEA press agent, for distribution from the convention to American newspapers and press wire services.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on July 1st, published, exclusively, a story on the announcement, followed the next day by publication in other film trade papers.

A Query and a Reply

On July 12th, MOTION PICTURE HERALD, after fruitless daily search for the newspaper stories, sent a telegram to Mr. Farley, at NEA's Washington headquarters, asking: "Was there any newspaper comment after distribution of press releases on Dr. May's announcement of film industry's educational films plan?"

Three days later, on July 15th, the HERALD received a letter from Mr. Farley, in which he said there had been a dearth of publicity on the plan. On the same morning, full accounts of the story started to appear in New York newspapers—two weeks after the announcement.

Dr. May, interviewed on July 14th by a reporter of the New York Times, asked why the original release had not been used from Detroit. The reporter said no release was received.

Arthur DeBra, executive of the MPPDA and in charge of the school films plan, said he was unaware of what had happened in Detroit to the original press release, and added that so far as he knew, it had received no attention in the newspapers except for a small facetious article in the New York Sun, in which Clark Gable and Greta Garbo were referred to as future professors for America's schools.

"Groundless," replied Mr. DeBra to a question whether the explanation might rest in opposition of the multi-million-dollar book publishing business.

More Mystery

School text book publishers said the industry's film project was not "viewed with alarm," that the supplying of films to schools "could not injure the publishing business," that it would be impossible so to revolutionize teaching that books would supplement pictures.

Said Miss Mildred Smith, editor of Publishers Weekly: Had not heard of the industry's plan.

Hugh Kelly, vice-president of McGraw Hill Publishing Company: Pictures cannot take the place of text-books.

D. H. Howe, president of American Book Company: "Teaching with pictures is only spectacular," but motion pictures do have a place in education, "as a supplement to text-books."

Meanwhile, the MPPDA was starting anew, having in mind a nationwide treatment in feature articles and Sunday supplements.

And in new headquarters at 1600 Broadway, New York, Dr. May and his committee of educators on the staff of the MPPDA, under a $75,000 grant from the Rockefeller Foundation and one of $50,000 from the directors of the MPPDA, were appraising short subjects.

Since July 1 the company also has started "Two Platoons," in which will be seen Dick Foran, Ann Sheridan, Robert Armstrong, Hugh O'Connell, Eddie Acuff, Veda Ann Borg, Ed Chandler and Ted Oliver. John Farrow is directing.

MGM started "Madame X." The cast lists Gladys George, Warren William, John Beal, Henry Daniell, Walter Kingsford, Emma Dunn, George Zucco and William Henry. Sam Wood is the director. Also under way is "Love, Live and Learn." Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell are featured, with Robert Benchley, Helen Vincent and George Zucco listed in support. George Fitzmaurice is directing.

Two other recently started pictures are on the company's current program. "Big City" will present Spencer Tracy, Luise Rainer, Victor Varconi, Oscar Shea, William Demarest, Russell Hopton, Andrew Tombes, John Arledge, Helen Troy, Janet Beecher, Ray Walker, Eadie Adams, Eddie Quillan, Guinn Williams, Alice White and Regis Toomey. Frank Borzage is the director. Bruce Cabot, Virginia Grey, Edward Norris, Cliff Edwards, Warren Hymer, John Hamilton, G. Pt. Collins and Joe Caits will be seen in "Black Lightning," which Edward L. Cahn directs.

Start Two at GN

The Grand National group started two features. "Something to Sing About," a Zion Myers production, lists James Cagney, Evelyn Daw, Jimmy Newill, Harry Barris, Cully Richards, Bill Carey, Gene Lockhart, William Frawley, William Davidson and Philip Ahn. Victor Schertzinger is directing. "Renfrew of the Mounted," Al Herman production, will present Jimmy Newill, Phyllis Barry, Donald Reed, William Royle, Chief Thundercloud, David Barclay, William Austin and Cennis Chlodicott. Herman is directing.

July has been a big month for United Artists associates. To its "Nothing Sacred," Selznick International added "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer." The cast includes Tommy Kelly, Marcia Mae Jones, Jackie Moran, Beulah Bondi, Walter Brennan, Victor Jory, Ann Gillis and Cora Sue Collins. Norman Taurog is directing. Samuel Goldwyn started "The Adventures of Marco Polo," which will feature Gary Cooper, Sigrid Gurie, Ernest Truex, Verree Teasdale, Basil Rathbone, George Barbier and Lotus Lin. Archie Mayo is the director. Wanger Productions launched two new pictures. Henry Fonda and Joan Bennett are featured in "I Met My Love Again," with Alan Marshall, Dame May Whitty, Tim Holt, Louise Platt, Dorothy Stickney, Florence Lake, Alice Cavenna, Genee Hall and Bentley Hewitt in support. Arthur Ripley and Joshua Logan are sharing direction credits. "Stand In" also started. It will present Leslie Howard, Joan Blondell, J. C. Nugent, Tully Marshall, William V. Mong and Jack Carson. Tay Garnett is directing.

EXCHANGE UNIONS NOW SET IN 19 CENTERS

United Scenic Artists Lose Plea for Injunction Against Set Designers and Producers

Meetings between representatives of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and home office distribution executives on exchange union agreements were resumed this week in New York. John Gatelee, former head of the IATSE unit in New England, has been assigned to act for all locals, thus avoiding the necessity for the unions to send representatives to New York.

Included in the 19 territories for which agreements have been drawn are Albany, Boston, Buffalo, Charlotte, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dallas, Denver, Des Moines, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Milwaukee, New Haven, Oklahoma City, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Salt Lake City, San Francisco and Washington.

No decision has been made on the question of the inclusion of Butte, Montana, a shipping center for Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Twentieth Century-Fox.

In Hollywood the United Scenic Artists, local of the Painters Brotherhood, received a setback in its court fight to prevent the Society of Motion Picture Set Designers from negotiating a bargaining contract with the producers. The suit filed by the scenic artists against the society and the Motion Picture Producers Association sought a permanent injunction to prevent interference with the bargaining pact being sought by the local. The court ruled the union was not incorporated and could not bring suit.

Actors' Equity Association, a member of the American Federation of Labor since 1919, reaffirmed its allegiance to that organization as opposed to the Committee for Industrial Organization in an editorial in the July issue of Equity Magazine which said in part:

"Equity was never more closely allied, more completely in understanding and accord with federated labor than it is today . . . in any emergency which may arise the federation knows where it will find Equity."

Without attacking the CIO on any specific count the editorial said "there have been some unions so dazzled by such quick successes that they have forgotten that it was the American Federation of Labor which gave them their start and which made it possible for them to arrive at the place which they now occupy."

In another warning, directed at representatives of employers, the editorial said that "some sort of organization of their workers will be effected and that if Equity does not do it they will have to face one of these other groups, less experienced, less wise and less concerned with the welfare of the industry as a whole."

A second meeting was held this week by the International Board of Associated Actors and Artists of America on the jurisdictional fight in New York between the American Federation of Actors and the Burlesque Artists Association.

GOLDWYN CONDUCTS STRAW VOTE PREVIEW

Samuel Goldwyn previews will solicit audience reaction by questionnaire, following an experiment made at the preview of "Dead End" at the United Artists theatre in Long Beach, Cal., last week.

The preview started with the manager's request that the audience, following the screening, avail itself of comment cards, placed in the lobby. More than 90 per cent of the cards were returned.

Mr. Goldwyn talked with some fifty patrons personally while fifteen Goldwyn lieutenants did similar interviewing. Opinions were collated and "Dead End" was returned for retakes on the strength of them.

In future use of the idea, a prologue will be inserted, with a star or featured player making the appeal for criticism.

Reorganization of RKO Reported Topic on Coast

Discussions understood to relate to reorganization of RKO are being held between Leo Spitz, president of the company, and A. H. McCausland, trustee and Irving Trust representative, in Hollywood.

Floyd Odlum, William Merrill and Edwin Weisl, who arrived by plane from New York last week, have been conferring with Mr. Spitz on the legal aspect of reorganization, with the expectation that discussions will terminate the end of the week. Malcolm Kinsburg and William Mallard, RKO attorneys, returned to New York recently following conferences with Mr. Spitz, who is expected back in New York by July 31st.

Special Master Alger, who has been conducting hearings in New York on rehabilitation of the company, has announced July 26th as the date for reply to briefs on the case. A special meeting has been set for August 5th to hear any additional testimony that Mr. Alger may require.

Kerr Buys Four Houses

E. W. Kerr, manager of the Broadway, Council Bluffs, Iowa, purchased four houses recently. Three are Missouri theatres bought from Lester Robinson: the Rigney in Albany, the Grant City in Grant City and the Noll in Bethany. Another Bethany house, the Roxy, was purchased from J. W. Maple.

Expansion Moves Are Indicated In Two Circuits

Recent activities of two large circuits, Loew's and United Artists, indicate expansion of both chains in separate sections of the country.

In the East, Loew's is conducting negotiations with a view to obtaining greater representation in Niagara Falls, Westchester and Providence, Rhode Island. At the same time, extension of the United Artists circuit in the southwest is seen in the recently filed incorporation of United Artists of Texas, Inc., in Wilmington, Del.

Discussions between Loew's and two operators, Charles Heyman, of the Strand and Cataract theatres, both in Niagara Falls, and Vincent McFaul, of the Bellevue in the same city, are being held, with the probable outcome that the three houses will be pooled and jointly managed by Messrs. Heyman and McFaul.

Acquisition by Loew's of the Larchmont, 550-seat Westchester theatre owned by Maurice Freed, also is believed imminent. A deal providing for a partnership interest in Ed Fay's Carlton theatre, in Provincetown, is practically set.

In addition to the incorporation of United Artists of Texas, Inc., belief that United Artists plans an extension program was suggested by the circuit's recent purchase of a fifty per cent interest in the Robb and Rowley circuit. For their half interest sale, Harold Robb and Ed Rowley were understood to have received in cash the equivalent of four times the circuit's earnings in 1936.

Near Approval Of Roxy Plan

Formal approval of the Roxy reorganization plan, under which Twentieth Century-Fox will acquire the theatre, is considered almost certain to be handed down next week, following the filing last week of the required two-thirds consent of the second mortgage bondholders.

Consent of bondholders controlling $1,283,300 in notes—$283,300 in excess of the required two-thirds—removed the last critical barrier to conclusion of the agreement.

Formal approval of the plan was delayed to permit both sides to determine a method of safeguarding Howard S. Cullman, Roxy trustee, from claims which may be brought against him by unknown creditors. Alfred Appel, attorney for Mr. Cullman, made a motion to protect Mr. Cullman from such a possibility by requesting that Twentieth Century-Fox assume all unknown obligations. Otto Koegel, counsel for the distributor, objected to this plea, making immediate agreement impossible. U. S. District Court Judge Francis G. Caffey then set hearings for Friday.

Judge Caffey reserved decision on the application of Mr. Cullman for approval of a $28,663 payment to Artco, the balance due them under the 1936 operating contract.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Heidi

(20th Century-Fox)

Melodrama

Shirley Temple in "Heidi" is in answer to public demand. The book on which it is based, Johanna Spyri's story of a little Swiss girl who knew little but torment and woe during the eight years of her life, but brought love and happiness to all who came in contact with her save those who abused her, is one of the most widely read child stories of all time. It has endured for generations and each year, particularly during the Christmas season, thousands of new copies are sold.

It is a vehicle that gives further opportunity for the demonstration of Shirley's dramatic talent, always latent but recognized only lately in "Wee Willie Winkie." As she has met earlier opportunities, despite the skepticism of authorities and experts, it may be anticipated that she will rise to the occasion again.

For principals to support the young star, 20th Century-Fox has chosen a talented cast. Included are Jean Hersholt, Arthur Treacher, Helen Westley, Sidney Blackmer, Mary Nash, Thomas Beck, Mady Christians and Marcia Mae Jones. Minor roles are assumed by Delmar Watson, Pauline Moore, Bert Sprotte, Egon Brecher and Christian Rub.

The picture is being produced on a costly scale. Much attention has been devoted to capturing the spirit and feeling of the Swiss Alpine Country in the Middle 19th Century. As much as narrative, description of the locale is a part of the Walter Ferris and Julien Josephson screen play. Likewise the Lew Pollack and Sidney Mitchell music is topical of the time and locale. Allan Dwan's direction has been pointed to capture the full point of the story and the occasion of its happening.

To be released just prior to the Christmas holidays.

The Life of the Party

(RKO Radio)

Musical Comedy Romance

The form chart of the personnel associated with this production is a recommendation of its merit both commercially and as entertainment. Besides being a director, Joseph Santley was the author of "Harmony Lane" and "Million Dollar Baby." In the trio which prepared the screenplay, Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby as a team accounted for "Duck Soup," "Walking on Air," "Bright Lights" and "The Kid from Spain." The third member, Viola Brothers Shore, was a collaborator on "Walking on Air," "The Smartest Girl in Town" and "Sailor Be Good." Song writer Allie Wrubel's credits include numbers in "Flirtation Walk," "Happiness Ahead" and "We're in the Money." His partner, Herb Magidson, contributed to "Here's to Romance," "Reckless" and "George White's Scandals of 1935." Director William A. Seiter has been in charge of such pictures as "This Is My Affair," "Dimples," "Stowaway," "The Moon's Our Home" and "Roberta." One of the highlights of producer Edward Kaufman's career was "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford."

For names, Gene Raymond and Harriet Hilliard—Miss Hilliard was seen in "Follow the Fleet" and "New Faces of 1937"—are the stars. Second leads feature Victor Moore, lately in "Make Way for Tomorrow," and Helen Broderick, who was with Moore in "We're on the Jury" and "Meet the Missus." The comedy content is in the hands of Joe Penner, Parkyakarkus, Eric Blore, whose telephone conversation sequence was a sensation of "Shall We Dance," and Billy Gilbert. Lesser players are Ann Miller and Richard Lane.

With its musical, dancing and production spectacle background, the story is comedy romance. The parents of two young folk don't want either to fall in love or marry, but despite all efforts to guard the fledglings against the wiles of the opposite sex, they do just that. The outcome should entertain without straining anyone's imagination.

I'll Take Romance

(Columbia)

Music with Comedy Romance

Grace Moore is the star. For practical purposes, regardless of the merits of the substantiating story, most exhibitors will consider Miss Moore's singing the primary showmanship angle. Past performances, as a vocalist and as an actor, denote that Miss Moore's vocal ability attracts many to motion picture theatres.

In the story a South American operatic manager wants a Metropolitan Opera diva for his seasonal program. He meets the star. There are complications and each attempts to deceive the other. Nevertheless, they fall in love. Yet as they practise their respective deception to precipitate complicated amusement, the result is as anticipated. The finale brings them into each other's arms, after both have scored business and artistic triumphs.

The story is by Stephen Morehouse Avery. Edward H. Griffith, who has demonstrated advanced ability in handling intimate romantic themes, is the director. The music, mainly operatic although there are several topical numbers, culminates with a sequence from "Madame Butterfly." This was under the supervision of Morris Stoloff.

Principals supporting Miss Moore are Melvyn Douglas, remembered for "Theodora Goes Wild," and "I Met Him in Paris"; Stuart Irwin, lately with Grand National and 20th Century-Fox, and Helen Westley. Supporting players, familiar to most audiences, include Margaret Hamilton, Richard Carle, Frank Forest, Walter Kingsford, Ferdinand Gottschalk and Esther Muir.

Release date: September 9.

Double Wedding

(MGM)

Comedy Romance

William Powell had "The Emperor's Candlesticks" and Myrna Loy "Parnell," but they didn't happen to have been together in them. They were together, though, in "The Thin Man," "The Great Ziegfeld," "Libeled Lady" and "After the Thin Man," and it is a subject of record that when those pictures were playing, theatre-goers were not looking in other places for their entertainment. Thus it's only a matter of showmanship understanding to appreciate that William Powell and Myrna Loy are the preponderant exploitation asset in this production.

The story, adapted from Ferenc Molnar's play, "The Great Love," is typical Powell-Loy co-starring material. Basically it is farce. Powell and Miss Loy, as far apart as the North and South Poles in social standing, fall in love. As MGM's publicity department puts it: "It's jam-packed with breezy situations, bright dialogue and outstanding characters. There's not a conventional moment in it; not a single ordinary situation nor a prosaic line. It effervesces, sparkles and bubbles like no other romantic comedy of the season." That's quite a birthright to live up to, but Mr. Powell and Miss Loy have not disappointed in their previous joint appearances.

In addition to the stars, MGM has gathered a talented and, in most cases, favorably known supporting cast. Listed are Florence Rice, John Beal, Jessie Ralph, Edgar Kennedy, Sidney Toler, Mary Gordon, Barnett Parker, Priscilla Lawson, Henry Taylor and violinist Irving Lipschultz.

The story is a comedy, yet one of the most popular successes of its director, Richard Thorpe, was the weirdly dramatic "Night Must Fall." Likewise, while credited with "Love on the Run," producer Joseph Mankiewicz made the vivid "Fury."

Release date: September 16.

Wife, Doctor and Nurse

(20th Century-Fox)

Romance Melodrama

Title, production and cast credits suggest smart, sophisticated domestic triangle melodrama. Comedy contrast is expected, but the story of the society doctor, a society wife and a nurse is quite familiar. It was most recently exhibited in "Between Two Women." Now, though the incidents and complications leading up to the climax are very much formula, the finale is being pointed to assure surprise and novelty. The two women decide to withdraw from their rivalry for the doctor's affections, but only succeed in making things so miserable for those directly concerned that a unique compromise is effected.

The principal three are Loretta Young, nurse; Warner Baxter, doctor, and Virginia Bruce, the wife. Jane Darwell, Sidney Blackmer, Maurice Cass, Elish Cook, Jr., Minna Gombell and Margaret Irving make up the featured support and incidental roles will present Gordon Elliott, Claire DuBrey, the Brewster Twins, Ruth Peterson, Georges Renavent, Landers Stevens, George Ernest, Hal K. Dawson and Robes Murray.

The screen play, which is replete with pointed dialogue, clever situations and amusing comedy pictured in smart sophisticated surroundings, is credited to Kathryn Scola, Darrell Ware and Lamar Trotti. Walter Lang, who made "The Mighty Barnum," returns to Darryl F. Zanuck to direct.

Release date: Not determined.

SAYS COURTS UPHOLD 'GAMES' IN 12 STATES

Loew Circuit Head Says Reinstatement Has Restored Balance with Competition

Bank Night, forbidden by court decisions in several states and in doubtful status in others, has been established as definitely legal in 12 states, according to Claude Ezell, sales manager for Affiliated Enterprises, owner of the game. In New York this week on a tour of exchange centers Mr. Ezell said his company has between six and eight cases pending to determine the legality of the game and the validity of infringement claims.

C. C. Moskowitz, head of the Loew circuit, asked what effect the restoration of chance games in theatres in the New York metropolitan area had had, said, "It has enabled us to compete properly with others." The games were restored several weeks ago by the Loew and RKO houses after a brief respite from them, when the independent houses refused to follow the circuits' lead.

Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, said members of his organization would never abandon the games until the circuits adopted a "proper differential" in admission prices and quality of product. The Century circuit announced this week that it would reinstate the games in eight or nine theatres starting August 3rd.

Charges of operating a lottery were preferred against H. S. Gallup, general manager of Delft Theatres, Inc., of Michigan in connection with Bank Night operation by the circuit's houses. In obedience to a letter from Marquette, Ishpeming, Negaunee and Gwinn county officials declaring Bank Night a violation of the state anti-lottery law, theatres in these counties discontinued the games several weeks ago. Theatre operators charged, however, that the American Legion in Ishpeming and the Eagles lodge in Negaunee held carnivals recently at which chance games were operated without police interference. In view of this exhibitors in Marquette and Ishpeming said they had decided to resume Bank Night.

Enforcement of a recent court of appeals decision declaring Jackpot illegal in Alabama has been held in abeyance by a motion for rehearing. The motion was filed by Cecil B. Grames, Tuscaloosa theatre manager, who was fined $200 in Tuscaloosa circuit court for conducting the game. In spite of the high court decision theatres in some cities have continued to use the game.

Loss of receipts since a temporary injunction against Bank Night went into effect in Omaha was the reason given by Carl Snyder for the closing of his Victoria and Garden theatres and by the Epstein circuit for the darkening of the Tivoli. All are neighborhood houses.

Written arguments to the Nebraska supreme court contending that Bank Night as operated in Beatrice is not a lottery were submitted by attorneys for the Beatrice Fox Theatre Corporation. The company is appealing from the decision of the district court enjoining the game.

The Interstate theatre in Texas, experimenting with chance game substitutes since the state supreme court ruled the previous games illegal, has installed an "I. Q." program. Patrons in the lobby and the audience are interviewed over a microphone connected with radio station KTRH. A series of questions on general information are asked, the best set of answers winning a prize with a special award set aside for the correct answer to a master question.

DeMille, Selznick In Tax Complaints

Two tax disputes with the Bureau of Internal Revenue, one brought by the Bureau against Cecil B. de Mille charging him with tax avoidance, and the other a complaint by David O. Selznick for the department's refusal to allow income tax deductions, proceeded in their respective directions this week.

The government will appeal the de Mille case to the U. S. Supreme court in an effort to collect $1,156,074 allegedly due for tax avoidance. The case was won by Mr. de Mille before the Ninth circuit of appeals recently.

Mr. Selznick seeks a redetermination of an alleged $9,897 tax deficiency for 1934, challenging the government's refusal to disallow $6,373 which he deducted for business entertainment, travelling, communications, and other expenses, and $18,672 for bad debts. He listed earnings on four pictures, "Dinner at Eight," "Dancing Lady," "Viva Villa" and "Manhattan Melodrama," at $208,000.

The government's petition against Mr. de Mille states that he had formed a family partnership and a corporation which "sold his services to producers for larger sums than the salary they paid him." The partnership had accumulated $252,389 when the surplus was turned over to the corporation, and the corporation surplus was $1,606,515, although only $192,000 had been distributed.

Fox Receivership Extended Six Months

A six months extension of Milton C. Weisman's position as receiver for Fox Theatre Corporation has been ordered by Martin T. Manton, United States district court judge. The order, which continues the receivership period until January 12, 1938, was opposed by the Trust Company of Georgia and other general creditors.

The court also denied a creditors' petition for an immediate distribution of assets, termination of receivership and a final accounting from Mr. Weisman.

The Motion Picture Salesmen's Club will sponsor a film district field day August 9th on the grounds of Pemberton Inn, Boston.

Hopkins Hears Union Protest

While awaiting a reply to a protest against the dismissal of 1,709 workers on the Federal Theatre Project, representatives of theatrical unions with members affected, have endorsed the Allen-Shwellenbach bill introduced in the House of Representatives. The bill would provide that no WPA worker be discharged unless he was assured of a position in private employment.

The theatre project recently was criticized by Ralph M. Easley, chairman of the executive council of the National Civic Federation, in a letter to President Roosevelt. However, spokesman for the project refused to reply to the charge that the project was under Communist control. They said they would not "dignify" the attack with an answer.

Frank Gillmore of Actors' Equity voiced the unions' protest to Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator, at a conference in Washington. The unions are seeking to prevent the dismissal of professional workers. Mr. Hopkins has not committed the WPA on the course to be taken.

In this connection, Mr. Easley asserted that professional actors represented only a small percentage of those on the payroll of the theatre project. Charles P. Ryan, Jr., acting administrator, challenged the charge that only 36 per cent of those employed were theatrical people. He said a recent report showed only 10 per cent of those on the project were without theatrical experience.

Radio Advertising Shows Increase

Total radio advertising for May amounted to $11,325,165, according to a report of the National Association of Broadcasters. The intake represents a slight increase over April, due mainly to a 6.7 gain in local advertising replacing the customary seasonal slump.

Eight national networks did a total business for the month of $5,875,531 while regional networks grossed $137,734. National non-network stations had an income of $2,962,200, representing a gain of 2.4 per cent, and the total for local stations was $2,349,700.

The New England, Middle Atlantic and North Central areas showed increases over April at the expense of corresponding slight depressions in the remaining sections of the country.

Live talent increased in roughly the same proportion that transcriptions decreased and, of the industrial sponsors, clothing showed the only important advance over April in the national field and tobacco the only gain in the regional networks.

Columbia Dividend

Columbia Pictures' board of directors, at its meeting held July 14th, declared a quarterly dividend of 68¾ cents per share on the $2.75 convertible preferred stock, payable August 16th to the preferred stockholders of record August 4th.

The Firefly

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Operetta

"The Firefly" has been produced on a tremendous scale by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Hunt Stromberg and ran two hours and 20 minutes at the preview. The quarter century old operetta of Rudolf Friml and Otto Harbach provides showmen with the opportunity to capitalize upon the stage precedent and operetta tradition in addition to the names Jeanette MacDonald, Allan Jones and Warren William, chief among the large cast of principals.

Outstanding box-office values are the singing of the Friml music by Miss MacDonald and Jones. No unseemly liberties have been taken with score or lyrics in making the adaptation. There are no ill fitting interpolated numbers, and the outline of the original story has been adhered to closely.

Historical background, with French and Spanish locale, has been reproduced with meticulous fidelity. Altogether it is a masterful technical handling.

The picture opens, closes and is interspersed with military maneuvers, with battles on a scale equivalent to that of the biggest successes of that character.

The music naturally is the principal promotion. Capital songs are "You Need Sympathy," "Giannina Mia," "When a Maid Comes Knocking at Your Heart," and others.

The musical direction by Herbert Stothart extracts full value from the score.

The story is of a girl spy attempting to forestall Napoleon's seizure of the Spanish throne, as she poses as a music hall singer and dancer. She wheedles secrets from French officers. She falls in love with a youth who turns out to be a French spy. Discovered, she escapes as Napoleon seizes the throne. The Spanish people revolt. The British join the patriots. The girl succeeds in effecting a change in the French plans by permitting herself to be captured with a faked message. She is rescued by the victorious Spanish, and reunited with her sweetheart.

Added to what appears to be a natural end to the story is a montage sequence of the mingling of the French, British and Spanish flags, troops and heroes in an apparent sermonette on the horrors of war and the virtues of peace. This is anticlimactic and unessential.

Previewed at the Chinese Theatre, Los Angeles. The audience was enthusiastic from start to finish and during the MacDonald and Jones solo, duet and ensemble numbers, but squirmed restlessly in the longer emotional interludes. In the foyer the feeling was that the picture should and would be shortened.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Saratoga

(MGM)

Comedy Romance

There are two ways of looking at "Saratoga." One is for its entertainment and commercial worth as a motion picture. The other is as the picture during production of which Jean Harlow died. In relation to the second consideration there may be a temptation on the part of many to resort to morbid exploitation. Such tactics are hardly necessary.

"Saratoga" is a sparklingly produced race track picture. It has much to do with horses and racing, which precipitates plenty of exciting action, but it has more to do with the individuals who follow the horses. It is comedy romance, sometimes tinged with light melodrama. Dialogue, situations, action and characterizations blend effectively and, although the film is rather long, there is no dragging. Interesting persons are constantly saying and doing interesting and most amusing things in interesting places. Miss Harlow is co-starred with Clark Gable, with whom she made her first bids for stardom after becoming associated with MGM. The cast includes Lionel Barrymore, Frank Morgan, Walter Pidgeon, Una Merkel and Cliff Edwards in featured roles. George Zucco, Jonathan Hale, Hattie McDaniels, Frankie Darro and Henry Stone comprise the support.

Miss Harlow's untimely death created a problem for the producers. Fortunately, the film had been practically completed before the tragedy. Miss Harlow, herself, is in all the important sequences, even to the fadeout. The three or four connecting sequences in which her understudy, Mary Dees, assumes the character have been merged into the continuity in such expert fashion that it should be difficult to detect the difference in personalities. Nevertheless, it can be expected that many will be curious to detect the exact moment. MGM has not resorted to any undignified procedure to capitalize on Miss Harlow, nor should exhibitors.

With Messrs. Barrymore, Morgan, Edwards and Miss Merkel contributing separate brands of characteristic entertainment, Miss Harlow, Gable and Pidgeon practically carry the show. Gable, cast as a bookmaker attracted to Miss Harlow, plans to hook wealthy Pidgeon, to whom Jean is engaged, and win her. Directly the story resolves itself into a battle of wits between Miss Harlow and Gable. The climax comes at Saratoga.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale. A respectful burst of applause greeted the title, cast listing and Miss Harlow's first appearance. It was evident that the audience was watching every move she made. Yet this interest did not prevent it from enjoying the picture as a whole and being appreciative of the efforts of the other stars and members of the supporting cast. The audience psychology seemed to denote that the picture would be a potent box office feature.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Wine, Women and Horses

(Warner)

Comedy-Drama

Other titles for this might be "It Pays to Gamble" or "Virtue Doesn't Always Triumph." There's no song in the picture, but the man in the story who indulges in the three other occasions of moral unrighteousness has a pretty good time of it, while the woman who is conscientiously ethical doesn't fare very well.

The picture undoubtedly was plotted primarily as a human interest comedy melodrama, yet as the intention was not completely developed, the audience, not entirely able to grasp the idea, laughed in places where tense emotionalism was supposed to prevail.

Jim Turner, race track gambler, in company with kindred soul Valerie, enjoys himself following the horses. Sometimes they are prosperous. Just as often they are broke. Neither condition makes much difference. Then Jim meets country girl Marjorie and, though there doesn't seem much reason for so doing, he marries her. Of course Marjorie is a bitter foe of all forms of gambling and wild living. For a time Jim is content with a small job in a small town, but, bitten by the gambling bug again, he takes Marjorie to Santa Anita. Between coups at the track, on the dice and roulette table, he comes into another fortune, but Marjorie leaves him.

Good theatre must have Jim, broke, go back to Marjorie. She's all for giving him another chance, particularly because Jim is so sorry their baby died. But a tongue-lashing administered by mother-in-law Mrs. Mayhew drives Jim back to Valerie. The finale seems to have him embarked on a happier and more prosperous gambling career, while, even though the audience doesn't see it, Marjorie is presumed to be left to suffer in silence.

Wild and Woolly

(20th Century - Fox)

Comedy-Melodrama

There is in this picture practically all the characteristic material demonstrated saleable to the substantial public of Jane Withers accountable for her runner-up position in Motion Picture Herald's annual poll of money-making stars. It gives her bright but not overbright lines to speak, precocious but not incredible deeds to perform, and it employs what amounts to a turning back of the clock in time setting to make certain extraordinary incidents seem plausible.

The action takes place today in a small western town, Mesa City, but the town is in the throes of a three-day Pioneer celebration during which the citizens dress and act as they believe their forebears did 40 years ago. This device lends seeming logic to such events as a locomotive runaway, with rescue, and a bank robbery by stagecoach, with horseback pursuit and capture of the criminals. There's considerable shooting in this connection, yet the picture is in no sense a routine Western.

Miss Withers is cast as the granddaughter of a reformed bandit who, having served as sheriff in the long ago after his redemption, seeks reelection. Against him are opposed the town banker, with whom he has conducted a feud since boyhood, and as the picture opens the banker is engaged in splitting with itinerant crooks the profits from a dishonest gambling concession permitted to operate during a civic celebration. The grandfather and his ancient foe are in amusing conflict, with the little girl and a youthful associate trying to keep matters from developing into tragedy, until the crooks try to rob the bank, when the former bandit captures them and peace is restored all around. A young newspaper editor and a school teacher work out their romance while all this is going on.

Walter Brennan's performance as the grandfather is an exploitation asset. Carl "Alfalfa" Switzer's handling of the secondary juvenile role drew an unusual preview reception. Jack Searl portrays a bad boy in his usual manner. The Wild West character of proceedings and dress justify ballyhoo of the sort dear to the hearts of juvenile Withers fans.

Previewed July 13th at the Uptown theatre, Los Angeles. The audience, predominantly payees, laughed in the right places, applauded without prompting and gave every indication of considering the production one of Miss Withers' best.—W. R. W.

Confession

(Warner Brothers)

Melodrama

Showmen whose audiences respond readily to a Kay Francis billing have reason to inform them that in this picture the star steps over into what might be called the field of undiluted dramatics. The character and play are of the kind that Bernhardt and Duse were wont to give themselves to in their era. It probably isn't quite Hoyle to mention "Madame X" and "East Lynne" as directly comparable productions, but it is of the stuff of which those were made. Like them, too, "Confession" makes no concessions to modern tradition in comedy relief.

Miss Francis is cast as "Vera," a concert hall singer who murders "Michael Michailow," a pianist and conductor, when he visits her place of employment with "Lisa," a young music student. Brought to trial, she pleads guilty and declines to give her reasons until the court room has been cleared. Then she tells judge and jury that her victim betrayed her years ago, causing her husband, now dead, to divorce her, and that "Lisa" is, unknown to herself, her daughter. She receives a light sentence and the judge explains this to the public by saying that the murder was committed to prevent the victim's seduction of a young girl, preserving the secret of her relationship to the murderess.

Because the outcome of the story turns on this indicated judicial decision that imminence of seduction is extenuation of murder, and because of incidents and dialogue pertaining to infidelity and betrayal, the picture can hardly be said to constitute suitable entertainment for the very young.

Basil Rathbone plays the betrayer and would-be seducer. Ian Hunter portrays the husband and Jane Bryan the daughter. Donald Crisp is the understanding judge. Telescoping of the time element is accomplished in an effective way and there are incidental musical numbers of better than average quality.

Reviewed at studio preview, Warners' Hollywood theatre, July 15th. London by Night

(MGM)

Melodrama

All the exploitation patterns followed in promotion of previous pictures in the shudder technique are at showmen's disposal in connection with this production. It has three murders, none of them too gory, two seeming abductions, an extortion, a brilliant reporter, an industrious Scotland Yard operative, all sorts of susceptible characters and, beneath it all, an entirely credible explanation which isn't revealed too soon. There are also romantic and comedy elements for those who insist upon them in even this type of entertainment.

Most of the goings on take place as the title suggests, in London and at night. Fog is heavy over the area where a shopkeeper is abducted and a policeman slain by a mysterious figure who hides behind an umbrella and so is known as the umbrella man. A reporter and a Scotland Yard inspector go to work on the case. Another abduction and murder take place. Then the wealthy father of the girl with whom the reporter has fallen in love receives telephoned instructions to transmit money to the umbrella man on penalty of his daughter's life. When the reporter's dog provides a clue to the guilty party it develops that the extortion victim's secretary has been impersonating the supposedly abducted citizens in order to terrorize his intended victim. Cornered, the criminal attempts to use the girl as a shield in making his escape but the reporter kills him and, presumably, marries the girl.

The picture is well produced and a large if not especially notable cast enacts it in a smoothly effective manner. The identity of the criminal is well guarded until the final sequence and the explanation provided is logical.

One Mile from Heaven

(20th Century - Fox)

Drama

Exhibitors who attempt to arouse popular interest in this picture will find themselves facing quite a task. Departing radically from the customary production formula in that it entirely ignores love interest, it caused the preview audience to laugh in several places where the objective sought was presumably to stir the more sentimental emotions. Additionally, the rather delicate nature of the theme is not apt to be received with any great enthusiasm in certain sections of the country. With Bill Robinson's dancing, however, the picture includes one desirable amusement element, even though in some instances patrons may think there is too much of it.

In gist the story has newspaper woman, "Tex Warren," succeeding in proving that negress "Flora Jackson" is not the mother of white child "Sunny." There's sympathy for Fredi Washington, who assumes the character of "Flora," in her devotion to the child. But Rob-

The Great Gambini

(Paramount)

Mystery

A mystery story, outfitted with several new twists to make it different from the usual "who killed whom and why" narratives, makes this murder mystery interesting screen entertainment. To offset the somber side of the tale, there are a slim slice of romance and a more than generous portion of comedy. The fact that the chief character is by profession a mind reader and magician suggests selling possibilities as plentiful as the manifold surprises that drop out of the customary top hat. In style with the current craze of matching wits with the story's sleuth, the picture offers the spectator the challenge and the opportunity of guessing wrongly (or rightly, if smart) the murderer's identity. When enough of the evidence has been produced, an invitation is extended to solve the crime and in a one-minute parade of pertinent clues, the necessary data are presented. From that point on the solution is revealed and the amateur detectives are gratified or disappointed with the final outcome of the plot.

Most impressive of the cast personalities is Akim Tamiroff in the leading role. Mr. Tamiroff gives his assignment a leavening touch of lightness. In a role that could have been made oppressively heavy and dull, the character is projected easily and entertainingly. The romantic angle is carried out by Marian Marsh, who is experienced in the ways of black magic from her Trilby days of yesteryear, and by John Trent, former airman. The comedy lines are recited by William Demarest as a none too bright sleuth and Edward Brophy as his even dumber assistant. Genevieve Tobin plays one of those flighty and talkative matrons and makes one wonder seriously why the murderer overlooked her as his victim.

When the clairvoyant Gambini is asked at a supper club if the impending marriage of Miss Marsh to Danby (Roland Drew), who, according to the picture, is very much of a heel, will take place, the couple are told that the contemplated ceremony will never take place. True to expectations, Danby is found a corpse the next morning and everyone begins to suspect everyone else. Trent has been heard to threaten publicly the murdered person. Miss Marsh is known to have visited him secretly on the night of his demise. Miss Tobin is revealed as one of Danby's blackmail victims and Reginald Denny as her husband dislikes the gentleman on general principles. Included on the list of suspects are the usually suspicious looking butler and even the great Gambini himself. An unwritten journalistic code of ethics prevents this reviewer from revealing the murderer even to the exhibitor himself. He will have to match his wits with his audience.

Three-Mesquiteer Western

Further adventures of the Three Mesquiteers are detailed in this latest installment of their venturesome existence, with equally successful and satisfactory results.

For the showman introducing his clientele to these gentlemen for the first time, this edition will serve as a particularly impressive opening number. The action for the plot's run is smartly contrived and rapidly spun from a generous supply of action material, fist fights, gun play and horse chases. The acting is equal to the story's demands. Comedy is more than evident in the antics of Lullaby as played by Max Terhune, particularly in his humorous exhibitions of "Charlie McCarthy" ventriloquism. Some excellent scenic views have been caught.

Interest, of course, centers upon the Three Mesquiteers, engagingly played by Robert Livingston, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune. Thomas Carr, as Livingston's brother, is unjustly accused of murdering the father of the heroine (Eleanor Stewart). The family homestead is on the point of being auctioned off to a group of scoundrel sheepmen. To the rescue of the accused boy and the beleaguered cattlemen of the district, who are waging a losing battle, come the trio. The forces of law and order are rallied. Corrigan is nominated as sheriff to oppose the politicians' candidate. Election day comes around with a great deal more of gun play than of peaceful ballot casting. The opposition, who have been trying to prevent the honest citizens from voting, are dispersed in a series of exciting consequences.

The Devil Is Driving

(Columbia)

Romantic Melodrama

The movement for safety on the highways, around which this picture is built, is not new as a topic for screen treatment but the theme has not been overworked. Many of the exploitation possibilities inherent in it remain unexplored, and others, while more obvious, have lost none of their value through repetition. Civic efforts to reduce the toll of reckless driving have been receiving headline and billboard attention for more than a year and virtually all channels of publicity have been used to arouse public conscience. With this background the exhibitor is limited only to the extent of his own adroitness in planning campaigns.

A slight but adequate love interest which is the motivating force for the plot movement, reference to corrupt machine politics and Richard Dix in the lead for name value complete a chain of selling angles.

The story, although thin, is sufficient to hold interest by giving life to the exposition of a safety campaign. A young attorney, by suborning witnesses to perjure themselves, wins an acquittal for a politician's son accused of second degree murder in an accident case. The lawyer is elected district attorney but loses the respect of his fiancee, a newspaper woman. One of the contributing factors to a high accident toll in the city is the politicians' practice of "fixing" traffic summonses as vote-getting favors. The newly elected district attorney, responding at last to public pressure, leads a campaign to make the city's streets safe.

The previously acquitted youth, driving while intoxicated, causes another fatal accident and the attorney, bound in duty to prosecute him, gets a conviction only by confessing the perjury he committed in the first trial. He is stripped of office but wins the acclaim of the court, the city and the girl.

The League of Frightened Men

(Columbia)

Murder Mystery

Second of the Nero Wolfe detective pictures—Edward Arnold had the title role in the first, "Meet Nero Wolfe"; Walter Connolly is the star of the second subject—"The League of Frightened Men" accomplishes the first purpose of a mystery film, and that is mystery. From the beginning the amateur sleuths among the customers—and the rollcall of members of the Ancient and Honorable Order of Fan Detectives would reveal interesting totals, though there may have been some resignations—have considerable brain work cut out for them.

Detective roles are not exactly new to Walter Connolly—remember Paramount's "Father Brown, Detective," 1934?—but his characterizations have been in other directions for the most part for some time. He carries his affableness adroitly enough into the new production, along the lines pointed out by the story itself, though its requirements are somewhere below his capabilities as an actor.

There are other familiar names, too. Lionel Stander is the energetic though bungling assistant of the detective, and again there is a role which does not exact a performance of strength such as in "A Star Is Born." Eduardo Ciannelli is the pseudo-villain, Walter Kingsford the actual murderer, Allen Brook and Irene Hervey thread the faint love design into the pattern, and Rafaela Ottiano, with her set makeup, is the suspected wife of the villain who isn't a villain. There are also Kenneth Hunter, Victor Kilian, Nana Bryant, Leonard Mudie and Charles Irwin.

The fact that the story, by Rex Stout, ran serially in The Saturday Evening Post gives the exhibitor a headstart on exploitation.

The story itself runs back in retrospect to college days and a hazing that left a student crippled for life by the unfortunate prank of ten youths, and filled with hatred. When two of the ten are killed and a third disappears, the seven surviving engage Nero Wolfe to find the killer before he can get them. After a series of deductions and eliminations, the detective discloses that a tattered mystery man who has been shadowing the cripple is the one who disappeared, and that the deaths have been caused by one of the seven whose identity the exhibitor would prefer to learn by seeing the picture himself.

High, Wide and Handsome

(Paramount)

Action and Music

The "High, Wide and Handsome" title is maybe a shade symbolic. The production is, by the Hollywood estimate, considered the most pretentious and costly of Paramount's efforts since Adolph Zukor took charge of production. It must have been one of the dramatic items in his mind a few weeks ago when he urged that the big pictures would have to have five-week runs.

What with cast, expenditure and effort, Paramount has tried highly, widely and handsomely—Broadway has heard to the extent of $1,900,000.

With a touch of dramatic abruptness Paramount announced the picture for preview simultaneously Wednesday in New York and Hollywood, with a New York opening scheduled for that evening at the Astor theatre. The New York press got fifteen minutes' notice of a pre-preview mid-day screening, in behalf of critics with early deadliness, as the premiere was to be Wednesday night as a roadshow at the Astor theatre.

This piece, made of action and music, with the accent on the action, is directed by Rouben Mamoulian. There is that about it which suggests that he got the assignment somewhat in sequel to his successful labours on "The Gay Desperado," winning the award of the New York film critics for his resourceful direction, dealing, they seemed to think, with a script that needed it.

"High, Wide and Handsome" is primarily a melodrama of the early difficulties that confronted the oil farmers of western Pennsylvania at the time when the oil industry was just starting. Although musical interludes are subordinated to the dramatic interest, it is in this dual appeal that the picture's strength will be found. Emphasis on the drama contained in the problems that faced a great industry and on the voice of Irene Dunne seem the most effective sales appeals.

A strong cast, including Randolph Scott, Dorothy Lamour, Raymond Walburn, Irving Pichel, Charles Bickford, Elizabeth Patterson and Ben Blue, support the production importantly.

The story opens in the year 1859, just before oil is recognized as a great natural resource. Randolph Scott plays the leader of the oil farmers of western Pennsylvania in their struggle with railroad interests which want to control the wells themselves. Alan Hale, playing the part of a railroad magnate, attempts to force the farmers to sell by raising transportation rates to a prohibitive figure, making it impossible for the farmers to deliver oil to the refineries. The farm leader then conceives a revolutionary idea, transporting oil by pipeline, and it is in the construction of this line that the film mainly concerns itself. In the heat of construction plans, he neglects his wife, played by Irene Dunne, whom he met when the medicine show in which she was an entertainer burned to the ground. She leaves him when he is forced to sell the piece of land on which they planned to build their home in exchange for real estate vital to the completion of the pipe-line. All kinds of difficulties, including sabotage by the railroad, beset construction of the lines. The most effective scene is a fight between the farmers and vigilantes hired by the railroad. The wife brings reinforcements—circus hands, freaks and elephants.

Randolph Scott is effective as the young oil farmer, especially in the unromantic scenes, and Irene Dunne is pleasing in voice and performance. Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein contribute five new songs, the best being the title number and "The Folks Who Live on the Hill," a romantic composition. Oscar Hammerstein also wrote the original and screen play. Ben Blue waits around, looking impatient for a chance to do one of his eccentric dances, and Raymond Walburn, as a medicine man, delivers quips here and there.

Rocky Mountain Grandeur

(MGM)

Excellent Travelogue

For those who feel cabined and confined in these modern and metropolitan days, this excursion into the wide, open western spaces should prove to have a tonic effect. There are beautifully shot and gloriously colored glimpses of expansive mountain scenery, lonely and wild streams, to stir the travel urge in many a heart. Particularly impressive is the fine collection of sunset scenes. The narrative and the musical background compare equally with the subject's high pictorial excellence.—Running time, eight minutes.

The Song of Revolt

(MGM)

Historical

A handsome and expertly produced subject has been devised to show the birth and historical background of France's martial "La Marseillaise." Originally intended by its composer, Rouget de l'Isle, as a military tune to nourish the waning spirits of the army, the song was adopted by the fanatics of the French Revolution as their national anthem. How the author, an aristocrat, was saved from the guillotine when he was recognized as the writer of the revolutionary hymn makes for some strikingly pictorial moments. Mob scenes, mindful of shots from "A Tale of Two Cities," are used effectively to portray the hysterical atmosphere of the turbid times. Leon Ames plays the composer and sings the lyrics with robust and melodious effect.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Oddities

Miniature reproductions of furnished rooms, a kitten with 26 toes, a blind newspaper carrier, an international rock garden, a canary school, oyster trees and the new Census Bureau film record, make up this edition of oddities. The rooms, including Colonial, Jacobean and Venetian, were made in Chicago on a scale of one inch to the foot. The kitten was found in Buffalo; the blind newsboy works in Friars Point, Miss.; the rock garden, with stones from 22 countries and eight volcanoes, is owned by a Tacoma, Wash., resident; the boarding school for canaries is maintained in Atlanta, and the oyster trees are in Everglades, Fla. The oysters cling to mangrove trees and are above water at ebb tide. The remaining topic shows how the voluminous records of the Census Bureau in Washington are being re-recorded on film. Running time, 9 minutes.

Amusing

Using as a motto the saying that "courage is but another word for success," or words to that effect, Joe Cunningham subdues a belligerent wife, overawes the boss and stirs up a nice salary increase in the bargain. The cause of the metamorphosis is Cunningham's mistaken belief that he has won a prize in the Sweepstakes. Buoyed up by such good fortune, the worm turns on the little woman and the tyrant in the front office. The outcome becomes more slyly ironical when it is discovered that all the revolutionary activity has been conducted under the false impression of courage. The entire affair is handled adequately and amusingly. Kathleen Lochart is the shrewish spouse and Robert Middlemass the iron willed executive.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Educational

With Ireland as the setting, the camera traces the production of linen from the time the flax crop is harvested until the Irish linen, "The Cloth of Kings," is shipped to the far corners of the earth. Lowell Thomas does the narration and explains that the flax is harvested, immersed in water and spread over the fields to dry in the same manner as hundreds of years ago. Irish lassies are shown working in the mills where the flax is converted into cloth. They draw the warp and create the designs to decorate the finished material. From the factory the cloth is taken into the fields to be bleached by the sun. Pressing, with a huge stone installed more than 100 years ago, completes the story and the cloth is ready for shipment.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Nine Exhibitor Units Talk Over Product Situation

Independent exhibitors' contractual relations with Paramount Pictures came up for discussion this week in the Independent Theatre Owners' Association, New York; Allied States Association, New Jersey; Independent Theatre Owners, Ohio; Northwest Allied Exhibitors' Association, in Minnesota and the Dakotas; Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan; Independent Exhibitors' Association of New England, and unorganized exhibitors of Southern California and Arizona and, again in the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners, of eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey and Delaware, which is sponsoring a "boycott" of all Paramount product during August. The basis of the owners' complaint is that Paramount withheld six completed features for the 1936-37 program, for distribution in 1937-38.

Allied Theatres of Connecticut has addressed a letter to Columbia Pictures protesting against the withdrawal of "The Lost Horizon" from 1936-37, for distribution in the new season.

The Connecticut organization told Columbia that its members "do not contest your legal right in the matter, but our disappointment in your company as a result of your action is keenly felt by our members.

Pursuing the "boycott" "unanimously" voted by its membership, the UMPTO, in Philadelphia, has rigged a truck with "an appeal to the public conscience" to be displayed in front of all local theatres "violating" the organization's date strike against Paramount. The boycott is aimed at features, short subjects and newsreel of Paramount alike.

The UMPTO now is sending daily "strike bulletins" to exhibitors in the territory. Declaring that there will be "No settlement of the strike without the approval of all exhibitors at a mass meeting," George P. Aarons, UMPTO secretary, charged that "Paramount is now in a desperate effort to break the united front by offering tempting deals to certain theatre men."

"Over 300 exhibitors in the Philadelphia zone (eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey and Delaware), including every independent circuit," were said by Mr. Aarons to "have pledged not to buy or play Paramount features till the terms are revised."

Last Thursday, the UMPTO members were notified to "instruct Horlacher and New Jersey (film delivery) messenger not to pick up any Paramount pictures for your theatre, beginning August 1st."

The UMPTO has approved copy for newspaper advertisements, which will be inserted July 31st in Philadelphia papers. Some 300 trailers will be shown.

Warner Brothers, largest circuit in the Philadelphia territory, decided last week not to join in the protest.

The Ohio Independent Theatre Owners' Association, in Columbus, officially joined the "strike" this week, with the issuance of a "Paramount Strike Bulletin" from headquarters. The notice to Ohio owners asserted: "Four thousand theatres can make or break Paramount in so far as their profits are concerned. Don't buy Paramount now."

Allied States Association of New Jersey met last Thursday at Asbury Park to discuss Paramount's new and old pictures due on contracts. It was decided to send notices on the situation to all members, but action was deferred on the picketing of Paramount's New York exchange.

The Independent Theatre Owners' Association, in New York, brought up the same subject at its weekly meeting at the Hotel Astor, in New York, where Harry Brandt, president, told members that exhibitors can expect "a fair deal" from Paramount. At the same time, however, the ITOA's official bulletin, "The Independent," called on Neil Agnew, Paramount sales manager, to give the independents a first-run contract.

W. A. Steffes, head of Northwest Allied Exhibitors' Association, in Minneapolis, placed his organization in the move with the statement that "it is with the utmost reluctance that I must condone and carry through to a satisfactory termination the unanimous mandate of Northwest Allied that 'all independent exhibitors "pull" playdates, banner theatres and urge the public to stay away from theatres showing Paramount pictures starting August 1st."

Mr. Steffes is said to have lined up 200 houses in his territory in the campaign.

New England's Independent Exhibitors will meet in Boston Tuesday to discuss their proposed "strike" and the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan will meet August 6th in Milwaukee to consider use of pickets and radio and newspaper advertising. In Los Angeles, exhibitors representing 112 Southern California and Arizona theatres voted Monday to "strike" and marched enmasse to Paramount exchange to cancel playdates.

MGM Asks Film Critics' Aid in Reader Poll on Short Subjects

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with the avowed purpose of seeking public guidance for future production of short subjects, has launched a nationwide poll which calls for the cooperation of motion picture critics.

Requests that critics publish five questions and stimulate interest in them by offering theatre passes to the persons answering in the most interesting and constructive manner, have been forwarded to newspapers throughout the country.

The questions are:

1. What is the best short subject you ever saw?
2. What series of shorts have you enjoyed most?
3. Would you care to see good dramatic shorts, comparable to the one-act play or the O. Henry type of short story? If not, why?
4. Can you suggest any new departure in shorts, or any improvement on those now being shown, which would build audience interest in this part of the screen program?
5. Do you ever inquire about what shorts are being shown before attending a theatre? If so, how do you find out?

In its announcement of the canvass, the company stated:

"The purpose of the poll is to guide the film company in future production activities, to concentrate on the type of material which is designated by popular vote, and to avoid any shorts which apparently do not interest audiences nationally."

MGM also pointed out that: "From the standpoint of production technique, most short subjects now measure up to full length features in direction, music settings and photography. Some of the best acting talent discovered in recent years has been introduced through the medium of short features."

MGM, 20th-Fox, GB Leaders Talk

Efforts to settle existing differences between MGM, Twentieth Century-Fox and Gaumont British will be made at conferences of executives of the companies, to be held in England next month.

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of Twentieth Century-Fox, sailed last week to attend the discussions, accompanied by Louis B. Mayer, Howard Strickling, Benny Thau, and Louis Wertheimer. Before attending the conference, Mr. Schenck and Mr. Mayer are going on a three weeks vacation at Carlsbad, where they will be joined by David Bernstein, J. Robert Rubin and I. Frey.

Mr. Strickling will remain in England to organize a publicity department for MGM's new British production. He is expected to return by September 1st, together with Mr. Mayer and Mr. Thau, the others later.

Columbia Subsidiary To Produce Six

Central Films, Ltd., Columbia subsidiary which produces pictures for the British quota, will complete six features at its studios in Victoria by December. Stories and casts are yet to be chosen.

MGM Continues Study Of Accessories Sales

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer still is studying an accessory sales rental system proposed at the company's convention in May but no decision has been made, according to William F. Rodgers, general sales manager.

These will be a cross between the ever-popular style of musical comedies and operettas of the type of MAYTIME, ROSE MARIE and NAUGHTY MARIETTA. The kind of music used will be similar to SWEETHEARTS from "Maytime", THE BLUE DANUBE, THE INDIAN LOVE CALL from "Rose Marie", and such other popular music in this classification that is always sure-fire with the public. Showmen will be very enthusiastic about this series, as it will be far superior from standpoint of music and entertainment to anything ever previously done in short musicals.

ONE-REEL PRODUCTIONS

15 PETE SMITH SPECIALTIES

A name that goes on the marquee with the Biggest Stars! Proven entertainment! Pete Smith's new series will present the same diversified type of material as the Pete Smith Specialties being released on the current season's program. And you know how your folks love 'em.

10 MINIATURES

This series will consist of unusual human interest stories, some with Carey Wilson. One of his subjects will be on psychology, and other material he will use will be similar to his subject WHAT DO YOU THINK?, which was based on mental telepathy.

Arrangements are under way, although not completed, to make 3 or 4 subjects with international personalities such as A DAY WITH MUSSOLINI, GENERAL CHANG OF CHINA, the material to consist of the outstanding things these international personalities do during one of their usual busy days.

Included in this series will be a fashion short with Adrian; 2 or 3 novel miniature musicals; together with many other unique ideas that are being developed.

10 HISTORICAL MYSTERIES

The first one will be titled WAS LINCOLN'S ASSASSIN EVER CAUGHT? According to the records, John Wilkes Booth escaped and lived in South America for a number of years, returning to Enid, Oklahoma in 1903. Upon his deathbed he called for a priest and asked for absolution, telling the priest that he was John Wilkes Booth, Lincoln's assassin. He submitted credentials to the sheriff which indicated that he was John Wilkes Booth. To corroborate his story, the sheriff was referred to Joseph Hazelton, a former program boy at the Ford Theatre, then working in motion pictures in Hollywood. The sheriff wired Hazelton and asked him if he could come to Enid to identify Booth. As Hazelton was unable to make the trip, he asked the sheriff to wire a description of the man's right thumb, which was mangled. Upon receipt of this information, Hazelton wired the sheriff that the man was John Wilkes Booth.

Charles Whittaker, one of M-G-M's noted feature writers, is preparing striking stories of this nature and at the end of each will be—WHAT DO YOU THINK?

8 ROBERT BENCHLEY PICTURES

Great news for the millions of Robert Benchley fans who howled at "How to Sleep" and others of his laugh films. M-G-M has 8 really outstanding ideas for the new Benchley stories, the first of which will be HOW TO RAISE A BABY. Robert Benchley, by virtue of his film fame and literary reputation, is definitely established as box office.

12 "OUR GANG" COMEDIES

(Produced by Hal Roach Studios)

They won the Academy Award for the Best One-Reeler last year! And Hail! Hail! The Gang's all back for 1937-38. Your public's waiting for Spanky McFarland, Carl "Alfalfa" Switzer, William "Buckwheat" Thomas, Darla Hood, Eugene Porky Lee, Baby Patsy May and the others. Hal Roach has a raft of sparkling new ideas for them.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNNIGHAM

Edwin C. Hill, portraying "The Human Side of the News," bemoans the return of cattle rustlers in the west because they are of a new type—the city-gangster, as against the old hard-boiled, owl-hoot rider who was the picturesque villain of the day, and has been so glorified in the movies. Mr. Hill infers that the motion pictures of the old-school cattle rustler now are out of date.

Rustlers no longer come suddenly out of the black night, yelling wildly and cracking 45's, stampeding a hundred head o' cattle. The up-to-date rustler now works in fast motor trucks. He's out for calves, and when he finds an unguarded herd of beef he rounds them up and drives them into his trucks. He's away at 60 miles an hour, over good automobile roads. The modern rustler is a slick fellow, with forged bills of sale, fast automobiles and a ready market. And they laugh off the fine or short jail sentences when caught, whereas motion pictures still show the old rope over a branch of a cottonwood tree and something that had been a rustler turning gently in the breeze.

Comes the revolution:

"A survey of Hollywood's feminine players reveals that 85 per cent of the greatest actors not only admit that red is one of their favorite colors, but declare that they are inspired by it."—Gail Patrick, in Film Daily.

The Chamber of Commerce in the little Iowa town of Estherville decided that something should be done about plowing under the dandelion plants over-running the city. So, in his typical big-hearted manner, H. N. Schrodt announced he would give free admission to his Grand theatre on Saturday mornings to every child bringing in two bushels of dandelions. On the first morning, he took in at the boxoffice some 1,025 bushels, for 512½ free admissions.

Robert Donat, observing on progress in motion pictures: "Then, suddenly, someone thought of Thought and everyone was stumped. Nobody had thought of thinking in those days. They had simply Gone After Things in a Big Way. What in hell did thought look like to them?"

Sniff! Sniff! Department:

Paramount publicity from Hollywood, sent via the New York office, says Theodore Reed, directing Bing Crosby and Mary Carlisle in "Trouble or Nothing," tried odors to stimulate players—and it worked.

Mint at 4 P. M. had a stimulating effect, Paramount says, while Bing and Miss Carlisle made love better with heliotrope floating around, Martha Raye was funnier with geranium, and Andy Devine liked violet.

Unconfirmed reports indicate that the stage carpenters, electricians and set-movers perk up every hour on the hour with a whiff of rye blossom.

Item in the New York Daily Mirror:

> "Press agents on the Twentieth Century-Fox lot are sprouting gray hairs trying to publicize Don Ameche. Mr. Ameche is a very swell, happily married gentleman who just doesn't do the things usually expected of movie stars. He doesn't eat crackers in bed nor chew tobacco during love scenes. The press agents are very discouraged."

Harry Brand must be slipping—why doesn't he try cookies.

Sidney Honeywell Rechetnik, Warner home office press agent and the inspiration for many a paragraph on this page—Sid is Broadway's champion herring giver-away—takes to the American airlanes for a looksee at Busby Berkeley's beauties at his company's Hollywood studio.

A prize consisting of cellophane fish-hooks and an all-rubber fishing pole goes to the RKO press agent in Hollywood who sent out this best fish-story of the week:

> "The way the usually snobbish big game fish in Mexican waters have been swarming around Fred Astaire during his present vacation at Ensenada, they could just as well be autograph-seekers who have witnessed his latest picture (title deleted).
> "There is no law of limit at Ensenada, but Mr. Astaire has succeeded in snaring so many piscatorial prizes in the past week, over and above his needs for taking photographs for visual proof, that he has been distributing them among the poorer fishermen of the neighborhood who have not the benefit of a $6,000-a-week personality to exert upon the fish."

RKO Radio Pictures now is doing a feature motion picture on the life of Jim Fisk, who reached the heights of his money-making and sensation-creating career in the decade from 1860 to 1870, in that grandiloquent period of American history when vast fortunes were being made and lost in the wake of the Civil War.

Radio has engaged Edward Arnold to bring Jim Fisk to the screen, but minus the famous and flourishing handlebar mustache which was a distinctive feature of that spectacular financier's appearance. "It's a case of romantic license," RKO explains. "Whiskers are not so good for romantic appeal."

Sigmund Lubin, years ago, had the John Ince version of "The Battle of Shiloh" re-shot to eliminate General Grant's whiskers.

Ray Lewis, editor of the Canadian Moving picture Digest, and her husband (Joshua Smith, Canadian portrait painter), were presented to King George VI at Buckingham, at a Garden Party the other week.

A gentleman-in-waiting to the King noticed the miniature of a boy which Ray Lewis was wearing, commented on it and asked who the artist was. When Ray said the picture was that of her son and the painter was her husband, she was asked to present her husband, and in turn both were taken to the King.

Ray said the King was most affable, better looking than Edward VIII and just as democratic. He took time and was leisurely in conversing with them.

Ray Lewis also talked with Earl and Lady Stanley Baldwin, and asked the Earl if he was going to make the Empire Tour which had been reported in the newspapers. "Empire Tour?" replied Baldwin, "Why I haven't seen England in 10 years."

The property man "bailed out" when he realized that the airship was too crowded for three passengers and camera equipment.

When people write dumb letters to business concerns, Mrs. Juliet Lowell collects them and puts them in books, on the radio and into short subjects for RKO—and the public roars at "Dumb Belle Letters" from dumb people. Prize of her collection was received only the other day, as follows:

And then there was the lady, Mrs. Ada B., in New York, who wrote to Corn (food) Products and complained, "Although I have taken six cans of your corn syrup, my feet are no better than they were when I started."

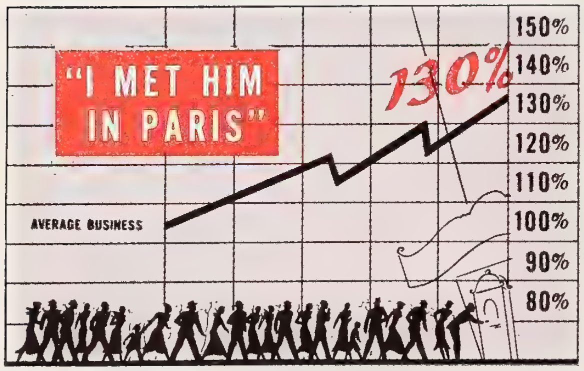
PROFITABLE PARADOX: Theatre records of past month and longer reveal astonishing situation: the higher the temperature, the higher went grosses in houses playing Paramount pictures. Explanation lies in fact that Paramount's summer releases were planned long in advance to capture fancy and shekels of populace. First of hot-weather bell-ringers was "I Met Him in Paris," followed by "Mountain Music," with "Easy Living" now current. (See graphs.) Next picture designed to maintain precedent for higher grosses regardless of weather is Paramount's "Exclusive"— sensational new-theme newspaper melodrama released July 30th—with Fred MacMurray, Frances Farmer and Charlie Ruggles in stellar roles. (See photos.)



Colbert Captivates! Audiences went in big way for little lady in "I Met Him in Paris." Receipts averaged 130 per cent in 30 key engagements.

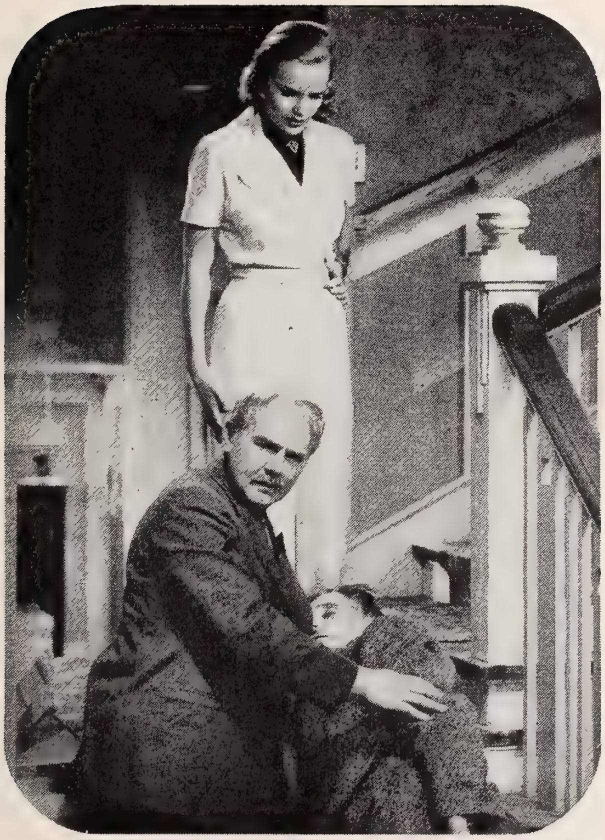
Ray! for Raye and Burns! "Mountain Music" hit Old Man Summer Slump right in solar plexus. Turned in average gross of 150 per cent in 18 key runs.

It's the Life! "Easy Living," funniest comedy of year, smashed New York Paramount house record in hottest weather in decades. First week's gross 165 per cent above average.

Can't Always Tell: Frances Farmer plays reporter in Paramount's "Exclusive"—dynamite newspaper story. Looking at placid photo you couldn't be expected to know that around Miss Farmer revolves some of most startling action ever brought to life on screen.

New Ruggles: Charlie Ruggles, famed comedian, proves in "Exclusive" he's also dramatic actor of no mean ability. It's a rare combination of talents that can make audiences cry as well as laugh.

Revolt in Favor of Decency! What a scene! Thousands of townspeople take matters into their own hands when they march on and destroy gangster-controlled newspaper plant. As thrilling and rousing an episode as ever was written into a script.



Grim! You have to see this sequence live for you on the screen to realize the harm inherent in so-called "yellow journalism." One of the tense moments in a picture that presents one tense climax after another.

Films Wield Strong Influence On Buying, Advertisers Told

Radio and motion pictures, and particularly color films, are wielding a tremendous influence upon the tastes and habits of the American people, Joseph C. Gries, Manz Corporation, Chicago, told 75 members of the Kansas City Advertising Club last Monday.

Discussing specifically the "Influence of Motion Pictures on Selling," Mr. Gries said that of the two forms of entertainment, the motion picture wielded the most influence. People buy it—and get "tremendous value" for their money. He pointed out that movies are not only tremendously popular, which in itself would make them one of the strongest of modern influences, but that the producers spend a great deal of time and care in making them authentic. He cited the instance of the pulleys on the halyards in "Captain Blood." In pulleys as we know them today the rope goes around, in the time of Captain Blood they went through. This attention to detail combined with their popularity gives to movies a very important educational force.

Women today are dressing better because of fashions promulgated by movie stars; their homes are decorated with more taste. After "It Happened One Night" had been out for a while, international bus lines couldn't handle the traffic; everyone was looking for romance on a long bus ride.

"Why do you think the United States is so willing to cooperate in filming airplane stories, navy pictures, army dramas?" Mr. Gries asked. "Because after such a picture is shown they get so many recruits for that particular service they can hardly handle them."

All this is true of black and white movies, too, but the influence is multiplied a thousand times by color, Mr. Gries asserted. Clark Gable introduced a turtle neck sweater vogue when he wore one in a picture. If it had been a yellow turtle neck, thinks Mr. Gries, "we'd all look like a bunch of galloping omelettes."

Advertisers are going to have to study color in order to advertise intelligently, and Mr. Gries advised every advertising man to see every color picture twice; once for the drama, the second time to study what the picture is certain to create in the way of public demand for styles, things, etc., and for the way in which they are going to be appealed to.

Grand National Reelects Alperson and All Officers

Grand National officers were re-elected at a meeting of the board of directors held Wednesday in the home office, New York. Edward L. Alperson continues as president, with Edward J. Peskay as vice president in charge of distribution; Jack Barnstyn, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution; T. F. Murphy, secretary-treasurer; W. J. Neary, assistant secretary-assistant treasurer; Philip N. Krasne, assistant secretary-assistant treasurer, and Ann Rosenthal, assistant secretary.

A. Pam Blumenthal, whose employment contract was approved at the stockholders' meeting held on Tuesday at Wilmington, will become a vice-president as of August 1, 1937. At this meeting he was also elected to the board of directors, which now consists of Edward L. Alperson, Edward J. Peskay, T. F. Murphy, K. W. Todd and A. Pam Blumenthal succeeding Donald Stralem.

Mr. Alperson, who arrived in New York on Monday for the meetings, will return to Hollywood in three weeks when the company's first Anna Sten production starts.

Board Votes to Disband

The Chicago Film Board of Trade on Wednesday decided to disband unless the home offices of the large distributors want it to continue. Three companies were reported to have expressed a desire that the board carry on.

U. S. Suits Charge Ticket Tax Evasion

In a drive to stop leaks which are said to cost the government $1,000,000 in amusement tax losses annually, actions charging the sale of theatre tickets without the required indorsements for tax purposes were filed against nine ticket agencies, four owners and seven employees in U. S. district court Wednesday.

Defendants named were the Supreme Theatre Ticket Service, Inc.; Harry Shack, trading as the Rialto Theatre Ticket Service; Leo Newman's Theatre Ticket Office, Inc.; Michael Atlas and Walter Friedman, trading as the Acme Theatre Ticket Office; Ruth Alexander, trading as Alexander's Theatre Ticket Office; Jacob's Ticket Office, Inc.; Beckhardt's Theatre Ticket Office, Inc.; The Park Theatre Service, Inc., and the Mackey Theatre Ticket Service, Inc. Also named were Robert Baumgarten, of the Supreme; Thomas Burke, of the Rialto; Philip Guryan, of Newman's; Jesse Berlly, of Alexander's; Wilfred Betts, of Jacobs; Arthur K. Lemmon, of the Park Service, and John Dunleavy, of Mackey.

H. J. Yates, president of Consolidated Film Company, and two other Republic executives, J. J. Milstein and Edward Schnitzer are in Toronto for the convention of Empire Films Friday and Saturday.

Two New Moves On Trust Charges

Large distributors have been named defendants in a $225,000 trust suit filed in federal court in the southern district, New York, by Orange County Theatres, Inc., under the Sherman and Clayton Acts.

Elsewhere, distributors were questioning the legal standing of another trust suit, that of A. B. Momand, Oklahoma exhibitor, who seeks $3,000,000 in damages.

Named in the Orange County action were Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount, Universal, RKO and United Artists, and George Walsh and Netco Theatres, both operating theatres in and around Newburgh, N. Y. The defendants were accused of conspiracy to form a theatre "pooling" and thus deprive the plaintiff of product for its Academy theatre in Newburgh.

Eugene Levy, also named a defendant, was charged with linking his Ritz and Park theatres in Newburgh with the Walsh-Netoco Paramount circuit subsidiary, and together with operating in conspiracy with the defendant distributors.

In Boston federal court, Columbia, RKO, Vitagraph (Warner Brothers), Universal and United Artists, entered identical answers to the $3,000,000 anti-trust suit brought some time ago by A. B. Momand of Oklahoma stipulating in the answers that "the causes of action alleged in the plaintiff's declaration did not accrue within the time permitted" by the law on limitations in Oklahoma, Massachusetts or within United States jurisdiction. George S. Ryan, who took charge of the plaintiff's action two years ago, is acting for him now in Boston.

Merian Cooper Signs As MGM Producer

Merian C. Cooper has been signed as producer at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Entering motion pictures after the World War as partner of Ernest B. Schoedsack, Mr. Cooper co-sponsored the expeditions which were responsible for "Grass" and "Chang," the former made in Arabia, and "Chang" in Indo-China.

After making another production with Mr. Schoedsack, "The Four Feathers," Mr. Cooper became a producer at RKO, and was placed in charge of all this company's productions on the Coast. In the fall of 1935 he formed Pioneer Pictures to popularize color films. The following year he became vice-president of Selznick International Pictures.

Seeks Burlesque License After Magistrate's Ruling

On the strength of the dismissal by Magistrate Anna M. Kross of the charge of presenting an indecent performance brought against Edward Goodman, manager of Minsky's Republic Theatre, New York, Joseph Weinstock, owner of the theatre, said that he would ask Commissioner of Licenses Moss for a license "without any strings." The theatre was closed in May, together with other burlesque houses, and was reopened as a "purified" vaudeville theatre.

REDBOOK'S PICTURE OF THE MONTH

H. N. SWANSON

MAYBE it's different with you. Maybe you get such a big boot out of swing parlors dispensing scat tunes, that you have no time for any tempo slower than a riveting-machine. I dunno if I'm getting to be the detached type, just a little old man in my late thirties. Anyway, I'm here to tell you I'm fed to the molars with so much current fuss over hot orchestras, over ride-men who get off some swell licks with their push-pipes and grunt-irons when they really get in the groove. Yep, as for me and for my house, a jam session is no longer something to search out—it's something to run from.

Perhaps Paramount thought a large portion of the picture-going public felt the same way about it, when they signed Jerome Kern to write some sweet singing music, and Oscar Hammerstein to match it with lyrics that would disgust any whacky trumpeter or any lad with a snaky clarinet. "High, Wide and Handsome" was designed by its producer, Arthur Hornblow, Jr., to be another "Show Boat." I believe it has already been branded as a colossal musical by some nameless impartial press-agent—which is just so much Hollywood mumbo-jumbo. While it fails to achieve the dramatic strength of that hardy perennial, and while its score is not as heady with romance as the music this box-office team delivered for "Show Boat," at least it emerges as a nostalgic and engrossing chapter of American achievement. It cost a lot of money, and it will make an awful lot. Let's leave it at that.

The reason this show has gayety and verve is largely due to Irene Dunne and Randolph Scott, who also played the romantic leads in "Roberta." Miss Dunne and Dorothy ("Moonlight and Shadows") Lamour put over a series of songs which are marked by thoughtful lyrics and melodic simplicity: "Can I Forget You?" "The Folks Who Live on the Hill," "High, Wide and Handsome," "Allegheny Al" and "The Things I Want." These songs do not impede the action; rather they advance it. Only once before recently have we noted such a clever handling of songs: we mean the way those Gordon and Revel tunes advanced the story in "Wake Up and Live."

The period of this opus is western Pennsylvania in 1859, the time when the railroads were attempting to wrest control of the oil-fields from the independent farmers by boosting to prohibitive levels their freight-rates on petroleum. To combat this, the farmers began to lay a pipe-line from the oil-fields to the refinery. Gangs hired by railroad officials, as well as trucking teamsters losing revenue, attacked them. They even used locomotives to rip the pipe out of the earth. How the line eventually went thtough is the basis for this story.

REDBOOK'S PICTURE OF THE MONTH

by H. N. SWANSON

I CAN'T recall any year which has given us more movies about ships, and men who go down to the sea in them, than the past twelve months. Most of them have been just so many more miles of celluloid, largely because of a little whimsy on the part of the producers. (They arefully provided for all the other ingredients, but just be- ore they slipped 'er into the oven, they forgot to put in the lot!) I'm safe in saying that this year will be remembered r at least three excellent sea pictures, and one of them is st bound to be Paramount's "Souls at Sea."

The public may be getting near the saturation point on s kind of a show. The public's lips may be fairly crack- open from the salt water they've been exposed to so uently of late. I really wouldn't know about that. Here is a really fine production, with strong and believable human values; but if they think they've been pitching and tossing on the briny deep long enough, there may be some trouble in catching and holding their interest again with this effort.

To begin with, the charge will never be hurled at director Henry Hathaway or writer Grover Jones that their story was found in an empty head floating off Catalina Island. This team, which has functioned so smoothly together in the past, shows great deftness again in handling the story. It has been many months since this department picked their "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" as the Best Picture of the Month. It broke records all over the place for Walter Wanger, and was one of the outstanding box-office pictures of its year. In "Souls at Sea" the bosses of this successful Hollywood producing team have been more liberal with the financial budget; a longer shooting schedule was provided, and a heavier cast was assembled to underwrite its draw. And it'll pay off! You heard me.

The story has its roots in historical fact. In a Philadelphia newspaper during 1842 appeared an account of the trial of one Alexander William Holmes for manslaughter on the high seas. Witnesses in this case were the survivors of a shipwreck of the packet William Brown, which rammed an iceberg off the coast of Newfoundland and began sinking rapidly. Holmes was a member of the crew, crowded into one of the lifeboats, who took charge when it appeared that the survivors would capsize the small craft. He formed a little jury of himself, another sailor and a negro cook, and quietly but quickly decided who should be thrown into the sea. Several were sacrificed, but their frail boat survived the storm until a timely rescue the next day. When Holmes reached America, he was arrested and convicted, and served a short prison term.

That provocative theme is the premise of "Souls at Sea." In other words, does a sea captain have the right to play God with the lives of his crew, in an emergency?

GARY COOPER, as long and lean and hungry-looking as ever, is the Yankee skipper on trial for manslaughter under conditions paralleling the true case above. The picture opens with his trial, showing a verdict of guilty being read, which is interrupted at that point by a Government man who explains that Cooper was in the service of the Crown when he attempted to help stamp out the slave-trade. Then the film goes back to show how it all happened, step by step.

"Huh!" you snort. "Where does the gi

BRITISH QUOTA BASED ON RESULTS GAINS GROUND AS FINAL SOLUTION

Independents Reported Favorable to Quota Based Upon Amount of Booking of Foreign Product in England

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

The Quota controversy, receding somewhat into the background since delivery to the Board of Trade of the industry organizations' reactions to the Government's draft proposals of legislation, still gives rise to a certain amount of not always too well informed rumor.

One of the stories that went 'round Wardour Street this week was that the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association had made approaches to the Kinematograph Renters Society, in the hope that yet another statement might be made to the Board of Trade, on the basis of an exhibitor-distributor agreement.

No confirmation of this report could be obtained in official quarters; the CEA view appeared to be that there was a fundamental clash in principle, and that exhibitors were unlikely to abandon advocacy of the Quality Clause immediately after reiterating it in an official statement to the Government.

Would Base Quota on Bookings

More probable was a story that the Independent Producers and Distributors would make common ground with the large distributors on a plan to compute Quota in relation to the amount of booking of foreign product in England. Substantially, the Independents' own proposals to the Board of Trade, already reported, are on this basis and are in harmony both with the views expressed by J. C. Graham, of Paramount, before the Moyne Committee and with the official policy of the KRS, the keynote of which is that liberty should be left to the distributor to make as few or as many films as he pleases, so long as he expends on one or two big films as much as he would have to spend, under a minimum cost clause, on a number.

Whether the Quota is on a footage basis, with the liberty to cancel footage by increasing individual costs, or it is stated as a straight ratio between receipts from foreign films and money spent in British production, is really of minor importance.

The important feature of this development is that it indicates a possible united front of all distributors, large and small, in opposition to a rigid footage quota, and over against the producers of the Film Group and exhibitors of the CEA, neither of whom are unanimous on the point, inasmuch as small producers oppose the cost clause and large (circuit) exhibitors dissent from the quality clause.

Outside the trade, interest in the British Film controversy daily is becoming more acute. A prolonged controversy in the correspondence columns of the Times has been conducted by such disputants as Lord Strabolgi, Basil Dean, John Grierson and Ken Nyman, vice-president of the CEA. Publications as august as the Fortnightly Review and as intellectual as the New Statesman have opened their pages to consideration, more or less disinterested, of the problem from a national angle. In the House of Commons a string of questions on the when, why and how of the new Films Act seem the preliminary rumblings of a first class dialectical storm when the measure is at last introduced by the Right Hon. Oliver Stanley.

Finish Fight Planned

It is no secret that the CEA's determination to fight the bill through every stage of its Parliamentary course already has had considerable encouragement in political circles. A large number of M.P.'s voluntarily have interested themselves in the matter and have taken steps, by application to the Board of Trade, to prime themselves with facts and figures. Some, it is said, have already formed, and expressed to Mr. Stanley, views which have caused him to feel certain doubts about the wisdom of legislation on the lines of the Draft prepared by his permanent officials.

A great deal of this talk must be discounted but it does appear a fact that the volume and diversity of the criticism applied to the minimum cost clause is likely to cause a modification of the Government's plans. The most obvious concessions from the Draft plans would appear to be a reduction in the Quota scale and in the minimum cost of £15,000 ($75,000) a picture. Many estimates have been published of the reductions under both heads, but they are little more than guess work. In fact, the exact scale of these figures is of much less importance than the principle which they involve. The real battle on the Films Act will not turn on the difference between a 20 or a 15 per cent quota or a £15,000 or £10,000 minimum cost. It is much more likely to become a fight between those, chiefly on the producing side, who advocate these measures as means of getting bigger and better pictures, and those who think the Draft will operate to put the little folk in all departments out of business, and to deliver British production into "foreign" (meaning American) control.

Symptomatic was a House of Commons question on July 5th, from J. R. Remer, M.P., who asked assurances that the object of the new legislation would be "the development of British film production in Great Britain rather than the development of American film production in Great Britain."

The reply of Capt. Euan Wallace, Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade, deserves to be quoted in full. He said:

"The object of the proposed legislation will be to encourage the production in Great Britain of films which conform to certain statutory requirements designed to secure that they are preponderatingly of British origin."

In a supplementary question, Mr. Remer made the suggestion that "American film producers were at present organizing themselves in such a way that American films would be produced in this country with very little British labor."

"If that is the case," said Capt. Wallace, "they will not conform to the statutory requirements and will not rank for Quota." He promised to consider any particulars Mr. Remer would send him in support of his allegation.

Cue to Line of Debates

It is a general expectation that Mr. Remer's question foreshadows the line of many future debates on the Films Act. The section of opinion which sees American control as an inevitable sequel to the present Government proposals are unlikely to be placated by an assurance that American-controlled productions comply with the letter of the law. Their argument is that, making pictures on an international scale in England, the American major companies will dominate the studio and distribution fields here even more completely than they do at present, and that their grip will be intensified in proportion to the extent to which they are allowed to escape from footage obligations into the super-feature field. This point may well be the major one discussed during Films Act debates. It will be urged very strongly in support of the CEA case for a Quality Clause which will admit large numbers of modest but usable films to quota.

By way of almost humorous comment on the question of the hour, views expressed at a recent meeting of the Edinburgh panel of the CEA deserves to be recorded. The Scottish exhibitors went on record as demanding that provisions for "the special conditions of the Scottish field" should be made in the new Act. The special conditions then were defined, in the words of one speaker, as a state of public opinion which regarded British films as "Poison!" It was declared that a special viewing committee was necessary for Scotland. The same meeting went on record against a cost clause on the grounds that it would prevent the importation of the cheaper American films, including Westerns, which were described as "the bread and butter of many halls."

Odeon Issue Oversubscribed

Opening at 9 A. M. on July 7th, the subscription lists in connection with the share issue of the £6,000,000 Odeon Theatres, ltd., closed at 9.5 A. M. The offer was of £1,800,000 first mortgage (5 per cent) debenture stock at 99 per cent and 180,000 ordinary (5 shillings) shares at par. It is understood that nearly £5,000,000 was offered, as against less than £1,900,000 asked.

Writs in "Insurance" Case

Three writs have been issued in connection with the refusal of certain Lloyds underwriters to settle loss claims arising out of reinsurance policies covering film production. The engagement by underwriters of W. R. Crocker, the famous lawyer who, for insurance interests, exposed the notorious "fire-raising" gang, was announced some time ago. It is known that he has made a searching investigation of "insurance" financing of films production and of assertions that intermediaries made misrepresentations whereby insurance interests lost heavily.

The Ministry of Labor is to ask exhibitors to provide particulars of the wages and hours of labor in their theatres. If the returns suggest that further information or action is desirable, it may consider a formal inquiry.

This information was forthcoming in the House of Commons, in a reply from R. A. Butler, Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry, to a question from Harry Day., M. P., who said that some employees at theatres were asked to work 80 hours a week for wages of 25 shillings (approximately $6.50).

Writs in Finance Inquiry

Three writs, said to concern advances from insurance companies, have been issued as a sequel to the investigation which W. R. Crocker, lawyer, is conducting into British production finance.

Mr. Crocker is engaged by a group of Lloyds underwriters, who declined to pay certain reinsurance claims on the grounds that they had been led to advance the money for specific production plans but that in fact it was used wastefully for general expenditure.

Institute Selects Children's Films

A list of 85 feature pictures deemed suitable for showing at children's matinees has been published by the British Film Institute and is being distributed among exhibitors and licensing authorities. Accompanying the list, which includes 50 western pictures of American origin, is a questionnaire being used by the Institute to gather data on steps already taken to provide programs for children.

The information sought is the name and address of the theatre or theatres, the number of children's performances given, the time and average length of the program, the average number and age range of children attending, price of admission, whether the pictures are specially booked, and whether any active support is received from schools and churches.

Pictures placed on the list, a foreword explains, were viewed by a special committee composed of representatives of social organizations and cinema exhibitors with practical knowledge of children's film programs.

In the list are 12 comedies, 14 "story films" for young children, and nine for older boys and girls. In addition there are 20 short comedies.

Of cartoons, the committee reports some "are definitely unsuitable for children and great care should be exercised to avoid any which might frighten children or provide the content for a nightmare. . . . "

The entire list is qualified by the statement: "The films included in the list are not recommended as ideal films for children but as the best and most suitable films which are available for special children's performances."

Tournament Planned

An annual golf tournament will be held by the Connecticut Motion Picture Theatre Owners at Racebrook Country Club, New Haven, August 3rd. On the committee making arrangements are Irving C. Jacocks, Jr., chairman; Edward G. Levy, secretary; Edward S. Raffile, treasurer, and Harold Eskin, B. E. Hoffman, Arthur Lockwood, Harry F. Shaw, Max Tabackman, Al Pickus and William Vuono. Non-exhibitors on the committee include Abe Mattes, Morris Nunes, Barney Pitkin, I. H. Rogovin, Edward G. Ruff, Samuel Rosen, Ben Simon and Lester Tobias.

Standards Unit Extends Research On Film Stock

A seven-point program, which it is estimated will take three years to complete, has been adopted as a result of an extension of the Bureau of Standards' research project on the preservation of motion picture film.

The project is sponsored by the National Research Council and has been underway for almost two years. Dr. H. M. Lydenberg, director of the New York Public Library, is chairman of a committee in charge of the work.

By Private Contribution

Originally, the program was financed by the Carnegie Corporation of New York but it is now being carried on by private contributions, 50 per cent of which will come from United States government departments interested in the subject, and the remaining 50 per cent from private sources.

Contributions already have been made by Eastman Kodak Company, du Pont Film Manufacturing Corporation, and Agfa-Ansco Corporation.

Topics included in the extension program are, stability of new kinds of film, preservative and protective treatments, conditions of storage, accelerated aging tests, the effects of light on film, expansion and contraction of film, and specifications for emulsions, film bases, photographic papers and processing methods. The study will include both film for record purposes and commercial motion picture film.

"New kinds of film are being introduced and others are contemplated," the council points out in its program. "It is important that authentic information on the stability of these new products be made available."

Studying Protective Coatings

In explanation of the topic on preservative and protective treatments, the program explains there will be a systematic study of the effects of protective coatings and treatments on the stability and scratch resistance of films.

The storage of cellulose acetate film will be studied along with the effects of contaminated atmosphere on film during storage. As its fourth point, the council will continue its investigation of aging tests "with the possibility of predicting the life of film more conveniently and more exactly."

In its study of the effect of light on film, the council will include the effects of both light and heat of projection and reading apparatus on the properties and moisture content of film.

Under the sixth topic—expansion and contraction of film—the ultimate object, the council states, is to obtain a non-shrinking film for use in permanent master positives and negatives.

"The use of film and paper for reproduction of records," the program states, "requires a standardization of materials, processes and recommended practices. There are many applications often involving the copying of old and faded printing and utility suggests many reduction ratios. The emulsion requirements with respect to grain size, contrast, etc., are not well known. The newer color processes open up new problems in documentation."

LIBELED LADY: Jean Harlow, William Powell, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—Played late and during one of our very hot weather spells, but did record summer business. MAD HOLIDAY: Elissa Landi, Edmund Lowe—A very good program picture. Elissa Landi is better as a comedienne than a tragedian.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MAN OF THE PEOPLE: Joseph Calleia, Florence Rice—I thought Joseph Calleia was ready to bring them in on a Sunday. I was wrong.—Ken Norwine, La France Theatre, Swanton, Ohio. General patronage.

MAYTIME: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—I was right. It flopped badly here as, I'll wager, it did in many small towns.—Ken Norwine, La France Theatre, Swanton, Ohio. General patronage.

PERFECT GENTLEMAN, THE: Frank Morgan, Cicely Courtneidge—If possible, do not play this. You'll regret it. If you have to, play it on a double bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ROMEO AND JULIET: Norma Shearer, Leslie Howard—Had this one figured correctly and played it on the 4th of July weekend. I lost nothing because I wouldn't have made anything, no matter what I played. I regret, though, that my help didn't get to see the picture. I let them all have the weekend off.—Ken Norwine, La France Theatre, Swanton, Ohio. General patronage.

SONG OF THE CITY: Dean Jeffries, Margaret Lindsay—Very poor. Running time, 68 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

GIRL FROM SCOTLAND YARD, THE: Karen Morley, Robert Baldwin—About the poorest piece of entertainment ever forced on to us. Paramount knows how bad this is, why did they not advise us to eliminate it. We had people walk out on it and complain.—C. L. Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HOTEL HAYWIRE: Leo Carrillo, Mary Carlisle—One of those crazy pictures that goes over big, if you can get a crowd in to enjoy it. It falls flat with just a few in the seats. It is one of the best comedy offerings that has been released in a long time, and it should be a success anywhere. Business fair for three days, last part of the week.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

I MET HIM IN PARIS: Claudette Colbert, Robert Young, Melvyn Douglas—We couldn't have gotten a better picture for the Fourth. Was well liked by all. A good comedy. Running time, 85 minutes. Played July 4-5.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

JUNGLE PRINCESS: Dorothy Lamour—We were compelled to secure a picture to replace one that was a flop and put this on cold (second run) with average business first night and above average the second. My experience shows me that this is one of the most unusual pictures in a long time. It pleased young and old alike.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

MOUNTAIN MUSIC: Martha Raye, Bob Burns—Good show in any man's town. Box office all the way. Running time, 72 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Republic

BIG SHOW, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Good show. The first Gene Autry picture played in our house and it must have satisfied. First western we played on Sunday, the town being deserted, and yet we have done average business. Thanks, Gene. Running time, seven reels. Played July 4.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

NIGHT WAITRESS: Margot Grahame, Gordon Jones—Another good little action picture with nobody in it to bring them in.—Ken Norwine, La France Theatre, Swanton, Ohio. General patronage.

WE'RE ON THE JURY: Helen Broderick, Victor Moore—One of the best laughs of the season. We were disappointed in the attendance, however.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, New York. Family patronage.

WE'RE ON THE JURY: Helen Broderick, Victor Moore—Broderick and Moore mean nothing here. Silly picture.—Ken Norwine, La France Theatre, Swanton, Ohio. General patronage.

WHEN'S YOUR BIRTHDAY?: Joe E. Brown—This one moved along quite slowly until it was more than half way through and then it began to get quite lively and ended in a riot of laughs and action. Played June 26.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

WHEN'S YOUR BIRTHDAY?: Joe E. Brown, Marian Marsh—Poorly produced. Too much slapstick and less good comedy.—Ken Norwine, La France Theatre, Swanton, Ohio. General patronage.

WOMAN I LOVE, THE: Paul Muni, Miriam Hopkins—Another special they decided on by a raffle, I believe.—Ken Norwine, La France Theatre, Swanton, Ohio. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ANGEL'S HOLIDAY: Jane Withers, Robert Kent—A picture that was enjoyed by all. The kids went wild over it, and the adults enjoyed it about as much. Did better business than on some of Fox's bigger pictures. Running time, 71 minutes. Played July 7-8.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

BANJO ON MY KNEE: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCree—Our patrons praised this presentation and we did normal business.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, New York. Family patronage.

SEVENTH HEAVEN: Simone Simon, James Stewart—Those who came in liked it.—Ken Norwine; La France Theatre, Swanton, Ohio. General patronage.

THANK YOU, JEEVES: Arthur Treacher, Virginia Field—Plenty of comedy and thrills on a pursuit of two autos. The speed of the cars kept them on the edge of the seat. Average program picture. Running time, six reels. Played July 6.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Universal

Warner Brothers

BLAZING SIXES: Dick Foran—Another very fine western that makes customers.—Harland Rankin Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

CALL IT A DAY: Olivia de Havilland, Ian Hunter, —I didn't think a picture with so many stars could be so weak. Comments were poor. No business.—Ken Norwine, La France, Swanton, Ohio. General patronage.

KING AND THE CHORUS GIRL: Fernand Gravet, Joan Blondell—My contract called it a special but I didn't. A good picture but not that good.—Ken Norwine, La France Theatre, Swanton, Ohio. General patronage.

FOXY PUP, THE: Color Rhapsodies—OK, but not up to the standard of this series.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Miscellaneous

BRADDOCK-LOUIS FIGHT PICTURES: We played this in four of our towns, and it's the biggest box office flop in years. The public was not interested in this picture and the result was that we lost money in each town in which we played it. Better pass this one up unless you can rent it at two reel comedy prices. Running time, 22 minutes.—Steve Farrar, Egyptian Theatres, Inc., Harrisburg, Ill. General patronage.

1936 NATIONAL CORN HUSKING CONTEST, THE: Good filler and very interesting. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BLUE VELVET MUSIC: Mark Warnow and Orchestra—A very fine band act.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MY ARTISTICAL TEMPERATURE: Popeye the Sailor—Was good, although we've seen much better Popeyes. Running time, eight minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

SWING, HUTTON, SWING: Ina Ray Hutton and Orchestra—Too much Hutton. A couple of good acts might get it by, but she does it all in this one, naked back and all. Our advise, leave it in the can.— C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

LALAPALOOSA: Headliner Series—Just a comedy to make a poor filler. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

ECHO MOUNTAIN: Fred Lawrence, Rosalind Marquis—A real smart color short of the mountain climbers with musical play to it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Annabella at Denham

Work has been started at Denham on the Robert T. Kane production, "Follow the Sun," with Annabella, again under the direction of Harold Schuster, who made "Wings of the Morning." The cast list is practically complete; it includes Paul Lukas, Romney Brent, Francis Sullivan, William Dewhurst, Stewart Rome, Frederick Leister and Tyrell Davies, with David Niven, here on holiday, signed to play the leading male role opposite Annabella. Phil Tannura, in charge of photography, will have a considerable amount of costume work to do, one of the intentions of the producers being to put over the French girl as a "best dressed star." Her wardrobe already has entailed calls on the resources of leading Parisian houses.

Yorkshire at Studio

The big exterior lot at London Films' studio at Denham, which was used for the spectacular scenes of "Things to Come," "Fire Over England" and "Knight Without Armour," has been transformed into an Agricultural Show for current scenes of the Victor Saville production, "South Riding." Pens of fat cattle and prize sheep, horse lines and judging rings have been imported with, as a background, an old-fashioned English Fair and its merry-go-rounds, shooting galleries and gypsy fortune-tellers. A tracking shot through this set covers very nearly a quarter-mile. The weather has been perfect for scenes showing the farm stock of "Squire Carne" (Ralph Richardson) being auctioned, with Edmund Gwenn also active in the character role of a hard-faced, hard trading local Councillor. Joan Ellum, the Yorkshire school-girl discovery of the picture, is also in the show-ground sequence.

Galsworthy Is Staged

Basil Dean's production of John Galsworthy's "The First and the Last," for London films, is close to completion. The current setting reproduces Soho street backgrounds and occupies the whole of one of the mammoth Denham floors. Its foreground is one of those open air street markets which still lend flavor to the hinterland of Wardour Street, and its realism ought to be beyond question, as stalls and their attendants were brought straight from Soho.

Three cameras were used on the market sequences, under the direction of Jan Stallich. One shot down from forty feet, giving a street background through a window framing. The others tracked Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh through the crowds, for the important scene in which the girl attempts to save her lover, in danger of punishment as a murderer. To be filmed is another typical London sequence showing holiday makers on the river steamer Royal Eagle.

MARGARET LOCKWOOD, taken from the London stage by Gaumont British to play the feminine lead in "Dr. Syn," a new George Arliss film, has been given a new contract.

A "period" scene shot for "The Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel" for London Films is a reproduction of an oldtime cricket match, with players in top-hats using bats curved like hockey sticks.
